Young Ted Mann in the Coast Guard

War changed course of mayor-to-be

By Kevin C. Kennedy, News Editor

(The following article is the second of several that will follow Mayor Theodore D. Mann along the road from his beginnings in Boston to his unprecedented reign as the longest-serving mayor in the city's history.)

NEWTON — There is something about the snapshot of young Ted Mann and his brother Bob, taken during a brief respite from the action off Iwo Jima, that tells you the next mayor of the City of Newton — soon to be the longest-serving mayor in the city's history — was never going back to his uncle's linoleum business in Dorchester.

Well tanned and muscular, his bare bicep resembles a pine tree. His cap is set at a jaunty angle, and there's a broad white gash of a smile beaming out from his sun-darkened features. His ship, a Coast Guard assault transport, had just played a key role in one of the bloodiest battles of the Pacific campaign. With an arm around his brother, smiling heartily at the camera, it is obvious the man likes to be in the midst of the action.

Some men are like that.

As head of this and organizer of that all through his school years, young Ted Mann had shown his colors early on. But it seemed that the South Pacific Theater, in the war-torn strife of the early 1940's, was the ideal scenario in which to put his talents to work.

Free cash now over $6 million

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The city ended the 1985 financial year with the largest amount of surplus and "free" cash in its history, Mayor Theodore D. Mann announced last week.

When fiscal 1985 came to a close on June 30, the city's surplus stood at a record $8.624 million, of which approximately $6 million represents uncommitted "free cash," according to a year-end report prepared by Comptroller Lawrence H. Marino.

The exact proportions of the history-making bounty will not be known until state officials from the Revenue Department review and certify Marino's calculations in a week or two.

Mann said he would present the Executive Department's plan for the free cash sometime during the first two weeks of September. On Sept. 3, he is scheduled to submit to the Board of Aldermen the city's six-year Capital Improvement Plan and this year's Supplemental Capital Budget.

"It would be inappropriate to give knee-jerk answers on matters of great importance to this city's future," said Mann, who added that he would present a "seasoned and logical" spending plan with "appropriate financial reservoirs for unforeseen expenses."

The city's consistent policy has been to spend free cash on infrastructure needs of a health and safety nature, like water/sewer improvements, street and sidewalk repairs, municipal building maintenance and equipment purchases.

Mann said he would not use any part of the record surplus to lower tax rates.

"It is a sound business that examines its future needs and plans for them right now, when times are good... We will not play a game with the future well-being of this city," he said.

Mann will recommend that some of the free cash be reserved in a special account "to create a liability fund for third-party claims" against the city.

Marino said he is "pretty confident" the city will continue to

The kids know better

By Lisa J. Adams
Staff Writer

NEWTON — They splashed in cool pool water, kicked soccer balls around grassy fields, and bounced basketballs on steaming tar courts. Engaged in carefree summertime activities, the young campers from Albemarle Acres hardly seemed concerned with the fact that today is the 40th anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, Japan.

Many of the 9, 10 and 11-year-old children did not even know where Hiroshima and Nagasaki are, never mind that more than 100,000 of the cities' civilians were killed and the cities themselves leveled by the bombs the U.S. dropped there on August 6 and 9, 1945.

But while they lacked specific memories, the members of this generation, now growing up under the shadow of the accelerated arms race, exhibited a stark awareness of the death and destruction a nuclear war could cause.

Because of constant reminders on television, commentaries in the newspapers and discussions among their parents, the children dream dark dreams, and feel real fears about nuclear issues.

"I keep having dreams about it," said Kathleen Boyce, a 10-year-old camper in Newton. "I see lots of planes, then bombs dropping."

"When I think of nuclear war, I think of blood and dead people," added Jenny Levin-Richardson, aged 9. "I hope there is never a war, except when I'm not around to witness it."

In addition to their fear, the adolescents revealed a dogged attempt to find logic in an issue which clearly makes no sense to them. "I don't know why they made this up," said

Mt. Ida plan is defeated

By David Weber, Staff Writer

NEWTON — The aldermanic Land Use Committee Monday night soundly rejected a proposal to build a 250-unit life care center on the campus of Mt. Ida Junior College.

When the discussion of the project among the aldermen made it evident that it did not have the support needed for approval, a representative of the developers asked that he be allowed to withdraw his petition for a change of zone and an increase in density.

The committee voted 7-0 to allow the withdrawal. The act of withdrawing the petition prohibits the developer from resubmitting the petition within two years unless substantial changes are proposed, or unless it receives unanimous approval from the Planning and Development Board.

The College Park Life Care Center, as proposed by the Senior Development Co., would comprise 250 apartment units in a four-story brick building connected to an 82-bed medical facility. The developers have said the complex would allow elderly persons to live independently in a community of peers, and provide on-the-spot medical care at the same time.

Land Use Chairman Cynthia Creem, who lives near Mt. Ida and strongly opposed the project, said, "I don't think there is anyone here that doesn't think the concept of life care is a wonderful thing. But I don't think it should be presented as a purely altruistic plan. This is a business, a big money-making enterprise."

Creem said that if the project were to be completed, "the big winner would be Mount Ida, which would be able to endow their college forever." Ward 8 Alderman William Shaevel, also a resident of the Oak Hill area, said the major problem with the project was its density, which he

Some Frank talk

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — With Congress adjourned for a month, U.S. Rep. Barney Frank will spend the time in his Floral Street home "reading and relaxing."

The topic of his literary pursuits will be "economics," specifically: how government can "fill in the gaps" created by the free enterprise system.

Finding a way to insure that governmental decisions and economic fluctuations "make some people better off and leave the rest alone" is "an important part of the liberal agenda," according to the Fourth District Democrat, who Monday reported on how that same agenda has fared recently in the House.

He arrived late to the press meeting at his West Newton headquarters, saying he had underestimated the time it takes him to get around on the crutches he needs to recuperates from a minor, tennis-related injury.

> 'Somebody in Washington has decided the way to decrease the federal deficit is to beat up on the locals.'

Frank said he is "not thrilled" with the $967.6 billion federal budget passed just before adjournment, but noted that Congress had avoided most of the wholesale cuts advocated by

Local hero, golfing great

By John Moroney, Correspondent

One of golf's most legitimate legacies is preserved in a small museum at the Leo J. Martin Golf Course on the Newton/Weston line.

The legacy began on a damp and dreary day in 1913 at the Country Club in Brookline when 20-year-old Francis deSales Ouimet, in a playoff round, wrested the U.S. Golf Association Men's Open Championship from two seasoned British stars, Harry "The Shotmaker" Vardon and the pipe-smoking Edward "Ted" Ray.

Like most prophets or legacies, Ouimet's initial conquest was met with skepticism. With the desire to play golf at the national level, Ouimet joined Woodland Country Club in Auburndale with $25 he borrowed from his mother.

In his autobiographical book, "A Game of Golf," Ouimet describes his mother's displeasure at lending him money to join Woodland.

"Mother most reluctantly gave in, insisting that I had to pay it back and closing her remarks with the words that she was certain the game of golf would ruin me .... I worked for 10 long weeks to save money enough to pay off my debt to mother. Carfares and lunches made it a mighty task, but I succeeded," Ouimet wrote.

In the decades that have followed his victory at the Country Club, Ouimet has disproved his cautious mother by truly becoming golf's ambassador of goodwill.

According to David W. Muir, executive director of the Francis Ouimet Caddie Scholarship Fund based at the Ouimet Museum and Golf House on the grounds of the Leo J. Martin Golf Course, "Francis," above all else, is best remembered for being a gentleman with a "positive" approach to golf and life.

Even at a young age, Ouimet respected others' feelings. On that faithful day in Brookline, standing next to veteran caddies hired by Vardon and Ray was 10-year-old Eddie Lowery of Newton Lower Falls, Ouimet's caddie. Just before the start of the game, a member of the Country Club offered to carry Ouimet's bag because Lowery looked ridiculous in his sailor hat next to the older, more experienced caddies. Ouimet noticed tears in the young caddie's eyes as he was discussing the matter and politely refused the offer.

The same year Ouimet beat Vardon and Ray, he captured the first of six State Amateur titles. In 1914, he won his first National Amateur crown at Ekwanok, Vt., repeating his victory at the French Amateur the same year. Between 1917 and 1932, Ouimet won nine more championships, including a second National Amateur title in 1931.

His play and leadership in the Walker Cup has been unparalleled. For 27 years, beginning in 1921, Ouimet served as team member, captain and non-playing captain while compiling a 9-5-2 record.

The Scottish were so captivated by Ouimet's manner and play that they made him the first

'Mr. Grace-under-pressure'

Newton's young mayor-to-be realigns his sights

"When I enlisted, my life changed," he says of the first turning point of his life. "It took a different career pattern."

No doubt a lot of World War II vets came back home with radically changed ideas of what they would do with their lives. Young Ted Mann's career plans might well have done a turnabout when a Japanese "kamikaze" pilot, hell-bent on bringing the future mayor, his ship and his shipmates into the hereafter with him, scored a direct hit in the Lingayen Gulf, in the Philippines.

"We patched up and repaired ourselves and went on to Iwo Jima," the mayor says nonchalantly. "We served in every invasion from the Marshall Islands through Iwo Jima. We took the Old China Regiment in. Coming back, we were generally a hospital ship, or we carried out refugees, like we did in Saipan."

The young man who had only recently graduated from Roxbury Memorial High School struggled to continue his education in the midst of the turmoil of the South Pacific. He took correspondence courses, through the USAFI, in government and philosophy. He went to storekeepers school, where he learned to type. He worked himself up to the grade of First Class Petty Officer.

The rich Jewish heritage in which he had been steeped as a youth led him to an unlikely affiliation with the ship's chaplain, a Catholic priest. "I was assistant to the Catholic chaplain, Fr. Dunleavy, whom I greatly admired. We became very good friends," he said. "I sang in the chorus at Christmas time. I also participated in conducting Jewish services. I recall services in Hawaii and New Caledonia."

The son of a boxer, young Ted Mann helped organize and promote boxing events during his tour of duty in the Pacific, and even did some boxing himself. Asked of his success in that field, the mayor commented with a smile, "I think I'm better suited to be a mayor than a boxer. I wasn't middleweight material, but I handled myself OK. I was a better wrestler."

After the service, vested with a new vision of future possibilities, he did not waste much time with the "52/20 Club," the federal program designed to assist unemployed vets. He took the advice of a friend and went into the insurance business with Norman Tobias in 1946. "I didn't want to work on salary," he said of his first real job. "I worked on commission."

Four years later, in 1950, he opened up his own insurance office on State Street, in downtown Boston. Looking back, the mayor now comments, "1950 was a big year in my life."

Indeed. In 1950, he opened his own business, he bought his "first real car" (a Chevy), he married, he bought a home on Marvin Lane, just outside the original boundaries of Oak Hill Park, and he was blessed with his first child.

His marriage got its start with a casual introduction, set up by a friend, to Florence Ober of Brookline, then a salesperson in a Boston millinery firm. "It was a whirlwind courtship," he comments in retrospect. "We got married four months later. We got married in January. Our first child was born in October. We bought a house (for $13,200). While Florence was in the hospital, I moved into the house and set up housekeeping on Marvin Lane. I established roots in Newton in 1950."

Leslie Mann, the mayor's first child, was followed by Rick, then Eric, and, later, the twins, Stacie and Debbie.

Thirty-five years after his blind date with Florence Ober, he would pin a large part of his obvious success on her style and strength: "I feel my wife's involvement, as a non-political person, has been terribly important — most important — to my career. She has given me my head and allowed me to go ahead; and she has undertaken for herself, as her own person with her own set of beliefs and convictions, the responsibility for running the household singlehandedly and taking care of the kids, despite the outside demands on my time.

"She has remained her own person with her own ideas, which sometimes don't exactly agree with mine. She has never felt constrained about expressing her opinions. Nor have we ever imposed restrictions on each other. She may support different candidates; and how she votes and her party enrollment are her own choice.

"From the time I met her — and still now, I feel she is one of the most beautiful and nicest women I have ever met."

With a growing business and a growing family, the mayor's predilection for getting involved remained true-to-form. With some of his household goods still in boxes, he became active in the Oak Hill Park Association. "I was the representative from District 10," he said. "That was where I started, in a sense, my political career."

In 1958, in order to accomodate the growing post-war population on the south side of the city, another ward, Ward 8, was created. Still-young Ted Mann ran for the newly-created ward alderman's seat and won. Since that time, he has never lost an election.

When he won the election against four other candidates, all "returning veterans" of WWII, "It was considered an upset," he said. Next term, he ran for the at-large seat and won it handily. "By the time my term (as alderman) was over," he added, "I had run at-large and received some of the largest votes (19,000) as an at-large candidate in the city. I guess Frank Flaschner, who was on the board with me, and I were within a couple hundred votes of each other for the highest individual vote-getting, for an alderman, in the City of Newton.

"The people who helped me then are still with me now: Buzz and Lucille O'Neil, Lou Kaitz ... this whole gang of people. Many of the original people are still there helping me."

Speaking of the city's Board of Alderman in 1958, a board that included the likes of Warren Sutherland, Adelaide Ball, Ernie Dietz, John Nixon and Bill Glovsky, the mayor said, "It's remarkable looking back over the years at the committed people who served on the Board of Aldermen, what they did and the kind of contributions they made. It was really 'the Golden Day' of political involvement ... 'The Golden Era.'

"It was a different kind of board at that time. There was a sensitivity to what was good for the city, and there was a sense on the whole board that you treated each other with respect. The work was divided so it was done in committee, and these were not occasions to browbeat or chastize."

Asked some of the possible reasons for the difference between the boards, then and now, the mayor said the size of the task at hand demanded a different approach to solving the city's problems. "These were the big growth eras in the city," he said. "This is when the post-war babies came in. This is when the taxes were burgeoning because of the added population. This is a time when we were building up to a school population of 18,000. (It's now down to 10,000.)

"We had problems, but we dealt with each other with a respect, a courtesy, a gentility that flowed mutually. I mean, you had your friends and you had your likes and dislikes; but it was not like some of the things you see today.

"We served without compensation; and there's something to be said for that. It wasn't adversarial all the time."

While he became deeply involved in city politics, still-young Ted Mann was not swallowed up by them. His concern for the oppressed, a legacy of his growing up in Jamaica Plain and Dorchester, continued to manifest itself in good works aimed at blurring the lines of race, creed and color.

In the early '50's, having insured virtually all the businesses in the Dudley area, he was made president of the Roxbury Kiwanis, the first integrated Kiwanis club in the country.

"Many of the community leaders — black leaders — were friends of mine," he said. "We were working on establishing closer bonds of understanding with each other. Even to this day I'm involved in it .... We used to sell peanuts downtown, on Dover Street and Mass Avenue, so we could send inner city kids to camp in the summertime."

Still, for all his offices and responsibilities, he managed to keep his home and family high enough on his list of priorities to be referred to affectionately, in print, as a "haimischer mensch" — a solid man, a good man, a warm, open, nice man. For him, a solid home was a "given," without which all his other accomplishments were meaningless.

With the twins on the way in 1963, he moved to a larger home on Littlefield Road just in time to accomodate them. The boys were starting to play sports. "I got involved," he said. "I went to Little League games. I grew up with them the way most parents would, and I think I found time to spend with all my kids. You always regret you didn't spend more."

But a nice home, a lovely wife and family, a growing business, a brillant local political career — the things that another man might make his ultimate goals — were to be only another step on the path for Ted Mann.

In the late 1960's, he would face some of the most dramatic challenges of his life. His political career would lead him to the Statehouse, where he would form alliances with some of the biggest names on Beacon Hill. A tumor in his brain would pass a dark cloud over his very life.

His faith, his family and his friends would carry him through it all with such style and grace that only his closest associates would know he had passed through the Valley of the Shadow before reemerging into the light.

(Next week, the Newton Graphic will follow Mayor Theodore Mann's career as a State Representative and explore the roots of his political philosophy.)

Jewels & Gems

BY CAROL
THE GOLD LADY

PERIDOT

Peridot is the birthstone of August. This transparent, yellowish-green stone has a characteristic "oily" shine that helps distinguish the genuine article. Peridot, due to its comparative softness, is more suitable for use in pendants and brooches than on rings. In fact, during the Victorian period it graced many pieces of multicolored pendants and brooches. Peridot also was the "topaz" of the ancient world. At that time, it was found only on the Island of St. John in the Red Sea. Today, the gem is mined chiefly in Burma, Australia, Norway, Brazil and the United States. Peridot is the gem variety of olivine and is sometimes known by that name. It may also be called chrysolite.
Birthstones are remembrance pieces. They're the type of jewelry that everyone cherishes, and can be passed down from one family member to the next. Stop in to CAROL "THE GOLD LADY" at 109 Dalby St., Newton to discuss what type of piece would be appropriate for the stone you want and for the person you're giving it to. We're very knowledgeable in the art of creating beautiful, quality jewelry pieces. We take the time to make sure you're totally satisfied. Tues., Wed., Sat. 10-6; Thurs. & Fri. til 9. Tel. 332-5835.

HELPFUL HINT
Peridot is double-refractive. It splits up a ray of light into two rays.

New Japanese 'Super Pill' Insures Rapid Weight-Loss

No Dieting — Eat All You Want, Pill Does All The Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA — An exciting new "all natural" weight-loss "Super" Pill developed by the JMA (Japanese Medical Association) has just been approved for distribution in the United States. Reportedly, it can guarantee that you will lose more than a pound a day without dieting, from the very first day until you reach your ideal weight and figure. News of this "Super Pill" is literally sweeping the country. It's called Amitol and there has never been anything quite like it before.

"Flushes Calories Right Out Of Your Body"

What makes Amitol so thrilling and unique is its reported ability to flush calories right out of your body. Amitol is completely safe, it contains no drugs whatsoever. Its ingredients are derived solely from the Konjac root which grows primarily in Northern Japan.

Why the Konjac root? It has been used in Japan for over 1600 years to produce rapid and natural weight-loss!

Japanese studies verify that Konjac root actually prevents fat producing calories from being absorbed into your system. They say it does this by surrounding much of the fats, proteins and carbohydrates you have eaten with a protective viscous coating which is then gently flushed out of your system. And according to Japanese research this produces absolutely amazing results.

And who can disagree! Amitol (although brand new to this country) is already being called by many people, "the most exciting weight-loss breakthrough of the century." In fact, everywhere there are reports of easy and fast weight-loss from formerly overweight people (in all walks of life) who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Company Offers Extraordinary Guarantee

You now can purchase Amitol direct from the North American distributor, and it comes with an extraordinary guarantee.

If you place your order now and then follow the simple instructions for a period of 30 days, you must be completely satisfied with the dramatic visible results or just return the empty container and Dyna Labs will immediately send back your entire purchase price. This guarantee applies regardless of your age or current weight level. What could be better than that! It's just that simple. If you've tried to lose weight before and failed you no longer have an excuse. Amitol is available, it's easy and it works without dieting!

Best of all, ordering Amitol is simple, fast, and reliable! Simply call Dyna Labs Toll Free: (1-800-441-5454) Ext. 901, and order with your credit card. If you don't have a credit card Dyna Labs will also accept C.O.D. orders right over the phone! All orders are shipped immediately by UPS, which means no delay and no orders lost in the mail!

$19.95—30 day supply, or $35.95—60 day supply. Operators are standing by and will be glad to take your order. You can order 24 hrs. a day, 7 days a week! Please don't wait to call. You really do deserve to be thin!

Police officer will appeal discharge

NEWTON — A city patrolman discharged last week from the force for sleeping on the job and seven other counts of misconduct will appeal his dismissal to the State Civil Service Commission, according to an attorney representing him.

Vincent Dennis, an 11-year veteran of the department, was fired last week by Chief William F. Quinn and Mayor Theodore D. Mann, co-appointing authorities for police officers.

"We'll certainly appeal it to Civil Service," said Austin Joyce, an associate for the Worcester law firm of Reardon & Reardon, which is representing Dennis.

The patrolman has 10 days from when he received written notice of the decision, which was Tuesday, to file an appeal.

Quinn and Mann decided against going along with a recommendation from the hearing officer Richard Duffy, a retired police officer. Duffy made a recommendation of suspension with punishment hours following four hours of testimony at a disciplinary hearing July 16 at City Hall.

In addition to a charge of sleeping on the job during the second half of a tour May 11, Dennis is accused of failing to strike a call box twice during that shift, a department regulation, failing to answer calls from a sergeant, filing a "false and evasive report," and giving false answers during an departmental investigation into the matter.

Cirillo named to marathon committee

NEWTON — Looking for ways to divvy up the Boston Marathon's potential financial pie, Mayor Theodore D. Mann announced the formation of a three-member marathon sub-committee after meeting with Boston Mayor Raymond L. Flynn and officials from the BAA last week.

According to Mann, the sub-committee will discuss community-related issues he brought to Flynn's attention last month.

Mann said the sub-committee will look into ways of reimbursing communities along the race route for expenses incurred. He added funding for community athletic programs will also be discussed.

The city's new Chief Budget Officer Steve Cirillo, who will be on the committee along with Flynn aide Paul Barrett and BAA publicist Guy Morse, said the committee will analyze the financial picture.

"What we are going to do," Cirillo said, "is take a look at how much money the munincipalities along the race route are spending for such things as repairing streets and lawns and adding extra security. We will see how much each municipality is spending, figure out how big a crowd is drawn, and come up with a way to divide the money left over after the prize money is awarded."

Cirillo — a former runner who described working on the committee as "a dream come true" — said the committee will meet "sometime next week," and have the issue wrapped up in "the next two or three weeks."

Morse said a smaller committee will expedite the process.

"Not all the communities involved need to have weekly input," Morse said. "I think more good can come out of having just three people get together."

Mayor touts safety of DPW vehicles

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore D. Mann last week issued a strong endorsement of the Public Works Department's maintenance practices and beautification performance.

Responding to charges of negligence recently lodged by Dan McLaren, the head of the union representing DPW employees, Mann said, "No piece of equipment will ever knowingly be sent on the road that is hazardous to the driver and the public."

McLaren had threatened to pull workers off public works projects unless something is done to correct what he described as the "rapidly deteriorating" safety condition of the city vehicles.

Bowen lead paint cleanup delayed

NEWTON — The Bowen school will not be deleaded this summer as originally planned, because the Building Department failed to receive any bids for the clean-up.

Plans for the clean-up were initiated after a room-by-room inspection of the school earlier this summer revealed lead levels as high as 10 times the safety level mandated by the State Health Department's Childhood Lead Poisoning Prevention Program.

Assistant Superintendent for Operations and Planning Vincent J. Silluzio said because the bids went out so late, he doesn't expect the decontamination process to take place until "Christmas vacation or next summer."

Silluzio said his main concern was the building be cleaned properly.

"There is no immediate danger," Silluzio claimed. "There is more danger to the students if the job isn't done properly, so we want it done right."

According to Purchasing Agent Blair Kanbar, the uniqueness of the city's request combined with stringent new state certification laws to pit the odds against the Building Department from the beginning.

"The deleading request," Kanbar said, "is, I believe, the first of its type in Massachusetts. Because of that, there are no detailed specifications for deleading a school. Also, because a new state law — requiring contractors making bids of more than $5000 be certified — went into effect the same time as our request, fewer contractors were in the position to offer their services."

In addition, Kanbar said rigid insurance regulations — "similar to those faced by asbestos removers" — added to the Building Department's difficulty in finding anyone to delead the school.

Registry: DPW warned about machine

NEWTON — State inspectors have confirmed that supervisors in the Public Works Department were warned about a malfunctioning steamroller before it was involved in a July 19 crash that put a city employee in the hospital.

"It appears that there had been complaints about the engine of the vehicle stalling at different times," Registry of Motor Vehicles Inspector Joseph Hourihan said last week.

The machine could not be stopped when it stalled on a Park Street downslope because its "hydro-dynamic" brake system does not work without engine power, he added.

The report filed by Registry Inspector Joseph Champagne appears to support Local 800 President Dan McLaren's claim that DPW officials had been forewarned about the machine's engine problems.

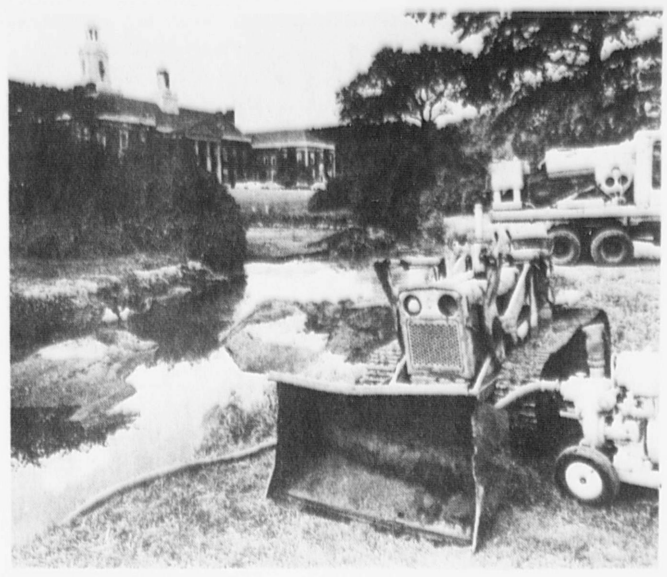

It also could play a key role in a possible lawsuit against the city by James English, who was driving the 20-year-old steamroller when it stalled, lost braking power and crashed into a utility pole.

English, who is facing an extended stay and possible surgery at Newton-Wellesley Hospital, said that he has been advised not to comment on the possibility of suit.

The Registry's investigation also found that the steamroller's parking brake was worn, according to Hourihan. The brake's component parts were removed and analyzed last week by Champagne.

"I'm not in a position to tell you that this thing would have held, but there was obviously wear in it," said Hourihan, who added that the parking brake is not designed to stop a moving vehicle.

He said the Registry will have nothing more to do with case because the steamroller "is not subject to the statutory definition of a motor vehicle."

Our children know the truth

Our cover story this week on the 40th anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima points out that, while the global diplomacy experts fiddle and diddle with statistics, our children see the sheer madness of a nuclear weapons buildup.

Would it be too much to hope that their spontaneous remarks promise a future that will not tolerate the absurdity of including mutual destruction — the destruction of the planet — in our collection of bargaining tools?

Their simple perception of what we consider to be the truth of the matter is extremely refreshing. It gives us pause and reminds us of a line from the scriptures: "What remains hidden from the wise and the prudent shall be revealed to the babe and the suckling."

Weakening of school boards

With the kind of upbeat fanfare customary on such occasions, Gov. Dukakis signed the education bill which gives him one of his few major victories in his second term. It is a far cry from the original Dukakis initiative that some claimed would cost as much as $500 million to implement.

Granted, there will be a strengthening of local school systems. Teacher starting salary levels are being lifted, as they should be. There is a worthy intent to lift educational levels in the less affluent communities with special grants. Despite these and other gains put on home rule option, doubtful aspects ought to be viewed with some concern.

School board controls are being further eroded. Fiscal autonomy has long gone with enactment of Proposition 2½. Collective bargaining affects every part of the educational process, work practices as well as salaries. With the new law, state minimums on compensation will bear heavily on salary schedules.

In the package are pay raise guarantees, along with the higher minimums, as well as special teacher bonuses to be funded over two years by the state. Also, an entirely new concept is being introduced with the creation of local school improvement councils. These can be established through local option.

The main thrust will be to give teacher-parent bodies opportunity to influence board decisions, excepting salaries. Here again, the prerogatives of a school board are being diluted. Councils would have spending initiatives amounting to $13 million annually on a $10 per pupil state allocation.

Cost of the whole bit over two years is estimated at $211 million. That two-year period is the life of the Education Bill, put through the legislative wringer ever since Dukakis administration task force recommendations were presented.

If more state involvement means better schooling throughout the commonwealth, we're all for what is being attempted. At the same time, local community groups interested in home town decision making should be well aware that school committee authority is being severely lessened.

Birth of the building ban

By Thomas J. Paulini

There is a unique opportunity this year for the citizens of this city to have a major impact on the future course and character of Newton. I am specifically speaking about the proposed building moratorium on commercial and industrial development.

For those of us who may not be familiar with it let me give you a brief history. In November, 1984, the Newton Centre Neighborhood Association became extremely concerned about the appointments to the newly formed Economic Development Commission and what their charge or duties would be.

This commission would be established "for the promotion and development of business and industry within the city of Newton." There would be 15 members appointed by the mayor and only one of those had any real neighborhood ties whatsoever. We felt it was imperative that neighborhoods must be extensively represented on this commission. After much controversy we did succeed in getting one additional neighborhood representative appointed. However, we still had a real concern that this administration and the elected officials of this city had charted a course for us, a course in which we had no say whatsoever. They were surging forward to promote this rampant commercial development in our neighborhoods and villages.

Newton's character was changing from the quiet, serene, closely knit neighborhoods contained within its villages to a city that was reaching out with open arms, beckoning developers to come into Newton and exploit our out-dated zoning ordinances, (i.e., Iodice building, Crafts Street, Antaramian building, Four Corners, Zussman property, Langley Road and Union Street and many others).

It's been 35 years since our zoning ordinances have been completely revised. We need to completely update them in order to close the many loopholes that allow irresponsible and detrimental development within our neighborhoods. In the past, developers have been able to build "by-right" or by special permits, permissive use or site plan approval or even a zone change.

The Newton Centre Neighborhood Association has had enough and we decided to propose a 24-month ban on building both commercial and industrial. The increased parking, traffic and safety problems along with the infringements on the neighborhood itself convinced us that such a proposal was not only timely but very necessary.

The NCNA first contacted our local alderman and had a series of meetings with them to determine what their feelings were and how they could help. After checking the legalities of a moratorium and the various neighborhood organizations to see if the support would be there citywide. The response was overwhelming. Over 30 groups were contacted and the support was no less than 100 percent. The impetus was there to push forward.

In January we filed a petition asking the aldermen to pass our proposed 24-month moratorium. This moratorium was needed, we said, to take the pressure off of the board and the various committees that would eventually be assigned this monumental undertaking of trying to revise the zoning. After all how could anyone be expected to do an adequate and constructive job while being subjected to the persistent developmental pressure coming from the ex-city solicitors, former aldermen, and other ex-city officials who are hired by developers? Their sole expertise is exploiting the zoning loopholes to get passed exactly what they propose, regardless of the neighborhood's concern.

In March, the public hearing took place and among other things it clearly defined the source of our support as well as our opposition. Virtually all of the people who spoke in support were concerned neighbors and citizens - people who love Newton and who want to preserve its residential character. The opposition was represented almost completely by the trade unions, (who were misinformed that this moratorium would cause them to lose their jobs. Nobody took the time to explain to these carpenters, plumbers, electrical workers, etc., that there were more than 15 exemptions to this proposal, including single and two-family housing, multiple family dwellings financed by state, local or federal fundings, reuse of municipal buildings, additions to housing, etc. So unfortunately, these hard-working people were mislead ito opposing this amendment.)

Also many of the opponents that were present were not even citizens of Newton. Yet they were trying to influence our elected officials to deny this proposal.

In April the full board rejected the moratorium by a 12 to 9 majority vote. However, some good did come from our initial efforts. The board did approve a proposal by Alderman Richard McGrath to form an ad hoc committee made up of aldermen and citizens to review the zoning ordinances and to make recommendations to the Land Use Committee by October. But again the ultimate decisions will be made by a Land Use Committee that is largely geared to and aligned with development and developers who always find a way to approve such proposals no matter how strong neighborhood opposition is.

Moratorium supporters are hoping a November ballot question will provide them with some relief.

We at least have made people aware that our zoning is not working and that it's time to sit up and notice what people are saying. Why did it take an effort such as this to bring all of these problems to the surface? I'll tell you why - complacency on the part of the administration and our elected officials.

For too long these zoning problems were covered up and a smokescreen was thrown up by the Planning Department, city officials. The various neighborhood groups led by NCNA, Newton Highlands Area Council, the Auburndale Community Association, the Newton Corner Neighborhood Association, and many others including the Newton Neighborhood Network (a group of 35 neighborhood organizations throughout this city) have begun an initiative petition drive to place the moratorium (18 months) question on this November's ballot.

It is a monumental undertaking never before attempted in this city. We are certain, however, that if we could put this question to the citizens of Newton, they would overwhelmingly favor such a moratorium to protect the quality of life and the village concept of Newton. Our compaign for a moratorium has been named ReZoNe (Revised Zoning in Newton). We'll need approximately 7,000 signatures by mid-September. So you are allowed 7-½ months to gather necessary signatures for a measure such as this, but we are trying to accomplish this task in less than two.

Therefore we strongly urge all of the people of Newton to please help us and sign our petition whenever or where ever you may see someone (outside local supermarkets, stores, malls, churches, schools or at meetings, functions, etc.). If you are a registered voter your signature will help to get the question on the ballot. We deserve that choice in November.

It's time we sent a message to the aldermen, to the administration, to the Planning Department and more importantly to the profit hungry developers that are circling our neighborhoods and hovering over City Hall. Now is the time that we can determine not only what our villages and neighborhoods will be but much more importantly what they will not be.

If you need any additional information, please contact any of your local neighborhood associations or myself and we'll be happy to explain further about this effort.

Graphically speaking

The alphabet is taking a beating

It took more than a year to notice it, but the alphabet has taken a beating in the latest edition of the city directory — the listing of city departments.

While the mayor's office is usually referred to as the "Executive Department," its name has been changed in the directory to "Administration."

Why? Because "Executive Department," in an alphabetized listing, would appear on the third page of the section on city departments. Changing it to "Administration" moves it up to the first page of the section.

As if being on the first page were not enough, the alphabetical method was overlooked once again to put "Administration" ahead of "Accounting."

Honestly. The capacity of some people to pay such attention to infinite details is sometimes astounding. If the other details of municipal government are given the same scrutiny, we should all be able to rest assured that the city is in able hands.

Auburndale Community Association President Polly Bryson is apparently taking no chances in her bid to unseat Board of Aldermen President Carol Ann Shea as Ward 4 alderman.

To curry the favor of Ward 4 voters, Bryson made sure her nomination papers contained the name of Auburndale's favorite son — Richard J. McGrath.

The problem was that McGrath signed Bryson's papers not once, not twice, but three times. Luckily for Bryson, the good folks at the Election Commission only counted it once.

McGrath

Those local politicians who passed up a chance to run for mayor this year also missed a golden opportunity to bring a wealth of free local advertising into nearly every home in the city.

According to a "confidential" Law Department opinion requested by Mayor Theodore D. Mann weeks before it turned out that he would run unopposed, mayoral contenders would have qualified under the FCC's "equal time rule."

That means that anyone who ran against Mann could have asked Newton Cablevision for the same 15 minutes the mayor gets twice each week on his show, "Mayor Mann's Review."

At a recent meeting of the Zoning Review Committee, the members were discussing whether it would be appropriate to form a new medical zone in the city for hospitals.

Alderman Richard J. McGrath apparently didn't think the idea was that extraordinary.

"Other communities have hospital zones," he said, "I ride through them all the time. The signs say, 'Quiet, Hospital Zone.'"

Alan Licarie, the executive secretary of the Election Commission, got quite a chuckle out of McGrath's recent comments about an advertisement run locally by developer Michael Iodice.

McGrath complained that he was not denounced prominently enough in the ad, which Iodice used to continue his running war with aldermen over the sorry state of the city's zoning laws.

Upon reading McGrath's comment that he considered the ad a big boost to his aldermanic career, Licarie said, "If he calls that a campaign contribution, then he's got a problem because that's corporation money."

In other words, McGrath better reconsider claiming Iodice's ad on his political financial statements because candidates can only accept campaign donations from individuals, not companies.

Langley Road resident Louis Milton Levy earns "Quote of the Summer" honors for an unforgettable pun he uttered at a recent meeting of the aldermanic Public Facilities Committee.

Levy was on-hand to protest the fact that a two house development proposed for Bartlett Terrace by Chestnut Hill Country Club Development Associates (a.k.a. Barken Properties) would involve substantial and potentially damaging dynamite blasting in his neighborhood.

When Alan Schlesinger, the lawyer representing Barken, accused the abutters of opposing the project because the homes would be occupied by low-income residents, Levy vehemently denied discrimination as a motive.

"If he feels we don't want those houses up there, he's 'Barken' up the wrong tree," the fiesty homeowner shouted.

Amused but enraged aldermen quickly chastized Schlesinger.

Uncle Sid is sour on the strike

By Howard Altman

Just the other night, on the eve of the impending baseball strike, I had a long talk with my dear, departed Uncle Sid. From that great ballpark in the sky, Uncle Sid asked me what was going on down here on earth.

"So nu?," he asked me. "What's going on down there? I understand there's going to be another baseball strike."

Uncle Sid, you see, used to make his living knocking around baseballs in places like the Polo Grounds in New York and Braves Field in Boston. A lifetime .283 hitter with 202 homeruns and 805 RBIs during his 13 years in the bigs, Sid Gordon — who played with the New York Giants, Boston Braves and Pittsburgh Pirates — was one of the few men in the history of the game to hit two homeruns in one inning.

Uncle Sid was the only Giant player ever to have a special day held in his honor across the river in Ebbett's Field, home of the cross-town rival Brooklyn Dodgers.

One year, after hitting .299 with 30 homers and 107 RBI, his contract with the New York Giants was up. Thinking about his growing family, Uncle Sid decided it was high time to ask for a raise. After a pretty nasty dispute with then-Giant owner Horace Stoneman, Uncle Sid begrudgingly received the grand sum of $30,000 — not too bad in the days when a good 5¢ cigar actually cost five cents. (After which, Stoneman shipped him off to Boston as way of a punishment.)

This was, of course, before the days when part-time utility players with lifetime averages hovering near .240 ask for, and receive, hundreds of thousands of dollars. It is more than poor Uncle Sid can handle.

"So tell me," Uncle Sid — who died of a heart attack while playing softball in New York's Central Park — asked, "what am I going to do this summer? It can get pretty boring up here even with a pennant race going on."

I have to explain Uncle Sid. He was from a time when ballplayers considered it a privilege to step out on the field. Even Joe DiMaggio earned a top salary of "just" $100,000. Banjo hitters, like Ozzie Smith earning millions were a dime a dozen and had trouble staying in the majors, let alone demanding outrageous sums of money.

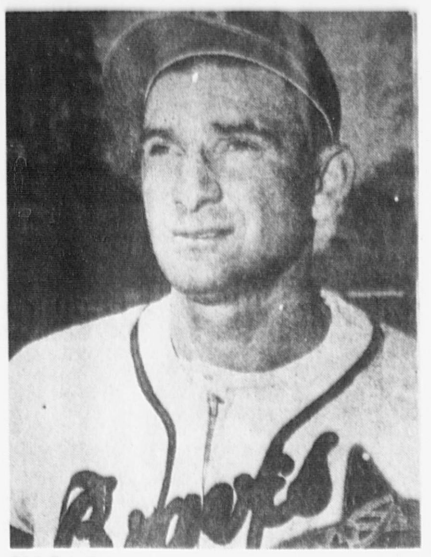

"I was in St. Louis," Uncle Sid said. "Came back to earth as a hot dog vendor for the night. Someone told me Ozzie Smith was making $2 million a year. Old Stoneface would have choked on his cigar if a lifetime .230 hitter came into his office demanding a new bat, let alone that kind of dough."

"But Uncle Sid," I tried to explain, "the networks are throwing money at the owners. The players are just trying to raise their families, like you were, remember?"

"Family, shmamily," Uncle Sid scoffed. "I know of countries that make less money than some of these guys."

Poor Uncle Sid. He played ball back in the days when Coke was something that came in a bottle and when grass was the green stuff between second base and home plate. Back then, strikes were balls you swung on and missed. He never knew from astroturf or designated hitters. I mean, this was a guy who literally died for the game — someone who read the sports section, not the stock market index. No wonder he doesn't understand what's going on.

Now, I'm not saying Uncle Sid was exactly a company man — he had his problems with the owners, just like today's players. But back then there was something almost mystical about spending a warm summer's afternoon watching the likes of Willie Mays and Mickey Mantle. Players just didn't pack up in the middle of the pennant race and go home.

Sid Gordon

I have to explain Uncle Sid. He was from a time when ballplayers considered it a privilege to step out on the field. Even Joe DiMaggio earned a top salary of 'just' $100,000.

"Let me see if I got this right," Uncle Sid queried. "The average salary is somewhere near $200,000, right? With designated hitters and platoon players, a lot of the guys don't play every day, right? Some of these guys even play in air conditioned domes, right? Jeez, I wish I had it so rough."

Hard as I tried, I just couldn't get through to Uncle Sid that what the players are fighting for is self-determination and not giving back what they earned at the bargaining table.

"That's a lot of hogwash," Uncle Sid snorted. "They're just a bunch of crybabies. It's like the little kid who says to the other kids, 'You can't use my bat and ball if you don't let me play.' Tell you what, forget baseball. Darn the players and darn the owners, I'm going fishing — see ya next season ... maybe."

LWV pushes for library site

The League of Women Voters of Newton urges the Board of Aldermen to pass the resolution regarding the siting of the new main library at the corner of Homer and Walnut Streets. We believe that this is an excellent location for our new main library.

The Main Library Facility Committee reviewed 19 sites and, using two different sets of criteria, determined that Homer-Walnut was the best site. Residents responding to the 1985 city census questionnaire on this subject also gave the highest number of votes to that site.

This location is central and accessible to Newton residents; there is bus service every half hour on Walnut Street. In addition, it would be eminently suitable for the city archives now inadequately housed in City Hall.

The Newton League believes that, while community interest is focused on the building of the main library facility at the Homer-Walnut site, we must act to make this project a reality. A library account has been set established; funds are accumulating in it.; any delay result in higher costs; and the hazards of the current library building in Newton Corner continue to threaten patrons and staff alike.

We call on each alderman to vote for a suspension of the rules in order to consider this resolution on August 12. We further urge each of you vote in favor of this resolution to establish a commitment on the part of ther community to construct a new, adequate, and safe main library at the Homer-Walnut site.

Tennis lights: a burning issue

This is about tennis court lighting and many other unnecessary expenses.

The waste goes on! So let's all help to turn it off! I hope that it will serve a beneficial purpose for a citizen to report anything that he or she observes involving a waste of the city's (and taxpayers') money. It is further hoped that attention will be given, by all city officials, to every suggestion that might be, or may lead to, a way for the city and its taxpayers to save money. Let's turn off the waste starting right NOW.

Recently, it was reported to our office that the many high-power tennis court lights at Newton North High School are expensively burning for several evening hours–rain or shine–every day with most or all courts completely unused.

Since then, in discussions, we have received suggestions. Some of them might be used in combination with others: (Is any city official hearing, heeding, following through?)

1. With some rewiring, the timer could control minimal lighting necessary to get on and off the courts safely while a one-hour timer switch at each court could provide for turning on the additional light needed to play tennis on that court. The players themselves would turn on the one-hour timer. Can this be done with minor changes?

2. Another suggestion would be to provide minimal lighting only when it is not raining or excessively windy and then only when one of more sets of players have made an appointment. Can the over-all; timer be overridden when needed?

3. Court and lights could conceivably be monitered and operated by a security guard or custodian.

Frank talk

Cong. Barney Frank

Reagan and postponed any changes in Social Security.

The spending blueprint for fiscal 1986 reduces Community Development Block Grants and federal subsidies to the MBTA by 15 percent, but fully funds the federal revenue sharing program that brings Newton $1 million annually.

Although revenue sharing is slated to end altogether in one year, Frank said he believes Congress may be able to "stave off" the budget knife again.

He also does not foresee any significant changes in Social Security until "the next century," when many retirees will reap benefits from protected pension accounts, like I.R.A.'s, and other retirement incentives.

On the top of his agenda when the House gets back to business on Sept. 4 will be tax reform and an $8 to $10 billion cut in military spending.

Part of President Reagan's tax reform package includes the elimination of the federal income tax deduction for state and local taxes, but Frank does not believe Congress will go along with the idea.

"Somebody in Washington has decided that the way to decrease the federal deficit is to beat up on the locals. I think it's a mistake. I don't think the state and local deduction will go through as is," he said.

Most of today's investment decisions are made to take advantage of tax loopholes, but not to capitalize on the traditional concept of "free market return," according to Frank.

He said Reagan's ability to push his legislative agenda has been lessened partly because his recent illness slowed him down and because of his "lame duck" status.

But the major reason for the president's problems is that he saved the "tougher sell" items for his last term, according to Frank.

"Politicians don't have mothers, so we always eat our dessert first and save the liver for the end of the meal when it's harder to swallow," he said.

The results of recent polls, along with last year's congressional and senatorial races, show that the issues Reagan represents are much less popular than the man himself, he added.

Voters elect Democrats as legislators because of their strength on the issues, but choose Republicans as administrators because they have a reputation for "competence, ability and toughness," according to Frank.

He predicted that 1986 will be "a good year" for Democratic candidates, despite his concession that "we don't look like we can govern."

Looking around the corner, Frank said he believes there will be less "bickering" among Democrats and "a very angry and bitter Republican fight" when the presidential race to succeed Reagan heats up.

"There's a good chance of (the Democratic Party) looking less fractious. I think there is finally a concensus that the bickering has hurt us. They finally see how bad it is," he said.

Frank, who has actively protested against the apartheid, said the Reagan Administration's policy of "constructive engagement" has proved "fruitless" because South Africa's white leaders do not feel "isolated" enough to stop "stonewalling" the issue.

"I think no new investment will be more effective than disinvestment. What's done is less important than actually doing something to get the message across that we find their system abhorrent," according to Frank.

City's 'free cash' tops $6 million mark receive a AAA-rating from Moody's Investor Service of New York this winter. Currently, Newton is one of about 20 cities in the country that have earned the firm's highest credit rating.

One the key indicators Moody's will be examining is the city's debt as a proportion to the total valuation of its property, which stands at an "excellent" .2 percent, according to Marino, who also decribed the maturity schedule of the debt as "excellent."

The fact that the city uses a "conservative" 3 percent of its operating revenues to service its debt requirements and does not use free cash to manipulate tax rates will also be important to maintaing the rating, according to Chief Budget Officer Stephen Cirillo.

Marino said the single largest contribution to the record surplus came when assessors underestimated state and local revenues last year.

Instead of the $23.9 million expected, the city received $27.05 million —or $300,000 more in state monies and $2.9 million more in unexpected local funds.

The local receipts that overshot the estimate were $725,641 in general government revenues, including $200,000 in unforeseen building permit fees, $557,000 in unexpected interest, $591,000 in additional motor excise taxes and a $682,091 under-estimate of water/sewer revenues.

The amount of departmental "turnbacks," or unspent budget appropriations returned to general revenue at the close of fiscal 1985, was about $900,000, which Marino decsribed as "less than usual."

Cirillo credited the decrease in turnbacks to "tight budget planning."

A cautious Mann traced the city's favorable year-end position to an overall economic upswing, successful lobbying to increase state aid, a rigorous collection policy and the management initiatives taken by the city's department heads, Treasurer Theodore L. Scafidi and Marino.

"I want to express my pride and gratitude to all of those individuals who have had a part in this, including the Board of Aldermen. At the same time, I caution the public to be aware of some of the financial concerns I have expressed," he said.

Some of those concerns include the city's $70-million, unfunded pension liability, the $11-million deficit projected for the School Department over the next five years, cutbacks in federal programs like revenue sharing, inflation affecting material costs and "increased commitments in terms of wage settlements."

Despite those reservations, Mann said, "We have a very optimistic beginning in terms of meeting our future deficit needs. This will give us a good start to avert more serious financial trouble in the future."

The city's year-end position for fiscal 1985 came in at about $3 million more than last year's, when the city's coffers ended fiscal 1984 with a surplus of $5.6 million and free cash totalling $3.6 million.

The increase in free cash becomes more evident when the numbers are compared to the size of the city's total operating budget. The city ended fiscal 1984 with free cash that amounted to 2.3 percent of the budget, while the unencumbered money estimated for fiscal 1985 equals about 5.5 percent.

According to Revenue Department guidelines, free cash equal to 3 to 5 percent of a municipality's total operating budget is "considered a good margin of safety for meeting future needs."

the RAIN CAME DOWN ... THE TILES POPPED UP
the INSURANCE MEN CAME IN ... AND the MERCHANDISE WENT OUT

A midsummer rainstorm raised havoc with a suburban Richmond, Virginia, clothing store. First the roof collapsed; the electricity went out; the water lifted the tiles on the floors and seeped down the walls. Before repair work could start, all the merchandise had to be moved out. . .that's where Trusty Irv Towne (our traveling salvage man) came in. He promised to move it all in return for a quick (and cheap!) settlement. That's how the entire clothing section of the store (3 trailerloads) arrived at the Norwood store last week where we've been getting ready for this sale.

Ward 1 school candidates voice views

Starting this week, the Newton Graphic will take a look at the 12 candidates running for the School Committee's eight seats. Each candidate will talk about his or her experience and reasons for running, and will answer questions about stipends for committee members, limitations on term of committee members, future contract negotiations and school closings — issues that will come up during the race.

Out of fairness to all parties involved, the Newton Graphic will begin interviews with candidates from Ward 1 and continue numerically ward by ward and alphabetically within the ward.

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

Ronald L. Nuttall

Sally Rizzo

NEWTON — Two candidates — Ronald L. Nuttall and Sally Rizzo — will be running for the Ward 1 seat being vacated by School Committee Chairman Leonard Gentile, who will run in Ward 3.

Ronald L. Nuttall, of 106 Washington Street in Newton Corner, is a native of Salt Lake City, Utah, and has lived in Newton for 16 years. Nuttall, 47, is married and the father of two children. Son Key graduated from Newton North High School, and daughter Kim is currently attending North. Nuttall has been a professor of education at Boston College since 1967. He received a Ph.D. in Social Psychology from Harvard University in 1963 after earning his Master's of Public Health in 1959.

Experience

Nuttall was appointed to the Citizen's Advisory Committee on Declining Enrollment 10 years ago by the School Committee. He said policy developed by that committee has been used by the "last four or five" School Committees deciding how to consolidate school closings with the least disruption possible.

Recently, Nuttall was on the PTA Council as well as the Newton Citizens for Education group.

Q: Why should you be elected to the School Committee?

A: "As a professional educator at BC, I have evaluated over 50 school systems throughout the state. School systems requiring outside professional evaluation under federal law have come to me and I have provided written reports analyzing programs and evaluating teachers. I know how education programs work and what to look for — what works and what doesn't. Also, I am clearly one of the most experienced people in the race, having been a professional educator since 1967."

Q: Why are you running?

A: "I have always been involved in community and school affairs. I think it's important for people to get involved. In this district we have a lack of interest, and I would work to change that."

Q: How do you feel about school closings?

A: "I worked on the last two referendum issues overriding the School Committee. I have no position on what school should be closed, but I supported the closings of the Hyde School and the Oak Hill School even though I have friends who wanted the schools to remain open. I feel it is important to support the School Committee. I know it was a tough decision and that the committee was hard-pressed to close the schools, so I supported their decision."

Q: How do you feel about paying committee members?

A: "I'm opposed to paying School Committee members. The money doesn't make that much difference in getting quality school people. We should use the money in other ways."

Q: Do you think there should be a limitation on the term of School Committee members?

A: "Yes, I think it's a good idea. There should be a cycle of new people on the committee."

Sally Rizzo of 188R Church Street, Newton Corner, is a native of Franklin Park, N.Y. and has lived in Newton for the past eight years. The 34-year-old Rizzo is single and works for the Executive Office of Human Services in the area of social policy relating to the homeless and refugees. Rizzo received a BA in history from Long Island University in 1973. She got her Master's in counseling psychology from Antioch College in 1976.

Experience

Rizzo taught in the Newton public schools at Warren Junior High School from 1976 to 1979 until she was laid off prior to that school's closing. She was on the Board of the Newton Corner Association from 1980 to the present and on the Newton Neighborhood Network since it's inception last year. Rizzo is also a member of the Ward 1 Democratic Committee and has been a member of the Newton Democratic City Committee since 1980.

Q: Why should you be elected to the School Committee?

A: "I can offer a lot of energy and a strong commitment to the schools. I am very involved in local issues with my work on the democratic committees and I have a good sense of what people in the community want. I will work to improve the system so we all can maintain confidence in our school system. I think it is important that the community feel confident that the School Committee is spending their money wisely and important that parents feel confident that schools respond to needs of their children. Also, the budget I work with at the State Office of Human Services is roughly the same amount as the Newton school budget. I develop the budget and know how to make use of limited resources and be responsive to considerations of the constituents."

Q: Why are you running?

A: "I have a deep personal interest in education. I have been a teacher in Newton and I am proud to have worked in a school system that offers the education Newton's does. There is a threat against the system by both financial restraints as well as a growing apathy about our schools and a lack of public support for a public school system. Public education is the foundation of our democracy and it is our responsibility as citizens to protect public education opportunities of the highest quality for every child."

Q: How do you feel about school closings?

A: "It's a tough decision based on financial and enrollment forecasts, and there were some difficult decisions made. But I don't expect it to be as much of an issue as in the past, at least over the next few years."

Q: How do you feel about paying committee members?

A: "I support paying School Committee members — they put in an awful lot of time and it is a very modest stipend."

Q: Should there be a limitation on the terms of School Committee members?

A: "I'm opposed to imposing limitations on the terms of School Committee members because if someone is doing a good job there is no reason they should be eliminated from the process. I do think that it is important that a new group be brought in, though."

No change for Ward 1

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The three aldermanic candidates in Ward 1 — all unopposed — occupy noteworthy seats on the full board.

At-Large Alderman Sondra L. Shick, who could not be reached for comment at presstime, chairs Real Property Reuse, the Board of Aldermen's newest committee and a group destined to play an important role in resolving the city's library dilemma.

Bruce Carmichael, the other At-large alderman, took over as vice president of the board after Matthew Jefferson, his friend and colleague, lost a bitter leadership fight to Carol Ann Shea.

In 1983, Ward 1 Alderman Ronald Marini became the youngest representative ever elected to the state's largest municipal legislature.

Now 23, Marini recently earned his college degree and works as a contractor based in Nonantum.

His accomplishments are largely the product of working with other aldermen, although he is now sponsoring legislation that would allow residents on a street undergoing reconstruction to have more freedom when renewing their water services.

With two years under his belt, his "main goal for the next couple of terms is to look at the zoning aspect of my ward and do something about it."

Marini says his recent runins with developer Michael Iodice woke him up to the drastic changes zoning flaws can cause in residential neighborhoods.

He believes that both aldermen and School Committee members should be paid "a small amount, but something fair" for the time they devote to the city's governmental affairs.

Although Marini says he hasn't examined "all the ins and outs" of the proposed development moratorium, he admits, "We're going to have to do something. Maybe the moratorium is the way to go."

Bruce Carmichael, who will begin his fourth term in January, has a more definitive stand on the moratorium issue.

"I believe very fervently that, in order to successly rezone the city and rewrite the codes, some type of stop-gap measure has to be enacted on a temporary basis to allow the whole process of revision to be done correctly," the 33-year-old Linwood Avenue resident says.

Land use controls will occupy much of his time over the next two years, according to Carmichael, who intends to ask his colleagues to enact changes in the manufacturing and business zones that will protect residential abutters.

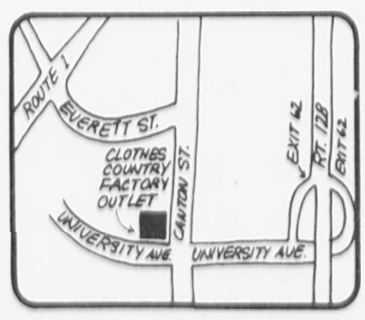

Carmichael, who believes his ascension to vice president indicates that he has achieved "a certain amount of respect" among his peers, says he would be in favor of increasing the current aldermanic stipend.

"There's an incredible amount of behind-the-scenes work that people don't understand, whether it's constituent services, helping residents with individual problems or going to meetings."

Kids knock nukes

Peter Cameron, 8½-year-old Newton camper. "No one can win. With all the bombs they have, everyone is going to die and it doesn't make any sense."

David Royal, 9, noted that a nuclear war would make no sense, "because after a few bombs were dropped, there would be no one left to fight it."

"I want to know how this whole thing started," said a disgusted 8-year-old Mark Picariello.

While they have questions about why, what and who made possible the threat of nuclear war, the children also have definite ideas on how to stop it. "I wrote the president and told him he should talk to (other governments). I told him, 'I don't want you to hurt people, I want you to make peace,'" one camper said.

"Nuclear war is wrong," added another. "Killing people is not the answer to solving problems. If people have problems, they should try to reason them out." Offered 9-year-old Michael Sonia, from Newton, "I feel they (the superpowers) should try to be on the same team."

Sean Kiley, 10, said, "They should take down all of the bomb-making factories." Chris Marrazzo, 9, said they should "put all bombs up in space and leave them there."

When the young commentators ran out of viable solutions, they called upon a kind of desperate wish that, despite the frightening possibilities, all would remain well. "I dreamed that someone would take all the kids in the world up in a rocketship, where we would be safe," said 9-year-old Kristen Siciliano.

A day to remember

By Howard Altman, Staff Writer

NEWTON CENTRE — It was, in many respects, a normal morning at the intersection of Centre and Beacon Streets in Newton Centre. Commuters whizzed by the corner on their way to start their daily routine.

There was, however, one major difference. It was August 6 — the 40th anniversary of the atomic bombing of the Japanese city of Hiroshima.

In the memory of the 150,000 men, women and children who lost their lives in that bombing and the subsequent bombing of Nagasaki, a group of about 10 people held a vigil on the Newton Centre Green. Carrying signs and passing out literature to motorists stopped at the intersection, they were there to remind people never to forget.

"There is a real possibility," Newtonite Brooke Lipsitt said cynically, "that we as a species might repeat the awful tragedy that took place in Japan 40 years ago. We all need to work to prevent that from happening."

Pointing to her five-year-old daughter Sarah, Lipsitt said it was important for this generation to work to protect future generations.

"We need to remember that we have to work for the future," Lipsitt said. "We have to work to freeze the build-up of nuclear weapons so that our children will inherit the earth. I can remember back to the Cuban Missle Crisis when I was about my daughter's age and I think I was better off."

Another woman, Sophie Pann — who described herself as being "70-plus," said she was out there for her grandchildren.

"I have two grandchildren," Pann said. "They are scared and I feel you are never too old to get involved."

Beverly Droz, president of Newton Action for Nuclear Disarmament — one of the event's organizers — expressed pessimism about the earth's future.

"I expect future use of nuclear weapons within 15 years, even with the memory of the horrors of the first two atomic bombs still in the minds of many of the world's leaders."

Zoning violations cited

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — The lawyer for a Chestnut Hill couple appealling their recent criminal conviction on zoning violations has asked the city to investigate four properties allegedly breaking the same laws.

The enforcement request, which took the form of a July 31 letter to Building Commissioner James W. Cameron, points an accusing finger at single family homes located at 8 Park Ave., 7 Buswell Park, 32 Norwood Ave. and 145 Washington St.

"These are just four of the hundreds I have found. I'm just giving Mr. Cameron these few to start to see how the city reacts," Shirley Jaffe said.

Jaffe and her husband, Leon, are asking a Massachusetts Appeals Court to overturn their recent conviction on charges that they arranged and used a single family home at 58 Winthrop St. as a multi-family dwelling for eight unrelated, single persons.

Cambridge District Court Judge Arthur Sherman fined the Jaffes, who recently moved to 40 Acacia Ave., more than $10,000 and ordered that the lease for the Winthrop Street home not be renewed when it expires at the end of this month.

Shirley Jaffe said she asked Waltham attorney Gerald S. Cournoyer, Jr., to write the letter to Cameron "to see what action the city intends to take to enforce our laws equally."

"We have thousands of illegal homes to clear up in this city and I still have a lot of years left in my life to help them do it," she added.

Cournoyer's letter states that the properties "appear to violate Section 30-5(a) of the city of Newton Zoning Ordinances" because the homes, all located in single family zones, "appear to have been designed, arranged or constructed as a dwelling for more than one family."

It continues on to request that Cameron "please conduct an appropriate investigation of these properties, and if you detect violations, the Jaffe's request the zoning ordinances (be enforced) forthwith.

"It may well be that some of the properties may even violate that part of Section 30-5(a) which prohibits the actual use (not simply the alteration, etc.) of a building for a dwelling inhabited by more than one family," according to Cournoyer.

Jaffe said she uncovered the alleged violations in the homes at 8 Park Ave. and 145 Washington St. during research she conducted before her trial began on the subject of illegal apartments.

"Those are two of the most blatant that I've come across," she added.

According to Jaffe, the Park Avenue property contains both a mansion and a carriage house and, although located in a single family home, is assessed by the city as a residential parcel containing two two-family dwellings.

The owners allegedly converted the carriage house into a dwelling after their request for a variance was denied, she said. The mansion is being rented as "a rooming house," she added.

According to Jaffe, the Washington Street home is "so blatantly illegal" that when it was recently put up for sale it could not be openly advertised. Assessing records list the home as a commercial property, she said, claiming that it, like the other three, contains an illegal second kitchen.

Jaffe said she came across the Buswell Park and Norwood Avenue homes through the "Multiple Listing Service," which realtors and homeowners use to advertise dwellings for sale.

The Buswell Park property is listed as "a renovated Victorian home" with "a separate apartment of four rooms" and "new kitchens and baths," she said.

The Norwood Avenue house, which is in the process of being sold, is listed as having "a totally separate in-law apartment for professional or income use," according to Jaffe.

Mt. Ida plan is defeated

felt was too much for the neighborhood. He also suggested that by granting permission for such a project on the Mount Ida campus, the Board of Aldermen would be "sending a message to other developers, good and bad," who might seek to similarly develop other college campuses in Newton, such as those belonging to Boston College or Lasell Junior College.

Stephen Buchbinder, attorney for Senior Development Co., said, "The developer came forward with what we think is conceptually a good proposal. But we obviously recognize there are some major concerns about the proposal."

Buchbinder said those concerns were proximity of the project to Wiswall Road, the number of units in the development, and the access to the project from Dedham Street, via Carlson Avenue, which many neighborhood residents thought would complicate an already congested traffic situation.

He said his client has been working with Mount Ida to remedy these problems by obtaining a site further away from Wiswall Road and having an access to the site from Wells Avenue, to the south of the campus, but he said "negotiations with the college have been very difficult."

Buchbinder asked the committee members to give him a sense of whether there was any support for the project on the Mount Ida campus before he could recommend that his clients seek further negotiations with the college.

He said he could possibly foresee a reduction in the scale of the project to 150 units and a 41-bed medical facility.

Committee member Bruce Carmichael said the project would still be "too massive" for the area and that the density he would prefer seeing "would probably make the project not feasible economically."

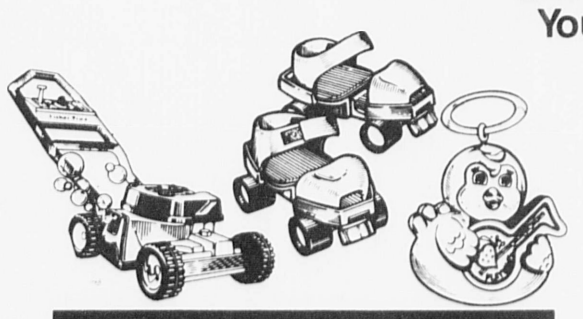

However, Board President Carol Ann Shea said, "I would encourage you to pursue it. Many of the objections raised at the public hearing would be addressed by the actions you have suggested... I have come to realize the importance of these facilities."

After the meeting Buchbinder said he and his clients would have to assess the results and make a more detailed "reading of the committee" before deciding whether to try and rework their proposal.

American captain of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club at St. Andrew's Golf Course.

"He had a fantastic gift that was so flattering to individuals," Muir said of Ouimet's ability to relate to people one-on-one. "I wish I had the gift."

When Gene Sarazen first joined the tour, he was known as a club-throwing hothead, Muir said. Through his contacts with Ouimet, he said, Sarazen came to be known as the "'Squire' and rightly so."

Another example of the Ouimet's positive manner, Muir said, was prevalent during a match he played with Jess Guilford, one of Woodland's three National Amateur champions.

"Jess Guilford was a raw-boned farm boy from New Hampshire who, when asked what he thought of the new golf course they were playing, said something to the effect that, 'Well, you damn well ruined a fine cow pasture,'" Muir said.

When Ouimet was asked to comment on the new course, he said the slope of several of the holes provided an interesting challenge.

"Francis was always looking for something positive to say," Muir said.

Bobby Jones, described by Muir as a Harvard boy with a biting temper, was by far Ouimet's biggest challenger.

Muir said Jones constantly blamed bad shots on low flying birds or camera shutters while Francis never complained about his poor shots.

"If it hadn't been for Bobby Jones, who won a few more events, we would have heard more of Francis," Muir said.

In 1949, golf's ambassador, who never graduated from high school, established the Francis Ouimet Caddie Scholarship Fund with $4,605 to help young golfers go on to higher education.

"Typically, it's the only thing he ever lent his name to," Muir said.

Since its inception, the scholarship has helped more than 500 young caddies, both male and female, attend some of the country's finest colleges.

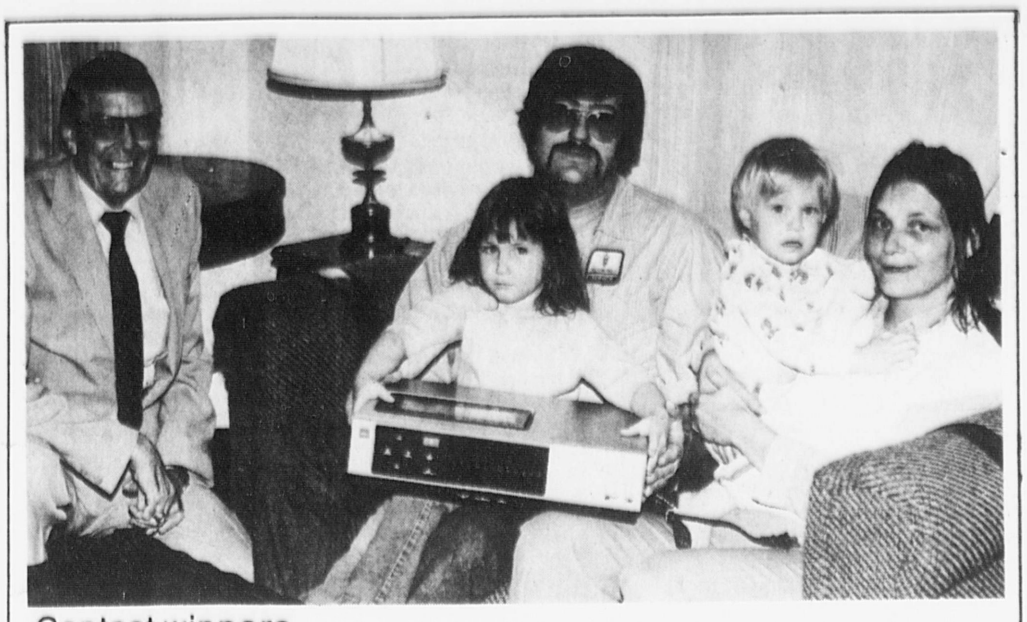

With money donated by the friends of Ouimet, The Ouimet Museum and Golf House was moved from its location on Milk Street in downtown Boston in 1975 to the Leo J. Martin Golf Course in Weston.

Muir said it is the only museum of its kind in the nation dedicated to golf memorabilia. It contains not only mementoes and books of Ouimet's, but boasts a sizable collection of trophies, and a pictorial presentation of Massachusetts golfing greats like Donald Ross, George Wright, Jesse Guilford, Margaret and Harriot Curtis, Ted Bishop, Bob Crowley and Paul Harney.

Artifacts on hand at the museum include a feather golf ball which was used in the 1700s. When crafting the ball, artisans would first sew together leather for the outside, leaving a small hole into which a "top hat full of feathers" were forced.

In the Ouimet Room of the museum is a ballot box identical to the one that was used to elect Ouimet to the The Royal and Ancient Golf Club at St. Andrew's. In same room, hanging over the fireplace, is a reproduction of Ouimet dressed in his St. Andrew's garb. Muir said another reproduction of the portrait painted by Dwight D. Eisenhower hangs at St. Andrews. Around the mantel are three letters from Eisenhower. One letter thanks Ouimet for a tie he gave the former president while the other letters congratulate him on becoming captain of the St. Andrews Golf Team and establishing the Ouimet scholarship.

On one of the walls of the museum is an autographed oil painting of Bobby Jones which was given to Ouimet. The inscription reads most appropriately, "Ever an ornament to the game."

Irish studies funded at BC

CHESTNUT HILL — "Irish culture is more than green beer on St. Patrick's Day," says Newton resident Maeve O'Reilly Finley. To counteract stereotypical portrayals of her homeland, a native of Kilberg, Kells, has contributed a "seed fund" of $15,000 to establish Boston College's first scholarship for research in Irish studies in the Republic of Ireland.

Now a teacher at Newton's Countryside School, Finley was already a wife and mother when she entered Boston College — an undertaking that was considered unusual in the traditional 1950s.

Though she graduated cum laude in 1959 and went on to earn a master's degree in education from Harvard, she cites her special fondness for Boston College as partial motivation for her gift.

The wife of journalist and playwright Mark Finley and mother of two daughters, Finley has lived in a Newton home overlooking the BC campus for the past 30 years.

Elderhostel

Stimulating senior minds and bodies

By John Moroney
Correspondent

NEWTON — For the older and more mature persons who missed toga parties in the dorm til 4 p.m., up-ending the Coke machine in the RA's door or soaping the dean's car windows, Lasell Junior College introduces Elderhostel.

"Sometimes, I wonder if these people aren't a little more rowdy," Jane Cormuss, a graduate of Lasell, says of Elderhostel students as compared to today's college students. "But it's a nice change."

Cormuss, now the college's director of communication, says the first thing Elderhostel students asked for when they arrived on Saturday was directions to the post office and the liquor store. Not to worry, Cormuss adds, all the students are old enough to drink.

Inspired by the youth hostels and folk schools of Europe, Elderhostel offers persons over the age of 60, academic courses that not only stimulate the mind, but activate the body.

"I find it a most gratifying and wonderful experience at our stage in life," Lillian Rubin of Delray Beach, Fla., says.

By offering the program for the first time in its history, Lasell joins a network of colleges, universities, independent schools and educational institutions in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Europe and Israel.

Unlike the high cost of tuition at many of these schools, Elderhostel students receive instruction in three non-credit courses, room and board, use of campus facilities and a variety of extra-curricular activities for $195 a week.

"We're going to make this a yearly part of our vacation," David and Mary Rhoads says of their first visit to an Elderhostel.

During the months of August and July, Lasell will sponsor two Elderhostel sessions. Courses have included Colonial New England, Doctor and Patient: The Literature of Medicine, and Eat, Drink and Be Active. This week's courses are Become Computer Friendly, The Romantic Film and George Orwell: No Yesterday, No Tomorrow.

"Any subject you can imagine can be found here at these colleges," David Rhoads says while sipping coffee at a table in the Lasell library during a break period.

Mary Rhoads, who seems more excited about visiting her new grandson in Needham because she lives in Camp Hill, Penn., says she and her husband came to Lasell's Elderhostel to "brush up on literature."

"Acting, that's what I'd like to take next," David Rhoads says pushing his hand across the table like a Shakespearian actor.

Sitting with the Rhoads, is Libby Rosen, a three-time Elderhostel student from Flushing, N.Y., who never attended an institution of higher learning but claims to be from the "school of hard knocks."

"I like the fact that you're meeting persons from all over the country," Rosen says of the Elderhostel experience. "We are all different with different experiences. It's nice to be able to come and compare notes."

The Eat, Drink and Be Active course, which features aerobics by Laura Shaw of Newton, was Rosen's favorite class.

"Even if you don't participate in the exercises, you can observe and learn," she says.

Samson Bosin of Passaic, N.J., who attended an Edlerhostel last year at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, did not wish to comment on Lasell's Elderhostel until the end of the week.

"When it's all over on Friday, then you can ask me how I enjoyed myself," Bosin says.

Instead, Bosin eagerly compared today's college students to the students at Rutgers University when he was there.

"Young people just want money today, they don't want to wait for anything," Bosin says. "Do you find a lot of that?"

Elderhostel students have enjoyed a real taste of college life, complete with co-ed dorms, cafeteria food, late night games of Trivial Pursuit and dorm mother Priscilla Winslow in McCelland Hall dorm.

"They been very good," says Winslow, a 1953 Lasell graduate. The variety of activities offered during the day keeps the hall quiet at night, Winslow says. "They're pretty busy."

Besides the three courses, Elderhostel students are treated to a series of special events which includes visits to the Jackson Homestead, the J.F.K. Library and the Plymouth Plantation.

There were only two reports of difficulties in adjusting to dorm life. One came from David Rhoads who discovered the bathrooms in McCelland Hall did not have electrical outlets.

"Because it's a school for women, they don't have any outlets in the bathroom to plug a razor into," Rhoads says. "I had to shave in my bedroom."

— Jane Cormuss, a graduate of Lasell

Energized

For the first time in its history, Lasell Junior College is offering an elderhostel program designed to activate both the mind and the body. During July and August, the school is offering two sessions of college courses and exercise programs that will liven-up even the laziest individuals. Pictures on this page show elders working out during one of the exercise classes lead by Newton resident Laura Shaw.

Can 'powered' paint rollers do the work faster?

Painting a room with a brush can be long and tedious work. If you use a roller, you'll cover a large, flat area much more quickly, and with much less effort. But if you use a "powered" roller, will the job go even faster?

That was one of the things Consumer Reports' paint experts wanted to find out when they tested three power-fed paint rollers recently. Two models — the Wagner Power Roller and the essentially similar Sears Craftsman Continuous Flow Paint Roller — are electrically powered. (Both sell for about $100.) The third model — the $67 Paint Machine — is powered by a hand pump.

The powered paint rollers use air pressure to force paint from a canister through a tube and onto the roller. You regulate the paint's flow with a control on the roller handle.

When the paint experts tried the powered rollers, they rarely had to remove the roller from the wall, and there was no necessity to dip it into a roller pan. The paint experts found it took only a few swipes to learn how to adjust the flow of paint.

The electrically powered machines fed paint to the rollers very well. But the experts also found the rollers' air pumps disagreeably loud.

With either the Wagner Power Roller or the Sears Craftsman Continuous Flow Paint Roller, an experienced person could paint a 12-foot-by-15-foot room with an 8-foot ceiling in about half an hour. However, that's only about 10 minutes faster than it would take to paint the same-sized room with an ordinary 9-inch roller.

Considering the preparation and cleanup that painting requires, the extra 10 minutes you'd gain with the powered rollers hardly seems worth the expense.

The manually operated Paint Machine, with its hand pump, was judged no faster than an ordinary roller. You have to pay constant attention to keep the pressure up. (If you let the pressure drop too low, the coat of paint you apply may be uneven or too thin.)

If you'd rather forgo those powered rollers for a conventional ones, choose a roller frame that's made of wire and has secure end caps. The roller sleeve that fits over the frame can have either a plastic or cardboard core. But remember, cardboard deteriorates in water, and would be a poor choice if you are using a water-based paint.

A roller sleeve with a quarter-inch nap is best for painting smooth surfaces such as ceilings and walls. Longer naps are good for textured surfaces. Look for a sleeve with a dense nap. Regardless of the length of the nap, a dense nap can carry more paint and deliver a smoother finish.

Consumer Reports' paint experts add that although roller sleeves with natural fibers such as lamb's wool and mohair are available, the best bet, in their view, are those made from synthetic fibers. Those rollers should be good for any type of paint. (c) 1985, Consumers Union.

Always be sure to use a sturdy ladder

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

Few things are more unnerving than climbing an extension ladder that shimmies and shakes with each step you take — especially if you're carrying up a bucket of paint for the eaves, or materials to repair the roof. Nor will you feel very secure if the ladder bends and bows under your weight or jiggles in a side-to-side motion as you go up and down.

If that's how your old ladder treats you, it may be time for a new one that's more rigid and offers more security.

Consumer Reports' engineers tested 48 extension ladders recently. Most were 24-foot models — a length considered suitable for most households. Other lengths were also included for comparison. All ladders were evaluated for rigidity, ease of raising, rung comfort and rung traction.

The rigidity and sturdiness of an extension ladder for any given length generally depends on its "duty rating." That's the measure of the maximum load the ladders are designed to hold.

Type I, or industrial ladders, are rated at a 250-pound load; Type II, or commercial ladders, at 225 pounds; Type III, or household, at 200 pounds. (The ladders are certified to hold up under four times the load given in a duty rating.)

While most of the models tested were made entirely of metal, a few were made of wood or a combination of wood and metal. Type II (commercial ladders) were judged by the engineers as the best compromise of weight, performance and price.

Among those tested, six of the 24-footers would be good choices. Listed in order of increasing price, they are the Wards, catalog no. 6922, $120 plus shipping; Werner D1224, $126; Louisville CLE24, $130; J.C. Penney, catalog no. 0242, $130 plus shipping; Flint Viking, $146; and the Keller 3524, $160.

If you don't need a ladder as long as 24 feet, the 16-foot Type II Sears, catalog no. 42712, $90 plus shipping, would be a good choice. A Type III 16-footer might also serve just as well, and save you some money. Models worth considering are the Keller 3116, $50; Werner D716, $60; Werner D1116, $70; and the Keller 3216, $100.

For extension ladders longer than 24 feet, Consumer Reports' engineers say you should probably choose a Type I, heavy-duty model. At that length, Type II ladders tend to be quite shaky.

But bear in mind that the Type I, 32-footers are heavy, unwieldy and expensive. The three models selected for testing cost from $220 for the Werner D1532 to $270 for the Keller 4032, and $280, plus shipping, for the Sears catalog no. 42807.

Incidentally, if you have difficulty keeping an extension ladder level because of the slope of your property, you might want to invest in a ladder extender and leveler. Among those tested by the engineers, the Xtenda-Leg, $33.50, from Brookstone would be a good choice. The Xtenda-Leg fits most ladders and is continuously adjustable.

The engineers add that such levelers wouldn't be very useful to make a ladder reach farther. Their farthest extension is only about a foot, and only then when mounted below the bottom ladder rung — not the securest of mounting positions. (c) 1985, Consumers Union.

Home appliance clinic

Q. We have a General Electric built-in cooktop, Model JP6610V2HA, serial No. RA757501-G, with an automatic surface unit. We've had a number of problems with the sensor and the responder for the automatic surface unit. I replaced the sensor unit recently. Now it seems that the responder needs repair again. A local appliance parts dealer suggested that I convert the automatic surface unit to a regular burner by installing a jumper wire on the burner connector and using a regular switch. What do you think?

A. General Electric makes a burner conversion kit which changes the automatic surface unit switch to a regular surface burner. The kit is designed to adapt to certain models of cooktops. Unfortunately, GE does not make a kit to fit your model. The problem is that the mounting holes on the responder switch may not line up with the mounting holes on the replacement switch and the switch shaft heights are different.

If your parts dealer can supply you with an infinite heat switch that will handle the wattage of the burner as well as line up with the mounting holes at the proper height, I see no reason why it can't be done. However, I would contact a qualified service technician to make the change.

Q. My Hotpoint microwave, model RE930-OT2, serial No. 04904786-R. will not set a specific number of seconds, although the microwave is actually operating satisfactorily. Also, shortly after it was new it developed a small hole—smaller than a pinhead—in the bottom surface of the cooking compartment. Can this be harmful?

A. I checked with Hotpoint. The people there seem to think that the electromechanical digital timer may be suffering from worn gears inside the timer mechanism. The pinhold in the oven bottom may have been caused by the meat probe falling out of the food, touching the oven bottom and causing an arc, or by improper use of aluminum foil.

They suggest that you place a cup of water in the oven for 20 to 30 seconds. Open the door and feel around the pinhole spot. If you feel any heat in the area, have the glass bottom replaced. To find out if the pinhole is harmful, have your authorized Hotpoint service person examine the oven.

Ceramic tiles easy to apply

By UPI-Popular Mechanics

Ceramic tile has been the traditional, preferred building material for covering bathroom and kitchen walls in high moisture areas. Tiled walls in shower stalls have long been a sign of quality that home buyers look for. The tile is durable, attractive and, when installed properly, highly water resistant.

Ceramic tile is also relatively easy to apply yourself. It is a logical choice for homeowners planning to remodel a bathroom.

The first step in ceramic tile installation is to repair all holes and protrusions to smooth the walls you will be covering. Flaking paint also must be sanded.

The walls should be square and plumb. Check with a level or a plumb line and bob to determine wall condition. Maximum deviation must not exceed 1/4 inch. If it does, correct wall before tiling.

To do this, remove the drywall or plaster, level the studs until they are square and plumb, and install new water-resistant drywall. Finish all joints with joint compound and tape and sand joints smooth.

Next, measure the total square footage on the area you plan to tile. Sketch each wall to be tiled and include all dimensions and details such as faucet locations. Show where the tub is located, its height from the floor and the locations you plan for soap dishes, towel racks and grab handles. Take the sketch to a tile supplier and discuss the project.

A good supplier will be able to provide you with the tile, adhesive and grout needed. Most tile stores also carry trowels and other tools you'll need for the job.

Once you've made your selections, lay out the tub walls to establish the horizontal and vertical tile alignment lines. First, determine the low point on the tub rim. Check all three sides of the tub with a level. This step is critical on old tubs that may have settled unevenly. Next, place two tiles on top of the tub edge at the lowest point and draw a line along the upper tile to establish the horizonal base line. Place a level at the base-line point and draw a horizontal line across the side wall. Transfer this line onto the end walls. Make all guide lines dark so you can see them after applying adhesive to the walls.

Establish the verticle tile alignment using the tiles themselves as a guide. Cut a scrap 1x2 board so you can wedge it between the end walls to hold a row of tiles along the side wall at the top of the tub. Arrange full-size tiles behind the board to fill the space, leaving gaps of equal width, at least 2 inches wide, at each end to be filled with tiles cut to fit.

Mark a grout line between two tiles at the center of the wall. Remove the board and tiles so you can draw a heavy plumb line vertically through this mark to establish vertical alignment. Apply tile adhesive to the side wall with a grooved trowel, making sure you can clearly see the vertical and base lines through the advesive strip.

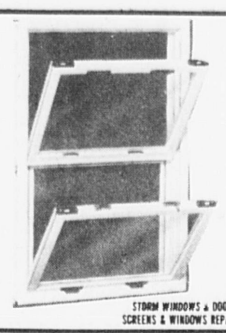

Install the first tile by pressing it into the adhesive and twisting it slightly back and forth. Align it under the horizontal base line on one side of the vertical line. The tile will not slip. Fill out the row of tiles below the base line and then do the row above it.

Measure the gap at the corner and, using a tile cutter or a glass cutter and steel straightedge, trim the end tiles 1/8 inch short for easy fitting. Finish cut tile edges with 36-grit abrasive to avoid cutting fingers. Notch tiles to fit around pipes using a carbide-coated round tile-cutting blade in a hacksaw. After installing all the tiles, let the adhesive cure for 48 hours.

Mix grout to a heavy whipped cream consistency. Working in areas of 15 to 20 square feet, apply the grout with a rubber-faced trowel. Use firm strokes to drive grout completely into joints. Go over each joint with a 1/2 inch diameter wooden dowel to compact the grout and give each joint a neatly finished appearance.

When all joints are filled, wipe excess grout of the tile face with the rubber trowel or a wet sponge. When grout begins to dry — in 10 to 15 minutes — it forms a hazy surface on the tile. Buff this off with cheesecloth or a soft cotton rag.

The final step is to damp-cure the grout. Completely soak all joints with a wet sponge every eight hours for 72 hours. Then fill the tub with water and caulk the space between the bottom row of tile and the tub rim using white silicone tub caulk. Use the caulk to seal openings around all faucets and shower heads. Check for leaks carefully and seal any you find.

"CUSTOMERIZED KITCHENS"

Over the past few years the term "Custom Kitchen" has taken on a new meaning. Through the development of space-age adhesives, companies like Norwood's LOWE CONTRACTING CORP. have developed systems to employ cabinet refacing in many remodeling jobs that at one time lent themselves only to total replacement of the kitchen cabinetry. In many instances LOWE CONTRACTING can alter or add cabinets and reface those that need no changes thereby avoiding the complete replacement formerly needed. Thus "CUSTOMERIZED KITCHENS" where the kitchen plan is tailored to the needs of the customer, by installing FULL CUSTOM CABINETRY, replacing with STOCK or a "CUSTOMERIZED" combination as described.
Drop by our showroom at the corner of Dean and Washington St., Norwood or call 769-2297 and talk to one of our reps. We'd like to show you how "CUSTOMERIZING" can work for you.

Liven up dull bathroom

When home owners think of interior design and decorating, the bathroom may be the most neglected room in the house.

But a bathroom does not have to be drab to be functional. According to some home decorating experts, home owners can liven up a dull bathroom without any reconstruction or extensive remodeling.

The most basic decorating tool to brighten and enlarge a bathroom is a high-gloss pastel paint.

"The popular powder room colors this year are warm colors such as peach and yellow," said Judy Cole, a Costa Mesa, Calif., interior designer. "Of course, mauve and cream remain perennial favorites for most residential bathroom color schemes."

The use of wallpaper can make a bold statement — alone or in combination with painted walls. Shiny or textured wallpaper is a good option for problem walls that have cracks, bumps or many layers of wallpaper and paint on top of them. A combination of painted walls with wallpaper borders in complementary or contrasting colors can give a room a new look.

According to Barbara Winfield, interior design editor of 1,001 Home Ideas, wallpaper borders can be purchased in 6-inch and 10-inch widths for use at chair-rail level — 3 feet off the floor — or at the wall-ceiling border. Small flower patterns or stenciled patterns are among the most popular wallpaper border motifs.

For home owners who are unhappy with the color of their bathroom tiles but cannot afford the time and expense of removing and replacing them, Winfield suggests painting the tiles a solid color with special epoxy paint made for tiles.

Once you've selected your bathroom color scheme, the next step is to consider decorating tips to visually enlarge the room and give it personality.

Cole suggests installing mirrors across one wall of the bathroom, such as above the sink or vanity area, to achieve the appearance of a large room. Mirrored hanging cabinets above a towel rack or toilet also can add to the room's size.

Windows and skylights are other often-forgotten ways to decorate the bathroom. While curtains may not be practical due to the high moisture level in shower areas, a variety of window treatments are available to integrate a window or skylight into the overall design scheme.

The most common window treatments, pleated shades and thin blinds, can be color coordinated to the room's paint or wallpaper.

Another window treatment alternative is the use of a stained-glass look to add color and privacy to any bathroom while allowing natural light to shine through.

"We have requests for the stained-glass look from home owners who want to turn bathroom windows with unsightly views into decorating assets," said Barry Rupp, president of Stained Glass Overlay Inc., a Costa Mesa, Calif., company that manufactures a simulated stained-glass product.

For the shower area, choose a shower curtain that ties the room together — either a solid color or a print to match the wallpaper or tile design. Shower curtains with inner linings add a touch of elegance to any bathroom.

One suggestion for glass or Plexiglas shower stalls is to create a stained-glass design motif directly on the shower stall surface. The colors in the design are outlined in genuine lead on one side of the glass, giving the appearance and texture of traditional stained glass.

Of course, one of the easiest ways to update a bathroom color scheme is by changing the color of towels and accent pieces.

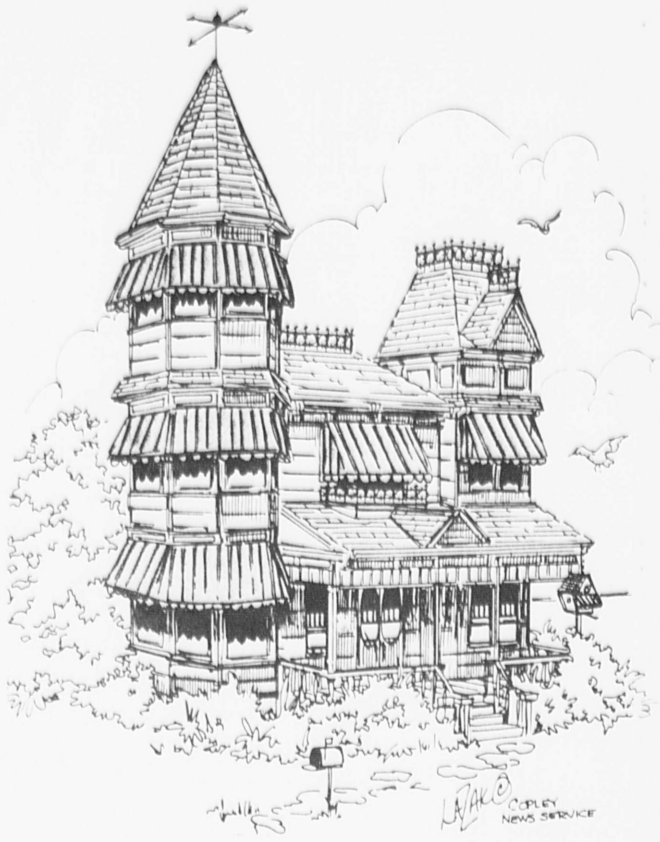

For towels, choose vibrant colors that complement or contrast with the most prominent color in the bathroom. Chose compatible colors for the floor mat or carpeting.

Use plastic or wicker tissue holders, makeup caddies, soap dishes and waste baskets in a variety of colors to bring a coordinated look to any bathroom.

For a personal touch, home decorators suggest adding plants to the bathroom. A corner hanging plant or a plant on a shelf or toilet tank brings the outdoors inside with minimal care involved.

Awnings help save energy

By Eric Jude
Copley News Service

A sunny Monday morning on Main Street U.S.A. Mr. Ordinary Store Owner stands in front of his shop with a long steel rod and cranks open the awning to start another day of business.

It's a scene you'd expect to see in a Norman Rockwell painting. However, this American "tradition" soon may become outdated.

Not the awnings — their energy-efficient usefulness long has been appreciated.

What will become outdated are the hand cranks, according to the spokesmen. Today's awnings are motorized to open and close at the touch of a button to let in sunlight or to provide shade as needed.

Shading devices such as awnings can lower indoor temperatures by as much as 15 degrees, according to spokesmen for Somfy Systems Inc., a worldwide manufacturer of motors for shading devices and retractable awnings. On a day when it's 85 degrees outdoors, for example, shading devices can reduce indoor temperatures to 70 degrees. This reduction in temperature can make any interior comfortable enough to go without air conditioning — at least part of the time.

Many home owners also use awnings and other shading devices such as rolling shutters to save energy. In addition, awnings and rolling shutters provide privacy and security and help to prevent fabrics and carpeting from fading because of exposure to sunlight.

Awnings and exterior rolling shutters generally are considered the most effective window treatments for reducing heat buildup in a room caused by sunlight, according to the Somfy spokesmen. Interior shades, blinds and curtains tend to be less efficient because they are inside the home. They block the sunlight but not its radiant heat.

While awnings and rolling shutters have been around for a long time, motors are just beginning to become popular. Author David Bonynge, who has written a book on remote-control gadgets, expects the devices to sell well once consumers realize what they're capable of doing. In addition to being operated at the touch of a button, shading devices can have motors linked to sunlight and wind sensors so that awnings are extended automatically on sunny days. The awnings close automatically so that they are not torn apart if a storm begins with high winds.

Home gardens can improve your neighborhood

By Frank Spotnitz
UPI Feature Writer

NEW YORK — More and more city dwellers are putting down their newspapers, turning off their televisions, and picking up hoes and shovels to help make their neighborhoods a little better place to live.

The trend, known as urban horticulture, has its roots in the 1890s when the mayor of Detroit helped solve a food shortage by opening up city land to vegetable gardeners. The idea was revived during World War I, again in The Great Depression and during World War II.

In New York City, where today more than 11,000 people spend three to five hours a week at 450 gardens occupying 155 city acres, the concept again was picked up by a volunteer group called the Green Guerrillas in the early 1970s.

They laid the groundwork for a U.S. Agriculture Department program to encourage urban gardening. It has spread from one city in 1976 to 21 cities, including Denver, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, Boston and San Francisco. Another 50 cities are engaged in similar programs without any federal support.

Urban gardening experts say that in addition to providing inexpensive food, the gardens reinforce family relationships and enrich the quality of life for city youngsters, many of whom have never seen the countryside.

"People can't live in the city without nature and nature can't live in the city without people," said Tom Fox, executive director of the Neighborhood Open Space Coalition.

"A lot of kids don't know that food comes out of the ground and milk comes out of a cow. They think it comes out of a store."

Equally important for a child is that gardening is "a one-to-one experience," he said. "You put a seed in the ground and three weeks later a sprout comes out. You're not a powerless member of the world anymore. You have the ability to shape the world around you."

Charles Mazza, an original member of the Green Guerrillas who now works at Cornell University as the urban horticulture program leader, said the gardens usually are in low-income neighborhoods.

Members of the community seek city permission to use the land for gardening if it is city-owned, or negotiate with the landlord if it is privately held. More than 30 lots have been purchased collectively by neighbors who either contributed money or obtained grants.

Most lots are used both for vegetable and flower gardening and include a play area for children.

Mazza said his program aids urban gardeners with everything from telling them "which end of the seed is up and how you pick a cucumber" to finding space or needed materials.

"We also encourage better nutritions, teaching people how to preserve food and how to get the greatest amount of value from the food," he said.

In a newly published book, "The Struggle for Space," participants were asked why they entered the urban gardening program. The survey found the primary motivation was to help clean up the neighborhood and the second was to provide a safe place for children to play.

If successful in these goals, gardeners help alleviate pressure on municipal budgets in providing sanitation and recreation area, Fox said.

Fox predicted the urban gardening phenomenon will continue to mushroom, although many must overcome attempts by developers to purchase the land once it has been made attractive by the gardeners' efforts.

He said support among community businesses, foundations and banks is growing, however.

"Even it developers aren't concerned with it because of short-term concerns, the bank wil be because somebody's going to be holding the note to the building for the next 20 years and if the neighborhood's quality of life is good, it's good for their investment," Fox said.

Tips on products and home repair

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

DEAR CONSUMER REPORTS — I am interested in purchasing a headset for a portable walk-around FM radio. I've heard that they can cause ear injuries. Are there any on the market that are safe?

Dear reader — Consumer Reports' electronics engineers say that nothing about the headphones used with portable stereo players (or home systems, for that matter) is inherently ear-damaging; it's just the sound levels at which many people play them.

If you use an "open-air" headphone (such as the lightweight models that are now popular) and keep the sound level low enough so that the loud parts of the music don't obscure moderately loud speech a few feet away, that's probably safe enough for several hours use per day.

Dear Consumer Reports — I have become very dissatisfied with how my full-size, but lightweight, car handles when driving under slippery road conditions. I'm considering purchasing a new one that better fits my needs for driving during inclement weather. Of all the cars you have tested — both foreign and domestic — which have you found offered the best handling, traction and maneuverability under slippery road conditions?

Dear reader — Consumer Reports' auto engineers say that the best cars they've found for slippery conditions such as you'd find in snowy or icy weather are usually the small- to mid-sized, lower-powered cars with front-wheel-drive.

Dear Consumer Reports — I have a fairly new gas steam boiler that came with the house I just bought. (The hot water is heated separately.) My problem is with the size of the non-adjustable pilot. Compared to the small pilot of a range, the medium-sizeH blow torch in the boiler is costly to operate during warmer months when the furnace is dormant.

Are there any disadvantages to turning the pilot off during milder weather and can they be overc/me? For instance, will the absence of heat from the pilot accelerate oxidation of both the inside and outside of the boiler that will shorten its life? Will shutting the pilot off loosen gaskets due to the additional cooling contraction?

Dear reader — Consumer Reports' engineers say that unleqs your boiler is in an extremely damp location, you should turn off the pilot in the off-season.

Police, court briefs

Wallet taken from purse at Star Market

CHESTNUT HILL —A Newton woman told police Saturday her wallet was stolen while she shopped at the Star Market, 1040 Boylston St. According to police, a brown wallet containing $40 was taken Friday at 9 p.m. from a tote bag in her shopping cart. In addition to the cash, the wallet contained a credit card and personal papers, police said.

Male jogger exposes himself in Waban

WABAN — A female jogger on Beacon Street in Waban Square told police a 25-year-old man followed her last Wednesday with his fly unzipped, police said. The woman, who said she turned when she heard a noise behind her at 9:50 p.m., described the suspect as five-foot eight of average build, according to police.

Coin collector loses $425 antique coins

WEST NEWTON — A numismatist living on Eddy Street reported last Wednesday losing a $425 collection of antique and mint coins, police said. Among the items taken from the front living room of the home were an 1853 penny worth $10, several proof sets and uncirculated coins, according to police. The theft was reported at 2:17 p.m.

Landscaper on probation for damages

WALTHAM — A Newton landscaper received an 18-month suspended sentence and two-year probation last week for a malicious destruction of property charge in Waltham District Court, according to court records.

Records show Enzo G. Dethomasis, of 91 Jackson Road, admitted sufficient facts to warrant a guilty finding to a charge of malicious destruction of property worth more than $100.

An unarmed burglary charge against Dethomasis was dismissed.

The Jackson Road resident was ordered to undergo alcohol counseling and pay resitution for the two wooden doors he allegedly damaged. He was also fined $25 for the Victim-Witness Fund.

6 cars' tires deflated in Newton Corner

NEWTON CORNER — The air was let out of tires on six cars last week parked on Washington Street between Jewett and Thornton streets, police said. According to police, two tires on three cars and one tire on three other cars were deflated between midnight and 1 a.m.

Wallet stolen during muffler repairs

CHESTNUT HILL — A Lexington man on Saturday reported the theft of a wallet from his car while it was at Speedy Muffler King for repairs. The wallet contained $50-75 in cash as well as credit and bank cards, police said.

Stereo taken from car parked at mall

CHESTNUT HILL — A $1,000 cassette stereo was reported stolen from a 1983 Saab parked at the Chestnut Hill mall, police said. A West Roxbury resident told police the Blaupunkt stereo was taken between 3:20 p.m. and 4:10 p.m. after the driver's side window was smashed.

Domestic dispute results in arrest

NEWTON — A School Street man was arrested Friday night on a disorderly conduct charge following a domestic dispute, police said. Time of the arrest was 7:59 p.m., according to police.

Robbers steal Mercedes keys, silver

NEWTON CORNER — The living and dining rooms of a Marlboro Street home were reportedly robbed last week of items that included a sterling silver Paul Revere bowl, a silver bracelet and a set of keys to a Mercedes, police said.

Also taken were two miniature paintings, a family photograph and a clock, according to police. Police said a man living at the house awoke by a barking dog. He discovered a glass door to the living room open and the cellar lights left on, police said.

VCR, receiver stolen from stereo shop

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — A man ran out of Stereo Shops of Mass Inc., 244 Needham St., Friday with a stereo receiver and cassette recorder, police said. The suspect jumped in a red Porsche with the equipment shortly after 4 p.m. and drove away, according to police. Police described the suspect as a black male, six-feet, one-inch tall and weighing 170 pounds.

$655 portable generator taken Thursday

NEWTON CENTRE — A portable generator on Friday was reported stolen from a shed behind a North Street home, police said. According to police, the $655 McCullock generator was stolen sometime Thursday from a shed in the backyard.

1974 Datsun 260Z stolen from mall lot

CHESTNUT HILL — A car owned by a Dedham woman was reported stolen Friday afternoon from the Chestnut Hill Mall parking lot, police said. The woman's 1974 Datsun 260Z, valued at $2,500, was reportedly taken between noon and 4 p.m.

Thieves steal dirt bikes from garage

NEWTONVILLE — A pair of dirt bikes were reported stolen Sunday from the garage of a Madison Avenue home, police said. According to police, a Kawasaki and Yamaha were taken between 10:30 a.m. Saturday and 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

Officer succeeds with good memory

NEWTON — After 31 years and eight months, Officer Michael A. Volpe is retiring from the Newton Police Department.

"Officer Volpe distinguished himself as an outstanding police officer, at all times a gentleman and a fine representative of this department at all times," Chief William F. Quinn said.

Born in Salem, Ohio, Volpe's parents moved to Newton when he was 6. He graduated from Newton High in 1943 and served in the U.S. Army, mostly in Germany. He joined the Newton Police Department in 1953, working the front desk much of the time and doubling as dispatcher, ambulance driver, Emergency Medical Technician, computer operator and, for a while, as a patrolman.

One night, while driving to the station for a 1 a.m. shift, Volpe noted a station wagon in the Newton Centre business district on Sumner Street and, out of force of habit, he memorized the license plate. A short time later, the Newton Centre Square officer reported a break-in and a missing safe at the same address.

Volpe recalled the license number and he and two other Newton police officers, having traced the registration number, travelled to Saugus, arrested two men and recovered the safe from the rear of the station wagon.

Mike Volpe would not agree that he had total recall — only a good memory for certain facts.

Volpe was repeatedly elected by other officers to the board of directors of both the Police Benefit Association and Memorial Association. He was also on the Grievance Committee of the Newton Police Union.

He is active in the Newton Lions Club, where he is vice-president and active in fund raising for eye research.

For the past 12 years, he has been active in American Legion Post #440 where he has served in all chairs, as a member of the Executive Board and as a member of the Board of Directors of the Building Committee.

According to Nick Gential, adjutant of Post 440, Volpe's work with Beano has resulted in over $250,000 being distributed to various charities.

"Mike's first interest was with the Cerebral Palsy Center here," Gentile said, "and his interest grew as he worked with the United Cerebral Palsy Group. He also conducts a special Beano night for the handicapped, C.P. clients and the Independent Living units in Newton, with the post providing refreshments and cash gifts. Mike doesn't do it alone, but he is a moving force in our organization.

On July 29, according to Gentile, "through Mike's efforts, a 25-inch television and a video recorder were presented to the Cerebral Palsy Center. All in all, Mike may have retired from the Police Department, but he hasn't retired from his charity efforts."

Senior Corner

Retirement and work

(The following is a regular feature compiled by the City of Newton's Department of Social Services.)

Q. As a retired person, I think I'm a little bit more retired than I want to be. I think I would like a part-time job, maybe 10 hours a week. Where should I start looking?

A. A good place to start might be with Al Green at Newton City Hall. He's in the Department of Human Services (552-7170) where he runs the Senior Citizen Employment Program. He's been there for years and years and has a lot of contacts out in the community.

Q. How do you know about his program? Did you get a job through him?

A. No, but last year after I got home from the hospital, I hired someone through him to help me keep the house in order until I felt better.

Q. How much did you have to pay him for finding this person for you?

A. Not a cent. There are no fees, not for the employer or for the employee.

Q. What about W-4 forms and all that stuff?

A. I asked Mr. Green about that when I hired the person who helped me. He told me that all financial arrangements like per hour salary and tax details would be made by the person I hired.

Q. Before I retired I was a secretary. I wonder if he gets much demand for that sort of work?

A. I'm sure he does.

Q. I wouldn't want to commit myself to working full-time again. I wonder if he has something for a few hours a day or just a couple of days a week?

A. Give him a call. That's the best way to find out.

Q. I was a secretary for what felt like forever and a day. I might be interested in doing something less demanding. I wonder what kinds of jobs he gets requests for?

A. He told me he has listings for people who are handymen, homemakers, drivers, plumbers, home companions, babysitters, house and window cleaners, sales people, bank guards, tellers, hotel workers, gardeners, furniture repairmen, masons, office workers and many others.

Q. A driver, maybe that's something I'd like to do. What do you think?

A. The best thing to do is to go in and see Al personally. You'd be amazed at the number of things you know how to do. You bring to the job market a lifetime of experiences along with your commitment to your job.

If you have any questions, give Al Green a call at the Department of Human Services at Newton City Hall, 552-7170, Monday through Thursday from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Newton League participates in nuclear workshop

NEWTON — League of Women Voters of Newton members recently joined League representatives from all over New England to train in techniques of nuclear negotiation and crisis control at the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University.

The League of Women Voters of Massachusetts and the Nuclear Negotiation Project, Harvard Law School, presented a workshop in direct response to the newly raised question about the risk of nuclear war: "Regardless of the number of weapons in the arsenals, are we prepared to prevent an accidental nuclear war?"

Dr. William L. Ury, director of the Nuclear Negotiation Project, was the keynote speaker at the seminar. Dr. Ury is the co-author of the best-selling book, "Getting to Yes," and the newly released "Beyond the Hotline."

League participants in the seminar are prepared to speak about these plans in their local communities to describe how crisis control centers could work and how they can prevent crisis from happening.

Kidney Foundation hosts poolside auction in Newtonite's home

NEWTON — The Women's Committee of the National Kidney Foundation of Massachusetts held a poolside auction at the home of its president, Mrs. Milton Feinson on Sunday, July 14. A wonderful time was had by the 70 people who attended, and several great bargains were taken. Host Milton Feinson ruled as auctioneer and made sure that the Kidney Foundation earned its share of large contributions. Auction planners Evelyne Feinson, Mrs. Stanley Demerer and Chairwomen Mrs. Charles Abramson and Mrs. Howard Segall officiated and made sure guests were comfortable and well fed.

Auction gems included a micro-wave oven and a gift certificate for dinner at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel. The donated items, which included signed artwork, radio's and flower arrangements brought thousands of dollars into the charity's coffers.

While bargain hunters collected their purchases, a delicious lunch was provided, and guests cooled off in the pool, or relaxed at the hot tub. Patrons of this exciting summertime event had but one question as the afternoon came to an end...When will the next poolside auction take place?

A mammogram can detect a cancer no larger than this dot. And when it's found that early, it's easy to treat and cure. It doesn't have to become a large problem, one that kills 37,000 women a year.
The American Cancer Society recommends that women between the ages of 35 and 39 – younger if there's a family history of breast cancer – have a baseline mammogram, and women 40 to 49 should have a mammogram every year or two. Once a woman reaches age 50, she should have one every year.
Consult your doctor, and then come to Precheck/The Mammography Center. We provide information and a comfortable, supportive atmosphere for a simple, safe mammogram. It's a small test that can make a big difference.

Neville Frankel is Vice President of Financial Planning Associates Inc., a Boston and New York affiliate of Confidential Planning Network, an international network of more than 120 financial planning firms. Direct questions to Frankel, care of this publication.

Dear Mr. Frankel:

The business I started 40 years ago now employs 18, including two of my children. I'm 63 and can afford to retire — and my family encourages it since I have had some health problems. But most of my customers go back a long way with me and I'm afraid they would leave if I weren't there.

My sons and I have been arguing about this lately, and have reached an impasse. The business will be theirs, and I don't want to stand in the way. But neither do I want to jeopardize their futures by leaving before the time is right. I suppose I'm reluctant to give it all up, having put my life into it, but that's a personal issue. Can you give me a straight answer from a business standpoint?

D.J. Framingham

Dear D.J.:

What you describe is a common problem in the life of any owner-managed company. When should the boss hand over the reins? All kinds of issues are involved, personal and otherwise. But the basic question is whether you should give up control, and if yes, then how do you achieve a smooth transition? Should you do it tentatively, slowly, or should you make a quick break?

The Conference Board, a business-research organization, has studied 20 good-sized family controlled companies that have gone through this kind of transitional crisis. It's report suggests four requirements for a successful transition:

-That the company founders relinquish control while they are still in full command of their abilities.

-That the withdrawal be final, leaving no doubts among employees, customers and suppliers.

-That the commitment be made publicly.

-That the change of command be accompanied by a formal statement of management objectives, policies, strategy and accountability.

Often the gravest problem in transforming an owner-managed business into one under professional command is the founder's family. The Conference Board report offers several suggestions for dealing with it:

Draw clear lines of demarcation between the family and the business; that is to say, between ownership and management. Make sure that family members who are to assume business responsibility undergo rigorous training to prepare them for it.

If necessary, set up a system for providing support to family members not equipped to assume important duties in the firm. But whatever is done, the report cautions, keep incompetents out of positions of major company performance.

The Conference Board is at 845 Third Ave., New York, NY 10022.

Highlands jazz set for Aug. 14 behind bakery

NEWTON — On Aug. 14 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. the Newton Highlands Jazz Series will present "John Harris and Shine" behind the Bread and Chocolate Bakery at Lincoln Plaza, 4 Hartford St., in Newton Highlands.

The free concert will offer popular standards, blues, Latin jazz, fusion and some original compositions.

John Harris is a bass guitarist and music instructor who has performed with his group "Shine" for several years throughout the New England area. He is currently teaching at Tufts University, the John Payne Music Center and Milton Academy. For more information, please call 965-3100 or 965-4424.

Big contribution

A check for $1,200 is presented to Oscar Wasserman (second right), Newton Fund for the Arts (FAN) chairman and Barbara Levy, co-chairperson, by the Newton Marriott. Making the presentation are Olof Arnheim (second left), general manager of the Newton Marriott and John Foley, director of marketing. The Marriott donated $10 to FAN for every coupon presented for lunch or dinner in the hotel's S & S Livestock Co. restaurant.

Apply for art funding with Rec Dept

NEWTON — The Newton Arts Lottery Council has Massachusetts Arts Lottery grant applications available through its office at the Newton Parks and Recreation Department.

Applications can be secured in person or will be mailed upon receipt of a self-addressed stamped (44¢) legal-sized envelope to the Newton Arts Lottery Council, 70 Crescent Street, Auburndale.

Application deadline is Sept. 24. Applications will be reviewed at a public meeting at City Hall, Oct. 22.

Annual special olympics games to be held

NEWTON — The League School of Boston will hold its annual "Special Olympics" event on Tuesday, August 13.

Students who are handicapped with autism and related disorders compete with their own previous scores in adapted physical education events such as: an obstacle course, partner event, softball throw, shuttlerun, frisbee or ball throw, and broad jump.

Students at League School range in age from 3 to 22; there are approximately 65 students from over 30 communities in the Greater Boston area who are referred here for special education programming unavailable elsewhere.

Rain date will be Wednesday, Aug. 14. For more information, call 964-3260.

South has proven softball squad

When it came down to the wire, Coach Larry Caranfa and his Newton South softballers usually had luck on their side.

"There were games we won by luck and there were games we lost by bad luck," Caranfa said of his just-completed rookie year as coach. "Overall though, I'd have to say that we had our share of good luck."

In one-run games, the Lions were 4-1 and in two-run matches they were 2-3. Six out of 10 ain't bad luck.

Why, with two games remaining in the season, South needed one win to qualify for the fast-approaching state tourney. How did they do it?

Holding on tight to a 14-8 lead going into the bottom of the last inning, South was hit for four runs by host Wayland before capitalizing on Lady Luck to end the game.

Wayland had runners at the corners with two outs when a ground ball hit to the infield was misplayed and overthrown to first base. The ball, however, did not skitter into foul territory but hit the Wayland base coach and remained playable. First baseman Liz Shiman picked the ball up and threw to second base to nail the unsuspecting runner and end the game.

Forgetting statistics, what Caranfa hopes to put out on the playing field next season is a club that can top this year's 12-8 tournament team.

"I've learned some things (this past season)," said the rookie skipper. "I've been through the league once and I know some of the different coaches' strategies. I've seen things and we'll improve."

While pitching will be the key, Caranfa said that if he can pick up "two or three batters" South could be in business next season.

"We're really looking for hitting," he said. "We've got experienced pitching and a good defense with a lot of confidence."

Returning starters Julie Blankstein (7-4) and Maria Crovo (5-4) will be back on the mound next season, with a full year of pitching to their credit.

"Confidence is a very important factor," Caranfa said. "I'm hoping that makes us stronger. I know I'll feel a lot more comfortable with our pitching next year."

Blankstein, just finishing her freshman year, and Crovo, a junior last season, are both control-style pitchers.

Leading both the offense and defense will be returning tri-captain and senior-to-be Katrina Antonellis. The three-year veteran hit .350 during the first half of the season, then went on to finish the season by hitting .510 in her final 10 games.

"You can't say enough about her (Antonellis)," the coach said of his shortstop. "She's a team leader by example. She's got real good range and a strong arm. She's a quite leader, the do-as-I-do type."

Returning catcher Dede Theodore, who led the league in batting (.560) before slumping in the second half of the season, finished with a .466 average and team-high six home runs.

Only a sophomore this past year, Theodore was counted on for much of the power-hitting as her stats showed. Along with her six home runs, the junior-to-be cracked out 21 singles, five doubles, two triples, and walked 16 times.

Antonellis' shortstop position and Theodore's receiving duties are secure, but despite welcoming 12 returners, Caranfa is keeping his options open in respect to where girls will play.

Aside from Antonellis, probably the most invaluable contributor to next year's squad is expected to be junior Michelle Myers. Caranfa calls her "Miss Everything," which just about says it all.

"She could play the outfield, infield, she can catch....she's a great utility player," says the coach.

Myers cracked a bone in her ankle during a scrimmage game this spring and Caranfa said "it seemed like she was gone for 15 years. I wanted her back so bad. With runners on base she's the type of girl you want at the plate."

Sophomore Jenny Lerman, a .367 hitter, roamed the outfield this past spring but could pop up at third base next year, replacing the 110-percent Award winner and recently graduated Shiman.

"Jenny's a great competitor," says Caranfa. "She's always got her head in the game, she knows what's going on."

Because of Lerman's heads-up play and her clutch offensive prowess, she will team with Antonellis and Sandy Bonazoli as next years' tri-captains.

Bonazoli will play the outfield where Caranfa said "she can really knock the ball down and get it in quick."

Junior Jessica O'Lansky will probably play center field, and with her healthy for an entire season the defense should shine in the outfield.

Juniors Laura Baumberg and Joanne Chao, regulars on the squad this season, will most likely split the duties in right field.

Stacey Hackell and Diane Sostillio both graduated, so their infield spots will be up for grabs next spring. Ann Otero, a semi-regular this past year, could fill Sostillio's second base void. A very good bunter, Otero could see action in either the leadoff or the number-two spot in the batting order if she makes the team.

Tammy Barone, a junior, played back-up to Hackell at first base and defensively, Caranfa said he thinks the junior can do the job.

"She's got a real good glove," he said of Barone. "She's a strong defensive player who has to work on her hitting."

Warriors, Rice detour Mosca in National windup

NEWTON — It was a nice cap to the season even if they didn't qualify for the playoffs.

The Auburndale Warriors went out fighting Friday, exploding early for nine first-inning runs, to wipe out Mosca Club, 11-1 in National League action played at Lincoln Park.

With the victory, Auburndale pulled within one point of fourth-place Boys' Club as the season ended.

The loss was a tough one for Mosca, which needed a win to clinch second place and a home field advantage in the playoffs. Instead, the loss keeps the Club in third place entering postseason.

The game could have been called after one inning as the Warriors went haywire, scoring their first seven batsmen to come out of the frame on top, 9-0.

Jim Giddon followed with the game's only extra-base hit, a two-run double to center field.

Run-scoring singles by Mike Solomon and Tom Bachner, and an error induced by Jamie Rice made for a 6-0 lead before Perry started the inning all over, connecting for a two-run single to left field.

Meanwhile, Jamie Rice was having a ball on the mound for Auburndale. The 17-year-old righty scattered four singles and struck out five to post the six inning victory.

Oakley wins

Oakley Spa just barely held off St. Bernard's for a 12-11 decision Friday at Burke Field to clinch the fourth playoff spot in the Murphy Division.

Art Magni pitched the first six innings for Oakley Spa, but because of a league ruling couldn't pitch in the sevénth. He left the game with an 11-5 lead.

Ken Kazarozian took over on the mound and wran into trouble. He was replaced by Joe MacLaughlin with two out, the bases loaded and the score at 11-9. St. Bernard's tied the score at 11-all.

Oakley came to bat in the bottom of the seventh and pulled out the victory when Mark Kazarozian led off with a single, stole second and scored when Josh Logan's ground ball to shortstop resulted in an overthrow of first base.

Mosca defense key

Although being outhit by a 6-4 margin, Mosca Club played flawless defensive ball which proved to be the difference in its uphill 8-1 victory over Our Lady's Thursday at Lincoln Park. Our Lady's committed seven errors and gave up six walks.

Our Lady's grabbed a 1-0 lead in the third inning. Eric Goulst led off with a single and was forced at second on a grounder to short by Andy Lyons. With two out, Aldo Calcagni doubled a foot inside the right field line to bring home Lyons.

That slender advantage held up until the fifth when the Mosca Club cashed in on errors and walks to gain the upper hand. Jay Jewett and Steve Stoller got aboard on successive errors by the shortstop to get things started.

Consecutive bases on balls doled out to John Glick and John Fletcher brought in the tying run. Kevin Houlihan followed with a two-run single, and a throwing error on the relay coming from the outfield netted the other run.

Warriors in upset

A six-run fourth inning led the Auburndale Warriors well on their way to a mighty 9-4 victory over Our Lady's Tuesday at the West Newton Common.

Four straight singles opened the doors in the fourth inning as the Warriors (8-8-1) boosted its lead to 7-0. Steve Bliss had opened the inning with a single to left field but was thrown out at second trying to stretch the hit.

Jamie Rice singled and Mike Solomon walked to get things going before successive basehits by Jimmy Rizza, Tom Casey, Dave LeConti, and Steve MacKay crossed four, rapid-fire runs.

Mosca triumphs

John Fletcher scored on a wild pitch and Steve Altman sacrificed home an insurance run in the seventh inning as Mosca Club dodged a onrushing comeback to post a 8-6 victory over Boys' Club at Burke Field.

After taking a 6-2 lead, Mosca was ambushed by a Boys' Club rally in the fifth and sixth innings which tied the game and needed the final ups to post the win.

Fletcher tripled to open the Mosca seventh and came home on a wild pitch to break the 6-6 tie. Greg Manthei then reached on an infield error, stole second, and was bunted to third by Jay Jewett.

Altman then flied out to center to plate the insurance run.

Jon Glick pitched for the win, finishing up strong. In the bottom of the seventh, Glick struck out Alex DeNucci and Mark Cadman to lead off before Bob Connerney grounded towards second base. Second baseman Manthei made a diving stop and threw Connerney out at first.

St. Bernard's on top

Although St. Bernard's had the edge most of the way in this National League battle for first place, it was no walk through the park.

Our Lady's came up with five fourth-inning runs to take a temporary lead over the opponents before St. Bernard's answered with three go-ahead runs to take an 8-6 victory Monday.

St. Bernard's responded with some gift runs in the bottom of the fourth inning. Kevin Hill singled, Fritz Phillips reached on an error, and David Boule walked to load the bases before Our Lady's put Greg Larson on the mound.

The righthander walked Greg Rutan to force in the game-tyer before Leon Bablouzian forced an infield error that brought the go-ahead run home. Ben Adner walked to force in the insurance marker.

Central LLB champs

Sostillio cheered at Westboro

WESTBORO — It's never too late to say "thank you" and for Joe Sostillio, the holder of more midget car wins at the Westboro Speedway than any other driver and the holder of AAA big car records set during the 1940-50 era.

The race fans and members of the National Old Timers Auto Racing Club turned out on Saturday night to honor this Newton driver who again sat behind the wheel of a midget race car and took a number of pace laps around the one-quarter mile oval as the fans stood and cheered.

A great turnout for a great driver and gentleman, it was also a race date that will be remembered by John Dennencourt of Clinton, who took his second super street stock win of the 1985 season and in a 20-lap feature that took four tries before the first lap had been completed.

The pre-race favorite and going for his third win in a row, Greg Warsycha, never had that carck for his third checkered flag as he was involved in one if the first lap accidents which put his race car out f commission.

Rec swimmers finish with 2 wins

The Newton Recreation Swim Team closed out its season recently with a pair of victories, routing both Framingham (220-171) and Sherborn (217-168). The Garden City swimmers boosted their record to 9-1.

At Framingham, Eileen Walsh bettered her 13 & 14 butterfly record with a tie of 31.31. The boys' graduated medley, consisting of Jim Robertson, Scott Stover, Michael Beal and Steven Beal, bettered its record with a time of 58.86.

Three records were broken in the meet at Sherborn. Miriam Kornitzer cracked a pair of records, winning the butterfly in 35.08 and the freestyle in 30.77 in the Girls' 11 & 12 bracket. Eileen Walsh bettered her butterfly record with a 30.91 clocking.

The 9 & 10 girls swept the butterfly with Kathleen Snyder and Emily Grantham. The 11 & 12 boys were 1-2 with Michael Beal and Clem Roberts. Eric and Josh Osterberg swept the freestyle in the 8 and Under grouping.

The 11 & 12 girls' Miriam Kornitzer and Lauren MacKay swept the freestyle event. Martha Quebec had three wins for the 9 & 10 girls, scoring in the graduated medley, breaststroke and freetsyle relay. Kathleen Snyder ahd three wins for the 9 & 10 girls in the butterfly, freetsyle and freestyle relay. Jim Robertson was a triple winner, copping the butterfly, freestyle and freestyle relay.

The mile swim was held at Sherborn's Farm Pond. The Newton girls placed fifth out of 13 teams and the boys were sixth.

Jim Robertson's third place finish was the highest ever for Newton.

Bentley hoop staff plans clinic

The Bentley College basketball coaching staff will sponsor a free basketball clinic for all local recreation departments on Monday, Aug. 12.

The clinic will run from 10 a.m. to noon at the college's Dana Physical Education Center. There will be no admission charge and the public is invited.

Conducting the clinic will be men's basketball coach Frank Sullivan and women's basketball coach Kathy Sanborn. Aiding them will be their assistants, Don Beck, Peter Breton, Kiki Papagiotis and Micky McVann.

Sullivan and Sanborn are both entering their second year as head coaches at Bentley. Last winter, they each led their respective teams t a 22-6 record and an NCAA Division II tournament berth.

Tiger stickmen have tough act to follow

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

NEWTON — There was no way Newton North lacrosse coach Rick Clark could have foreseen his club playing for the state championship in 1985 back last winter when he thought about what he had returning. Though he had a little offense back, the defense was totally green.

But when "some guys really came through for us," the Tigers did in fact win the Eastern Mass. championship and go on to play Longmeadow for the state crown last spring. The Western Mass. team dominated that game, an 11-1 affair, but Clark still had to be pretty happy with his club's accomplishments.

"I thought we got the most out of our talent this year," he said. "We had questions at attack, defense and goalie, but the defense turned the tide for us."

Led by guys named Scott Lanciloti, David St. Germain and Scott Hamblett, that group turned into "the best defense in Division I," in the eyes of the coach.

When the year started, those three "jumped in front of other people and dislodged them from their starting berths." They went on to do a superb job.

In fact, Clark wound up with depth as well as talent on defense. Doug Proia came on so strong that he saw just about as much playing time as the starters by year's end. David Redmon, Jim Staley and Tony Mastroianni gave the Tigers a dependable backup crew.

Behind that solid group was goalie Matt Keegan, untested when the season began, but a standout within a short time.

Ironically, that defense, which was so questionable going into last season, will be the strength of the 1986 squad.

Of the starters, only Hamblett graduated. Lanciloti and Redmon will be seniors next spring, with St. Germain (a co-captain-elect) and Proia only juniors.

St. Germain has "unlimited potential," according to the coach. "He could be one of the best we've had." He was voted the team's Most Improved Player. Lanciloti is an excellent one-on-one player, and earned the Big D Award. Redmon's stick is so good that he could moved to attack if need be.

It happened this spring, so it wouldn't be too surprising if once again one or two people came out and pushed their way into jobs next spring. Sophomore Ed Lin and freshmen Dave Pappas and Josh Field all played well for the junior varsity this year. Lin's speed gives him an excellent chance to see some time.

Also back is Keegan, but Clark isn't going to hand the job over just because he's the incumbent. The coach expects junior-to-be Brian Vona to push Keegan. The latter was brilliant at times this year, but Clark is hoping he will iron out some consistency problems.

In addition, if Joe McCormick comes along the way Clark hopes he will, North "might carry three goalies.

"It will be very competitive."

At the other end of the field, the Tigers had some experience going in, but again much of it was untested under fire. People like John Boudreau, John Flynn, Fran Yerardi and Charlie Albanese were varsity veterans, but were mostly back-up players the year before.

"Yerardi surprised the devil out of me," Clark said of the team's leading scorer (37-17-54). "The other guys all took over at key times."

Newton North coach Rick Clark

Albanese wound up swapping places with middie Dan Nardone to get a little more punch in the lineup. Nardone finished third in scoring at 20-12-32.

Kevin McGrath came on strong at the end of the year to provide some extra offense. He wound up being named one of the team's Unsung Heroes. He and Flynn (who played a lot of midfield) each had 22 points, while Boudreau cashed in 29.

Unfortunately, that entire group, with the exception of Flynn, is gone to graduation. Flynn, next spring's other co-captain, will have to shoulder a big burden. Senior-to-be Josh Carpenter saw some varsity playing time, but as his two-goal total shows, he's still very green.

"We've got no one left with experience up there," Clark noted. "We're not sure what we'll do. A lot depends on what people do to improve themselves, in terms of summer leagues, practice, camps, and playing other sports. Competition is the most important thing."

There are some junior varsity players who might step in, but they've got a long way to go. Among them are juniors-to-be Kevin Ackerley, Joe Derubis and Andy Soucie, and sophomores-to-be Rusty Greiff, Steve Plotkin and Tim Connors.

Though team MVP Tom Dalicandro earned All-American honors this year, Clark is quick to admit that overall, "we weren't really a strong midfield team this year."

Losing Dalicandro and Albanese, who combined for 72 points, has got to hurt the offense. Other seniors gone are Paul Healey, an excellent defensive player, Rich Claflin and Joe Oliveto.

Pat Poon, the other Unsung Hero, was only a junior, but he's slated to move this summer so won't be back. He was perhaps the best faceoff man in the league.

Still, the Tigers should be okay at middie, as they "have a number of kids who do have experience."

Flynn has experience of course, but he'll probably be needed more up front.

Otto Mariano saw a good amount of action as a junior, managing seven points. Speedy Mark Adams filled in, and the junior-to-be should be a real asset.

Others who got into a little action are Nick Mariano, Brian Claflin and Kevin Devereaux, who will all be juniors, and Chuck Leone, who'll be a senior.

"All have potential," figures Clark, "the question is how much. Preseason will tell."

Of course, if there's enough improvement from enough people, some may move up to attack to beef up that situation.

"It all depends on how much they improve," said Clark.

Up-and-coming midfielders include senior-to-be Tim Troiano ("a big strong kid"), juniors-to-be Frank McNeil, Dave Brecher, Ali Sakarati, Jeff Shea and Zafir Khan, and soph-to-be Al Clark.

Overall, 1985 was considered a bit of a down year for high school lacrosse, as most schools had little experience back. The situation will be markedly different in '86.

Newton North will face some stiff competition in the fight to repeat. Weymouth North, second in the league, lost only three players.

Former Huskie a snap for Bengals

WILMINGTON, Ohio (UPI) — It may be a snap for rookie Eric Stokes to make the Cincinnati Bengals roster this season.

The sixth-round draft choice from Northeastern appears to be the answer to the Bengals' long snapping problems.

"He's the best we've ever seen," offensive line coach Jim McNally said. "He snaps frozen ropes. We're not trying to coach him much at all."

Adds field goal holder Steve Kreider, "He's the best I've ever seen. I knew it the first time I caught one from him."

Stokes, a native of Ansonia, Conn., still has a lot to learn about becoming an NFL offensive lineman, but he figures to make the team because General Manager Paul Brown has put such a high priority on finding a good deep snapper.

Boys' Club, Troubadour cop pennants

NEWTON — Boys' Club clinched first place in the Copp Division with a 14-8, total-team victory over Abruzzi Club Thursday in the International League.

Five runs in the first inning by Boys' Club and a slow start by Abruzzi was the story as Boys' Club took a 8-0 lead before yielding a run.

In the first, Joe DeNucci and George Haggie both singled to set up George Maxcey, who's basehit drove both runners home. Jay Cappelo walked before two errors brought home two more runs.

Don MacDougal grounded to second base later in the inning to drive in the fifth run.

Troubadour on top

Craig McGary allowed five base runners in three innings, then put down his foot. The 15-year-old righthander retired the final nine batters to lead Troubadour to an 11-3 victory over Post 440 Tuesday, clinching first place in the Murphy Division for the second straight year.

McGary allowed just three hits and walked two as the defense behind him played errorless ball. After the third inning, McGary was perfect, never allowing a runner to reach first base.

The pitcher also contributed on offense, leading a five-run rally in the fifth inning that put the game out of reach. With the bases loed, McGary unleashed a bases clearing double before getting thrown out at third trying to stretch the hit.

Troubadour (14-5) took the lead in the third inning and held on. Down, 2-1, entering the inning Mark Loughlin singled and took third on a McGary single.

Brian Berlandi brought home the game-tyer with a single before Derek Fergus singled home two runs to put Troubadour in the lead.

Back-to-back singles by Sam Gottlieb and Peter Hinteregger accounted for two more runs.

Oak Hill tops Warriors

When John Dietz pitched himself out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the third inning, it was all coasting from then on.

The 14-year-old southpaw hurled the remainder of the game, allowing no hits and only one baserunner, as Oak Hill breezed to a 14-3 victory over the Auburndale Warriors.

Oak Hill grabbed an early lead, scoring six runs in the first inning on a collection of walks. The only basehit of the inning was an RBI-single by Howie Malter.

The turning point for starter Dietz was a bases loaded situation in the top of the third with Oak Hill defending a 7-3 lead. With one out, Dietz forced a pair of ground balls to end the inning.

Oak Hill got key hits singles from Dan Katz, Alex Doran, and Bert Santucci, and Seth Agulnick reached base three times and scored three runs.

Abruzzi wins

Righthander Craig Jones found himself part of a wild few innings, then settled down and allowed only two hits in the final three frames to boost Abruzzi Club to a 16-6 thumping of the Elks.

After allowing six runs, three in the first inning and three in the second, Jones regained control and, pitching with a 13-6 lead, allowed a single in the third and a double in the fifth in going the distance for the win.

Abruzzi scored six runs in the first inning and kept on plugging.

Two errors scored three more runs before Fred Mitchell and Manny Ruiz both hit RBI-singles to round out the inning.

Boys' Club victor

The Boys' Club staged a late-inning comeback against C&K Components to hold on to first place 7-5 victory Monday at Ferguson Field.

A three-run fourth inning pushed Boys' Club (16-4) into the lead for the first time in the game. Joe DeNucci started the inning off with a bang, doubling to the fence in left-center. George Haggie and Mark Maiocca both walked to load the bases before George Maxcey grounded to short.

On a wild throw to first, two runs scored to put the Clubbies in the lead, 6-4.

Jay Cappello grounded into a fielder's choice that caught Maiocca off third base, and on the same play Maxcey was doubled off base trying to advance to third. Cappello reached second on the run down and later scored on a Steve Fontano basehit to right field.

Boys' Club had started the comeback rally in the previous inning, sparked by Cappello's two-run single.

C&K (14-5-1) had taken a 4-0 lead with three runs in the second inning. A leadoff walk to Kevin Marden and a Rich Maloney long single set up an Angelo Tamano double to left that cleared the bases.

Xidea leads Oak Hill

Righthander Mike Xidea threw a three-hitter and struck out 10 to lead Oak Hill past St. Bernard's, 6-1, in a game played at Newton South.

Xidea started the game in fine form, striking out the side in the first inning, then ended the game in the same manner, fanning the side in the seventh. In between the 15-year-old fared well too, allowing two singles in the fourth inning and a lone basehit in the fifth.

On the offense, Oak Hill got off to a strong start, riding a Harley Malter two-run single in the first to an early lead.

Dan Freeman blasted a solo home run in the third inning to put Oak Hill up, 3-0, and that was all Xidea needed.

The pitcher was touched for one run in the fourth inning.

Vachon does everything

Call Ron Vachon Mr. Everything.

The 15-year-old lefthander pitched a no-hitter, struck out 20, and smashed a grand-slam homer, all to lead Upper Falls to a 12-5 win over Oakley Spa.

Vachon's sixth-inning grand slam to center field scored Rama Malone, Chris Guzzi, Roger Mack, and Ty Rawls and was the securing force behind the win. The shot put Upper Falls in front, 12-5.

Patty Ackerley

Ackerley letters at Bentley

WALTHAM — Patty Ackerley of West Newton and Annellen McNamara of Waltham have been awarded varsity letters for their participation on the 1985 Bentley College women's softball team, Coach Bob Coolen announced.

Both women were infielders for the Falcons, who finished with a 7-16 record in a rebuilding season. Among the teams Bentley posted victories over were Lowell and Springfield.

Appearing in 21 games as the Falcon's starting third baseman, Ackerley hit .292 with 19 hits in 65 at bats. She was third on the team in runs scored (17) and also had two doubles, a triple, six RBIs, and a team-leading eight sacrifices.

The varsity letter is Ackerley's fourth in softball. A senior, she also received one this past winter in basketball, although injuries sidelined her for the entire season.

A 1981 graduate of Newton North High School, Ackerley majored in accountancy. She is the daughter of John and Marion Ackerley of 17 Whitlowe Road, west Newton.

Bradley nips Chalas in Ouimet

AUBURNDALE — Bob Bradley of Hanover dropped an even-par 72 and held off a late surge by Bruce Chalas to win the Ouimet Invitational Friday at the Woodland Country Club.

Chalas, a Dover resident and regular at the Brae Burn Country Club, birdied on the 17th hole to cut Bradley's lead, but then missed a birdie putt on the 18th to fall back. His two-day total of 144 was one stroke behind Bradley's 143.

Bradley, 38, a member at Ponkapoag, also birdied on the 17th and had his share of bad luck on the 18th to finish par. He did all this despite a nagging stiff neck.

Heavy rains on Wednesday cut short the scheduled 54-hole tourney. Thursday's round was cancelled due to the downpour, cutting the Invitational to 36 holes.

When you're older you'll know what it's like.
The countless hours alone. The phone that never rings. The children who are so busy with their own lives. You'll also realize how important the work we do is.
United Way agencies help tens of thousands of elderly citizens in Eastern Massachusetts. They provide visiting nurses. Home health care. Protective services. And maybe most importantly – companionship.
Help us help the elderly. After all, if you don't start setting a precedent now, how can you expect others to help you later?

'Muni-cultural center' at Newton's City Hall?

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Residents can expect the Executive Department to announce in early September its plan to build a new main library, but indications are the scheme may involve more than just a new facility.

During his weekly press conference, Mayor Theodore D. Mann hinted that the city hall complex and a new library on undeveloped municipal land at the corner of Homer and Walnut streets could present some intriguing possibilities.

The mayor said his specific plan will be unveiled "within the first couple weeks of September," but later added that the announcement might be made some time between that period and Oct. 15.

"We in the Executive Department think we have a very interesting approach to the city's library needs ... without impacting on the operating budget," he said.

Mann's library initiative may come on Sept. 3, when he submits his recommendations for capital improvements and capital outlay expenditures to the Board of Aldermen.

The library could be aesthetically woven into the city hall complex by extending the lagoon system in front of city hall across Homer Street to the land in front of the new facility, according to the committee's report.

Mann said the city's currently cramped archives may be relocated in the new building.

Grand jury: no indictment

Cops probe rape case

By David S. Martin, Staff Writer

NEWTON — An internal investigation by the Newton Police Department into allegations of rape against two city officers continued early this week, as investigators began questioning the patrolmen accused of the offense.

Neither Thomas M. Cloonan Jr. nor Robert T. Keefe were indicted on criminal charges following a three-week investigation of the allegations by the Middlesex County District Attorney's office.

The patrolmen now face possible disciplinary action from within the department, according to Chief William F. Quinn.

"The internal investigation has been going on," Quinn said Monday. "Interviews are taking place today."

Quinn said he could not estimate how long the departmental investigation would last or whether anyone other than the two officers allegedly involved would be questioned.

The Middlesex County District Attorney's office investigated the officers for nearly three weeks after receiving allegations they raped a woman while off-duty July 17.

A grand jury last week decided against indicting one of the officers on charges of rape or indecent assault and battery, Paul Richardson, special assistant to District Attorney Scott Harshbarger, said. The investigation did not uncover enough evidence against the other officer to bring the case before a grand jury, he added.

Richardson, who would not say which officer had been before the grand jury, said the prosecution was hampered by the unwillingness of the alleged victim to go forward with charges.

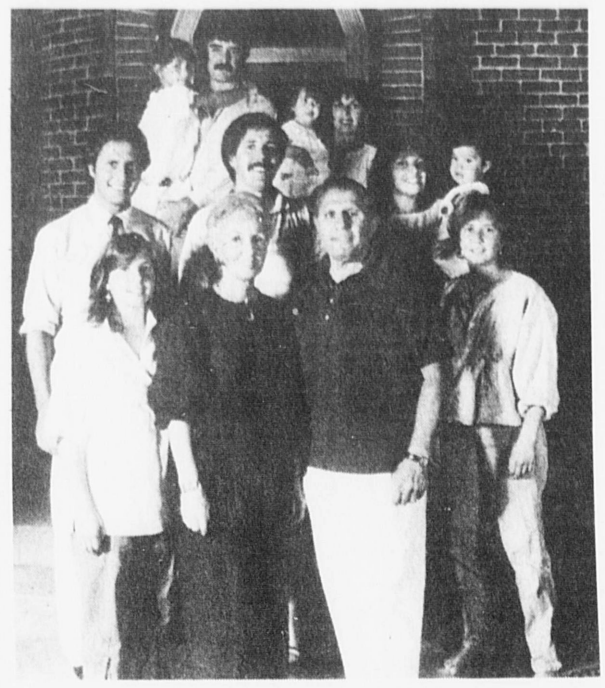

"From the beginning, the victim had expressed strong reluctance to go forward to grand jury or trial," Richardson said following the grand jury decision.

One of the patrolmen was to be interviewed Monday with his attorney and union president Linda Glenn present, the chief said.

Cloonan and Keefe face possible punishment duty, suspension or misconduct if charges of departmental misconduct are brought against them.

Patrolmen Vincent Dennis was dismissed two weeks ago by Quinn and Mayor Theodore D. Mann, co-appointing authorities in the city, for allegedly sleeping on the job and seven other counts of misconduct. He has appealed the decision to the civil service commission.

Building ban group knocks ruling

By David Weber
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Carrying signs that read, "Let The Voters Decide" and "Where Do You Draw The Line," a small group of building moratorium supporters held a press conference at City Hall last night to react to a recent city Law Department decision which ruled their initiative petition invalid.

> 'It seems more and more obvious that this administration ... has tried to keep this question off the November ballot by whatever means they can.'
>
> — Thomas Paulini

The petition was being circulated throughout the city in an effort to place on the November ballot the question of whether an 18-month moratorium on commercial construction should be adopted by the city.

The Law Department ruled last Thursday that the petition was invalid because state law prohibits changes in zoning ordinance to be enacted directly by the voters through an initiative petition.

Standing on the steps in front of City Hall, Thomas Paulini, the point man for the moratorium movement, said his supporters had all but given up on the possibility of having the question on the November ballot.

However, he said they would continue collecting signatures in support of the moratorium with the hope they might persuade the Board of Aldermen to pass the moratorium. He said he already has more than 4,000 signatures.

A dark cloud

By Kevin C. Kennedy, News Editor

NEWTON — Looking at his future in 1963, Ted Mann, at 41, would have admitted that things could not have been brighter. He could not yet see that he would end up the longest-reigning mayor in the history of the City of Newton, but he could certainly see that his years of hard work would bear fruit that would last.

In a little more than a decade, he had firmly established his roots in the Garden City — first, as a neighborhood activist in Oak Hill Park and, later, as a member of the Board of Aldermen from Ward 8.

His 13-year-old marriage to the lovely Florence Ober was everything he could have hoped for. They had two sons and a daughter, and "the twins," Stacie and Debbie, were on the way.

He had just moved from Marvin Lane, in Oak Hill, to a big new home on Littlefield Road that promised to accomodate his growing family comfortably.

His insurance business in Boston, which he had started in 1950, was going great guns.

He was living a life his ancestors — Epsteins, Goldbergs, Mannevitches, et al — scarcely could have envisioned when they travelled from Poland and Russia to settle in Boston in the 1880's. He had preserved the rich Jewish heritage into which he was born 41 years earlier. But, in virtually every other respect, he was light years from the six-family, wood-frame house across Centre Street from the Thomas G. Plant shoe factory, in Jamaica Plain — his birthplace.

Teens labor for experience

By Lauren McFalls
Assistant News Editor

For many teenagers, summer is a time for swimming lessons, baseball games, and just plain hanging out. But this summer in Newton, over 100 youths are defying the typical image of the idle teen with rigorous, daily schedules of digging and weeding, typing and filing, teacher aiding and babysitting.

Through the federally-funded Summer Youth Employment and Training Program sponsored by the Metro South/West Employment and Training Administration, the teenagers are helping out in both Newton city and private organizations.

Some are receptionists and clerks at City Hall, while others work for Lasell Junior College keeping up the grounds or as child care aides at the Newton Country Day School.

The purpose of the summer employment program is to provide positive and productive work experiences to youths, age 14 to 21, from "disadvantaged" families or to special needs students (who have physical or mental problems) "in order to foster feelings of responsibility, cooperation and enthusiasm in the young participants' approach to work and study," said a pamphlet on the program.

Over half of the youths involved in the program are from families receiving some form of public assistance, says Carol Capobianco, planning manager of the Employment and Training Administration.

She explains that one of the underlying reasons for the pro-

In Newton Centre, they 'skate tough'

By Jeff Peterson, In Focus Editor

"Skate tough or go home," proclaims the neatly painted sign outside Will Heespelink's Newton Centre home.

It's not aimed at hockey players seeking a return to the Bobby Orr era or aspiring roller derby stars.

It's part of a newer fad — skateboarding.

Originally a phenomonon as unique to southern California as surfing, from which it evolved, skateboarding has moved east in a big way. What once was a fad is fast becoming a legitimate sport.

And it's not just for kids anymore.

On any given weekday afternoon a motley crew of a half-dozen to a dozen skaters congregate at Heespelink's to show off their latest stunts.

Sporting knee and elbow pads reminiscent of some futuristic body armor, the skaters whiz back and forth along a plywood parabola, or "pipe" built by Heespelink, 14 feet high and some 25 feet wide.

Their momentum sends them hurtling into space where — after managing somehow to spin 180 degrees — they miraculously land, barreling down the vertical to repeat the process again and again.

Practice not only makes perfect, it gives a skater the heady confidence to attempt increasingly difficult and dangerous stunts.

"You have to stay hungry," says Kevin Day, a gangly 23-year-old virtuoso from Somerville whose practice runs leave the other skaters gaping. "If you're going for big air and start to worry you're not going to make it you might as well forget it."

Local businessman is suing president

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Like David standing up against the giant Goliath, Newton businessman Joseph Sholkin is taking on an opponent much bigger than himself.

Sholkin is suing President Ronald Reagan over the May 7th trade embargo of Nicaragua — something Sholkin says is costing him money.

As owner of Beacon Products, a Newton-based plastics manufacturing and marketing firm, Sholkin put together a deal to supply a Nicaraguan plastics firm with metal molds three months before the president imposed his embargo. Sholkin says the embargo goes against Reagan's capitalist ideals and is bad for his business.

"Nicaragua is basically a pluralistic society," Sholkin bemoans. "The embargo prevents me from fulfilling my obligations under a contract with Nicaragua and jeopardizes my investment. It is grossly unfair and contrary to the best interests of not only myself, but both countries as well."

At first, Sholkin says, he wasn't quite sure what to do about the embargo. After a call to an old college buddy — Robert Boehn of the Center for Constitutional Rights — he decided to take the president to court.

"If Russia is such a threat," Sholkin asks, "why do we trade with what the president himself calls 'an evil empire' and not allow a small businessman conduct his business with a small country that is no real threat to the United States? The Constitution allows citizens to seek redress from legitimate grievences and I think I have one."

IRS involved

Quinn says council records OK

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The Internal Revenue Service is investigating the personal finances of the former legal counsel for the Greater Boston Police Council (GBPC), but Police Chief William F. Quinn said last week that an in-house audit of the GBPC's accounts "shows nothing improper."

Quinn said he ordered the audit shortly after learning that Timothy C. Coogan, his former administrative assistant, was under scrutiny by the IRS.

An IRS spokesman last week denied any knowledge of the investigation, saying, "All I know is what I read in your paper."

But sources say the federal probe involves Coogan and his dealings with three electronics firms that have been, in the past, or are currently the technical backbone of the radio communications system used by more than three dozen area police departments.

Early in June, according to sources, IRS agents asked city officials to produce cancelled checks made out to Coogan and C.E.S. Telecommunications of Skokie, Ill., during a four-year period from 1980 to 1984.

According to Quinn, Coogan began his employment with the city in 1971 as a work-study student from Boston College and eventually served the GBPC in a variety of roles — legal counsel, project director, technical advisor and grants manager.

Until about nine months ago, he was also on the city payroll as the administrative assistant to Quinn — the first and only chairman of the GBPC.

C.E.S. Telecommunications, a Skokie, Ill, consultant firm headed by Art Yefsy, first became involved with the GBPC in 1970 when the Justice Department referred the company to a fledgling collaboration of Boston area police chiefs searching for a way to avoid a repeat confusion of the Hub's anti-war riots of the late 1960's.

C.E.S. solved the problem by designing and monitoring the installation of the Boston Area Police Emergency Radio Network (BAPERN), a multi-million dollar communications system now used by close to 40 Boston-area police departments, according to Troup.

The federal investigation's link to BAPERN became clear soon after the IRS's first visit when, sources say, the agents returned and asked the city to produce copies of all the GBPC accounts for the same 1980-84 period — specifically, payments to Coogan from C.E.S., Motorola Electronics and Communications, Inc., and Ackerman Communications, a Waltham firm.

Quinn described Jerry Ackerman as "a Motorola troubleshooter about 10 to 12 years ago," who later started his own company and eventually received an exclusive service contract with the GBPC to repair Motorola police radios.

Motorola currently has "less than two years to go" on a five-year contract with the GBPC "to supply (police) radios to anyone who wants to buy them in the greater-Boston area," according to Quinn.

It was Coogan, acting as the GBPC's technical advisor, who drew up the contract with Motorola, he added.

Contacted at Ackerman's firm, Coogan, who recently left his contractural job with the GBPC, described himself as "a management consultant" for "any type of business" and said his responsibilties "could involve communications. They could involve many things."

Coogan said he told Quinn in October 1984 that he would be starting a private business in June.

He said he acts as "a consultant" to Ackerman and "occasionally" does work for the High Street firm.

"I'm totally self-employed, as I was when I was over in Newton," he added.

Coogan, who began working for police council in 1979, would not comment on any questions concerning the nature of the IRS probe, except to stress that it is "a personal IRS investigation" of his own financial dealings and not an investigation of the GPBC.

"I can't tell you anything," he said, adding that Ackerman ended his relationship with the GBPC on July 1 because he "wanted to get into car telephones."

Motorola is the new service agent for GBPC radios, he added.

Kenneth Pollenz, Coogan's Boston-based attorney who, himself, has applied for FCC radio frequencies, could not be reached for comment.

Records obtained from the city's Purchasing Department show that Ackerman's firm had the exclusive right to install all the radios, sirens and "bar lights" for police cruisers purchased by the GBPC.

Coogan said the stipulation was necessary to insure that only one company would be liable if the equipment failed to work properly.

Quinn said his "understanding" of the IRS probe is that it involves "unreported income of a personal nature."

According to Quinn, Coogan "rode herd on the whole greater Boston radio system" as a GBPC consultant, a stint that included appearances before a number of municipal legislatures in an attempt to convince them to join BAPERN.

Quinn said Coogan "probably worked 12 to 14 hours a day" for the GBPC, helping to prepare the bidding specifications for the council's collective purchase of automobiles, breathalyzers, guns and ammunition.

"Tim has been an invaluable employee and I really know that now that he's gone," he added.

Coogan, who received over $40,000 annually from both the city and the GBPC, was also instrumental in helping to develop the "Enhanced-911" system, a computerized data network designed to allow police and fire departments to instantly learn the address of a 911 caller.

C.E.S. is currently conducting a study for the GBPC on how to install the state-of-the-art system over phone lines for communities in the greater-Boston area.

Quinn said the police council's BAPERN contract with C.E.S. will expire next year.

Quinn described the company as "top notch" and said, "They built, designed and OK'd every single piece of equipment (for BAPERN). Nothing could ever be purchased unless he (Yefsy) said it was the right thing."

He said Coogan was asked to stay on with the GBPC, but refused because "he thought he was going into a business where a conflict (of interest) might exist."

Quinn has since hired Norton resident Howard Baker as "a 90-day replacement" for Coogan.

"All I want to do is protect the integrity of my office and the Greater Boston Police Council," Quinn said. "We've saved millions of dollars over the years for police departments all over the state. It's a great success story."

Arraignment set for illegal fireworks

NEWTON — Two Newton men charged in July with illegal possession and storage of fireworks are scheduled for arraignment in Newton District Court August 29.

A city magistrate last week found probable cause to bring the charges against Anthony "Fat" Pellegrini and Dominico B. Bianchi Jr., according to Officer W. David Dues.

Police filed complaints against Pellegrini, 60, of 58 Clinton St., and Bianchi, 58, of 62 Lincoln Road, after allegedly catching them with 36 cases of fireworks the week before July 4. Both charges against the men are misdemeanors, Dues said.

The fireworks, worth between $10,000 and $15,000, were confiscated and taken to the state police barracks in Framingham, according to police.

2-alarm blaze hits St. Jean's School

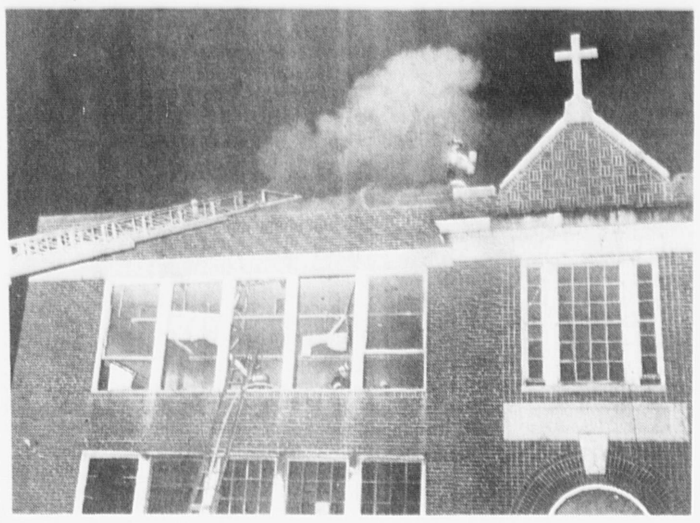

NEWTON — Firefighters took three-and-a-half hours Saturday night to extinguish a two-alarm blaze at the former St. Jean's School on Watertown Street.

Firefighter Richard Malone cut his left hand battling the flames and required treatment at Newton-Wellesley Hospital, police said.

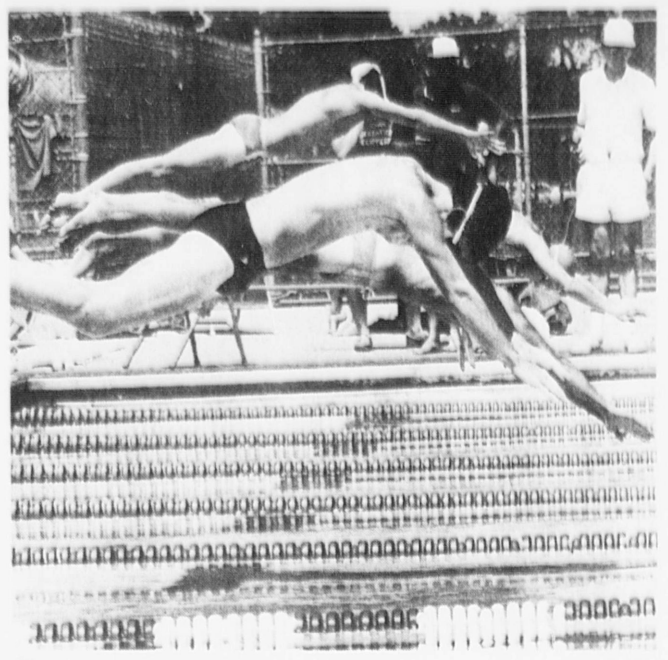

Firefighters from three engines and one ladder company arrived at the scene shortly after 10 p.m. and found the two-story building in flames. Assistant Chief William Dwyer, who was in charge at the scene, called in another ladder company 10 minutes later.

Chief Edward B. Reilly sounded the second alarm at 11:02 p.m. and two more engines arrived.

Detailed reports with estimates of damage and cost to repair the building were unavailable yesterday.

St. Jeans School hit by fire Saturday night.

Discipline for cops arrested on Cape

NEWTON — Police Chief William F. Quinn said Monday he expects to discipline a pair of city patrolmen arrested on Cape Cod for allegedly violating an anti-noise bylaw.

Quinn said he will decide on the punishment for Officers Dennis Berube, 23, and Paul D. Anastasia, 27, after interviewing them. They were arrested in Dennis on July 19.

"I expect they will be disciplined. They will be interviewed," Quinn said.

Berube, of Morrill Street, West Newton, and Anastasia, of Ripley Street, Newton Centre, were each assessed $25 in court costs in the Second District Court in Orleans and had their cases continued without a finding for 30 days.

Although Quinn termed an anti-noise bylaw violation "a routine arrest" on Cape Cod, he added, "I'm not condoning anything they did."

Lt. John Symington of the Dennis Police Department said the two Newton officers were among six persons arrested without incident at 3:40 a.m. July 19 after being warned once they were making too much noise.

Quinn said, "Our rules cover what they did. It's conduct unbecoming an officer. It's what degree of discipline that we have to work out."

The chief said last week he had not heard about the charges against Berube and Anastasia, whom he described Monday as unmarried officers on the Cape for the weekend.

Parking fines down, meter receipts up

NEWTON — Parking meter violations have decreased and meter receipts have increased since a $3-hike in the fine took effect in February, according to Parking Clerk Richard Walsh.

"People are beginning to abide by the rules. They're putting their quarters into the meters," Walsh said after he announced the results of a city-wide meter analysis.

Walsh's study shows that amount of meter money collected during the first six months of this year far surpassed the previous three-year average, while, in comparison, meter violations have dropped off significantly.

The reason behind the dramatic turn-around is the "deterent effect" created when the Board of Aldermen, acting on a recommendation from the Traffic Commission, increased the fine for meter violations from $2 to $5 six months ago.

"People are not just stopping their cars, running off and taking a chance on a $2 ticket. Now that the fine is $5, they're paying to park," said Walsh.

During the first six months of this year, the money collected from the city's parking meters averaged $33,707 — a jump of approximately $7,500 more than the average receipts for the same period during 1982 to 1984.

Vandalism spree

NEWTON — Police are still looking for suspects in what is being described as the worst single night of vandalism in several years.

A total of 34 car windows were reported smashed overnight Friday in the villages of Newton, Newtonville, Newton Corner, Newton Centre, West Newton and Waban, police said. Half a dozen more car windows were reported broken in the south side of Watertown, just over the Newton line, according to Watertown police.

Most of the windows were reportedly shot out with a BB or pellet gun, police said.

Police sent out extra patrols and unmarked cars Saturday night and Sunday night in hopes of catching the culprits, who on Friday apparently drove around the city between 4 and 5:30 a.m. leaving a trail of broken glass behind them.

Police had no suspects in the case, which is being investigated by detectives, Lt. Richard J. Nugent said.

Jewels & Gems
BY CAROL THE GOLD LADY
FANCIFUL THINKING
Other things being equal, the less color a diamond has, the more valuable it genrally is. Fancy colors, however, are a major exception. If a stone has just a shade of yellow tinting, it is classified as "slightly tinted" or "tinted". It is considered less valuable than one that is colorless. If it has enough color, however, its value begins to rise. If the stone is obviously colored to the naked eye, it is no longer merely a tinted stone. It can be what diamond experts call a "fancy" stone. "Fancies" come in a variety of shades including pink, red, orange, green, gold and blue. Some of the most valued diamonds of all time fall into this exceptional category. For example, the famous Hope Diamond is a fabulous blue.
What is the first stone you think of when you hear the word romance? Of course it is the diamond. This stone conjures up all sorts of wonderful thoughts and memories. It is an everlasting stone that suits just about everyone. You can start your own memories by selecting a quality diamond at CAROL "THE GOLD LADY". It is important to buy your precious gems from people who can relate to you the assets and flaws of each stone. We feature the 144 facet diamond which is 32% more ebrilliant than the ordinary 58 facet diamond. Shop with us at 109 Dalby St., Newton. Tues. Wed. Sat. 10-6; Thurs. & Fri. til 9. Tel. 332-5935.
HELPFUL HINT
Next to the diamond, the ruby is the most fabled precious gem.

Editorials

Police, take heart

It is true that, this summer, the old adage about hard work and dedication to duty paying off in the end is being severely tested. While the vast majority of you are plugging away, keeping the Garden City one of the safest suburbs in the Greater Boston Area, the force's image is taking a brutal beating.

News of low morale, supposedly tied in with the city's balk in contract talks, has been coming out of the department for quite a while now. The latest contract vote showed, beyond a doubt, that Newton's finest would have no truck with the city's offer.

Three years without a contract is a long time, indeed. The fact that school custodians are getting raises that outstrip those offered the police can also be demoralizing. You have your brothers in the Fire Department to commiserate with, but even that is difficult when the city's negotiators are pitting you against each other in the old "divide and conquer" ploy.

News of an officer's being discharged for allegedly sleeping on duty and other breaches of discipline certainly did not do much to relieve departmental anxiety. It is interesting that the men with the power to discharge the officer did not heed the advice of the hearing officer, who was well known as a stickler on discipline before he retired.

Why, as an aside, bother with having a hearing officer if you are not going to pay any attention to his recommendations?

Then there were the allegations of rape against two young officers that acted like pure jet fuel when fed into the city's rumor mill. The imaginations of the city's gossip mongers were stretched to their limits before the Middlesex County District Attorney's office reported that the allegations would not lead to formal complaints or charges against the officers.

Those who were disappointed with the DA's failure to unveil a juicy scandal are eagerly awaiting the results of a departmental investigation into the alleged incident.

Meanwhile, hundreds of trained professionals are showing up for their shifts, hitting the streets and risking their very lives to guard a citizenry which, if it depends on the headlines for its information, has little notion of the professionalism and dedication that are the distinguishing characteristics of the Newton Police Department.

Recent news of two vacationing NPD officers being charged with causing a disturbance on the Cape is like a mosquito bite compared to the blow the department took on the rape allegations, but it is frustrating and disconcerting nonetheless.

Meanwhile, rumors about a federal investigation into the financial records of the Greater Boston Police Council, which has called the police station in West Newton Square home since its inception, continue to circulate. Allegations of kickbacks and other improprieties will continue to eat away at the underpinnings of the GBPC and, by association, the NPD until some official word comes in.

Newton police, take heart. We see you on the streets. We know what you do. It has been a long, hot summer, but this too shall pass. "The dogs bark ... the caravan passes."

Newton Graphic Opinions

Marking Time

Welcome to downtown Beirut

By Mark White

I known I haven't written in a while. And, frankly, many of you have told me that you missed my columns. Now, you must realize this year has been very hectic for me.

I have been involved, as an attorney, in a variety of matters before the Board of Aldermen. I got married six months ago, and we just bought a new house in Waban.

Needless to say, life has kept me busy, and I have had very little time to write. But that's not the only reason I stopped writing.

To be honest, I was totally uninspired to be creative. There was no issue that provoked the kind of reaction necessary to envoke my sarcasm...until now.

What's going on in the City of Newton streets?

I have always loved puzzles, games, mazes and mysteries. But not when I'm driving.

This week I made the mistake of trying to go from my house down Beacon Street. When I reached Beacon Street, it looked like they were observing the anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima - total destruction.

Unable to get across Beacon Street, but undeterred, I decided to go towards Waban Square by a parallel street. Thinking I had finally reached Waban Square, entering by Woodward Street; I was greeted by another roadblock.

An unprecedented push to pave more miles of streets than ever before has some sections of the city resembling a war zone. File photo

Continuing on my journey, I finally ended up crossing Beacon Street by way of Rte. 9. It's like trying to drive to Boston by way of Worcester. It's easier to cross the Berlin Wall than it is to cross Beacon Street. What I really get a kick out of is watching all these luxury sedans bounce along boulders for a mile. If you really want some fun, play "Weaving Through Manhole Covers."

That's when, prior to paving a street, the city has some fun with motorists by raising all the manhole covers, and you can either ruin the alignment on your car of weave through them like your racing at LeMans.

I tell you, citizens of Newton, rise up! You have nothing to lose but your suspension.

Now, I must give credit to the city for finally fixing up these streets. And when this project is completed, I'm sure it will look beautiful, But in the meantime, I fell like I'm a tour guide in downtown Beirut.

And remember this epidemic is spreading. More streets are destined to be destroyed. So I strongly suggest you go to your local supermarket and stock-up on food.

I you're planning a vacation, leave now before they surround you and you're totally unable to leave the city. And if in your travels you happen to see a gold Audi circling your neighborhood. It's not robbers casing you're house. It's just me trying to find a way home.

Making the world clean and neat

By John Moroney

(The following opinion, expressed by the Newton Graphic's 21-year-old intern from Northeastern University, was written in response to a previous column by News Editor Kevin C. Kennedy, a member of the previous generation, which lamented the inconvenience of "the Bottle Bill.")

A car's oil needs to be changed every 3,000 miles, water which collects at the bottom of the refrigerator needs to be emptied and stop lights at busy intersections have to be obeyed. These troublesome, time-consuming adventures into tedium are the unavoidable facts of life.

The Bay State's latest legislated inconvenience — returning empty bottles and cans to conserve the earth's limited supply of precious metals — provides the impetus for an interesting sociological phenomenon. Some members of the highly touted, "Save The Whale; Split Logs, Not Atoms; Woodstock era," have, in their post-confrontational period, reverted to a dispose-all mentality.

Typical of this generation's self-serving ego, Dippies (a label that combines Hippies with the new Dispose-all mentality) claim to be the only ones who understand the horror of mulling through old bottles and cans that harbor cigarette butts, insects with four heads or the newest strain of the Black Plague. They complain of the troublesome bottles and cans which grow like cancer while awaiting redemption at the local liquor store or supermarket.

First, it's two cans on the counter by the stove. Then it's a bag tucked neatly next to the wastepaper basket. After several weeks of incubation, the discarded refuse takes on a personality of its own, forbidding access in or out of the house.

For persons who once possessed enough energy to end a war in Southeast Asia and remove a president from office, the inconvenience of going to a redemption center, you'd figure, would be a welcomed break from the pressures of saving the world. Instead, the former followers of Abbie Hoffman and Jerry Ruben lament over having to arrange bottles and cans in cardboard boxes to expedite the recycling process.

As the self-proclaimed guardians of human rights, weekly trips to redemption centers with the common folks are unbecoming for persons of their stature. Granted, returning dirty bottles and cans is not as exciting as burning Richard Nixon in effigy on the front steps of the student center, but these heroes of a previous generation should understand the act is also one of social and enviromental responsibility.

The primary push for establishing the state's bottle bill was the realization by legislators that the earth's resources are limited — a concept which first gained national attention during the Hippies previous life. With the inconvenience of a bottle bill or a mandatory seatbelt law, advocates hope to reawaken a sense of responsibility in a society which now seems to base its decisions on immediate gratification and stimulation.

The reaction to the The Great and General Court's attempt to jar the environmental conscience is one of condescension. Flower-power children scoff at recycling because, after all, they were responsible for "more important enviromental happenings," like "Earth Day" and the discovery of tofu.

And, of course, they resurrect the old argument that legislation like the bottle bill is an encroachment of government into the life of the private citizens — a debate which Joan Baez claims to have invented but which is actually as old as the country itself. "How dare they tell me what to do with my dirty bottles and cans."

Mandating the return of used bottles and cans so they might be reused at another point does not constitute a violation of civil rights. In fact, returning bottles and cans is a voluntary measure, and not a matter for the state's National Guard. If it pleases the new generation dispose-alls, they can throw their dirty bottles and cans out with the rest of the garbage. No muss, no fuss, no inconvience.

Despite rumblings, the bottle bill seems to have been a positive piece of legislation. Gone, for the time being, is the practice of throwing empty bottles and cans out the speeding car window when the beverage is finished, giving the state's highways and streets a cleaner and neater appearance.

State employment ranks have grown since the law's introduction. Supermarkets, liquor store and bottlers have been forced to hire more employees to handle the onslaught of bottles and cans being returned. In effect, a greater number of bottles and cans returned means a higher rate of employment for the state.

If their displeasure with the bottle bill is actually an attempt to recapture the nostalgia of fighting for an important cause, maybe the world's newest "lost generation" should consider another avenue. The formation of a organization to eradicate Madonna music, memorabilia and hairstyles from society might be something right up their alley.

South Africa: The time for talk is over

By Howard Altman

The time for talk is over.

As the streets of the cities and townships of South Africa run red with blood, it is time the United States government took a simple course in arithmetic.

We should no longer support by any means a government based on supression of the majority.

As President Reagan stalls off the inevitable fall of the Botha regime, hundreds are dying in an effort to expedite what must eventually happen. There is no room in the 20th century for a government that treats anyone — let alone the majority of its population — as inherent inferiors.

Granted, South Africa is an important part of the African chessboard — used by the superpowers as a pawn in the game of global domination. While South Africa's mineral wealth and geographic postion make it an important ally, we must understand at what cost we accept her allegiance.

Can America, in her collective consciousness, really consider herself a defender of freedom while we support a nation that overtly deems human beings to be inferior because of the color of their skin? Did we not fight against a similar ideology some 40 years ago in Europe?

Perhaps the problem is one of distance. South Africa is not threatening our way of life — there is no blitzkreig of Europe to contend with. They have not declared war on us. As long as the problem is contained in the faraway continent of Africa, it seems the issue is not serious enough to take any kind of direct action that would upset the staus quo. Like Nero, we fiddle around while South Africa burns.

As a nation, we Americans consider ourselves defenders of democracy around the world. We righteously call for an end to Soviet involvement in Afghanistan and give aid to the "freedom fighters" in Nicaragua. Unfortunately for the blacks of South Africa, our history of supporting right-wing dictatorships in the name of world-wide democracy plays into the hands of the Botha regime. Because of its strategic importance, it behooves us to support Botha because a strong South African government is another roadblock in the way of the communist juggernaut threatening to take over the continent.

The same reasoning led us to support the Shah in Iran. Would anyone in the Reagan administration argue the result of that bungle, in any way, helped our fight against "The Evil Empire." If we need to think in terms of democracy versus communism, isn't it time we anticipated the inevitable and supported the blacks in South Africa? After all, it is only a matter of time before Botha is ousted — with or without our help.

In terms of humanity, there is no argument. If we consider ourselves, as a nation, to be the guardians of freedom, we should extend that freedom to a nation where a vast majority of the people are treated as less than human. Instead of wasting time talking about sanctions or limited action, we should actively seek an end to the Botha regime and eliminate forever the anachronism that is apartheid.

There are some that will argue the black people don't know enough to take care of themselves — that by taking action against the white government the blacks will suffer. That patronizing attitude is not new. A gentleman by the name of Rudyard Kipling wrote a poem about a similar situation in India in the 1800's, entitled "White Man's Burden" — the gist of which alleged that the Indians were an inferior people who needed the white man to take care of them.

The same argument is being offered by those who are in charge of this nation as way to keep Botha in power.

Instead of worrying about what will happen to the "poor helpless blacks" who rely on the United States so they can sweat in a hole in the ground all day for mere subsistence wages, we should look back at our own heritage.

Very few will say the patriots who founded this country worried about how economic sanctions imposed on the fledgling revolutionaries by England would be detrimental to the colonists.

The Reagan administration should take that point one step further and remember that the blacks in South Africa want one thing — self-determination. Giving blacks the right to determine their own course of action is the first step in the long and often painful process of maturing as a nation. We should not quibble about their ability to govern themselves before they have had the chance to do so. The black people of South Africa are the majority and the time is now to recognize that fact.

Being the closest thing to a true democracy in this world, it is up to the American people to take action. That apartheid is wrong is unarguable. That we are doing little to end it is criminal.

To Jaffe: Put property on list

Yahoo to Mrs. Jaffe!!! She's finally becoming a true Newton resident. She is finally willing to help clear up our housing problem. I hope her list of violator's will continue to grow and Newton can once and for all get on with things. I also hope that in Shirley Jaffe's list of violators she will include the property at 59 Charles Street in Auburndale, which she and her husband also own.

Thanks again Mrs. Jaffe, for being a dedicated citizen, keep the lists coming... Help make Newton the Garden City we all strive to maintain.

Down with cars on lawns!! Let families in Newton survive.

Fix fishway for fun and food

Regarding the repair of the fishway at Moody Street Dam, Waltham, and the dedication of the fishway at the Finlay Dam, upriver in Wellesley: what all this activity means for the fish is the ability to move back into the upper reaches of the Charles from which they have been blocked for so long.

What it means for the people is growing opportunity to catch quality fish for fun or food and a bit of confidence that the quality fish reflect the improved quality of the river itself.

All good news. We have a two-page handout on Charles River fish that we would be pleased to send without charge to anyone who requests it (Charles River Fish Facts).

Referendum voting is priority

The zoning ordinance has been a political conflict to many in all villages of the Garden City. Too many times, we have had public hearings on commercial development in residential areas and after much frustration, would leave City Hall in disgust. Another victory for the developers.

In my time in the All-American City, the board has not functioned in the best interests of the city, or the poor taxpayer. I hope when you go to the polls this fall, you will remember who you are going to vote for. Keep in mind, this is your city.

I do feel the taxpayer would rather not pay a dime more for taxes to maintain the residential quality of life; for if you look at the sewer tax and the water tax, I think we have paid more than our fair share.

Don't you think we have had it? When is the assessment dispute going to be a judgment of the people rather than the board? I think now is the time to vote on all the loopholes, and see what is best for all the City of Newton. Referendum voting must be a top priority on all major issues.

Don't you agree?

Hiroshima/Nagasaki bombings yield 'deserved retribution'

Due respect for all the reviews this week regarding Hiroshimas and Nagasaki, but I have to rely on my own recollections. I am, mind you, committed to a nuclear, or any other, freeze so long as it is not unilateral.

Assuming you know that the "innocent" Japanese Ambassador was extending courtesies to our state department as their bombers were on their way to destroy our fleet at Pearl Harbor, yes, I have a profound sorrow for any other "innocents" who died or suffered in the bombings.

My profound sorrow too, for those seamen still buried in their ships at Pearl Harbor. Also I have a profound sorrow for my comrades in the Aleutian Islands, where unspeakable beastialities were inflicted on them.

My profound sorrow too for our G.I.s at Corregidor, and on their "Death March;" also for Americans dead, or worse that are psychologically bereft, at the horrors of Guadalcanal, Bougenville, New Guinea, Tarawa, Iwo Jima, and Okinawa, and on and on.

Yes, as we hear the number of dead, injured and radiation-effected people of Hiroshima and Nagasaki and have profound sorrow, I assume we also have it for the native peoples of all Southeast Asia who suffered such obscenities from their Japanese conquerors.

After four years in the Pacific Theatre, I am reminded in all the news reports that 40 years ago on August 6th I was on the closest Island to Japan, Ie Shima. Just of interest, I wish that Ernie Pyle, who was killed about 50 feet from me, was writing this note. I have spent so many days and nights of absolute terror as the Japanese pulverized our island and their Kamikaze pilots destroyed our Merchant and Naval ships and their people. You know I cheered as did some thousands of other G.I.s, when we heard of the bombings. Especially as we have heard that President Truman was advised that perhaps a million of us G.I.s and a million Japanese would be casualties in the planned invasion of Japan. I thanked God that, hopefully now, I might stay alive and go home and see my mother and my family.

The bombings are a historical fact; there should have been only Hiroshima but the Japanese were so sure and so arrogant that it required Nagasaki to stop their warring. So, too, we developed it first, ahead of Germany, else it might have been Washington, or New York or Newton.

Please don't use August 6th and 9th as a cudgel over our country; rather let it be as a deserved retribution for the unconscionable crimes of the insane War Lords of a nation against humanity. Let the now known terror of atomic attacks reaffirm our country's resolve to assure controls and prevent any reoccurance.

Favors mixed Claflin housing

I am writing to urge you to accept the proposal for the reuse of the Claflin School by the Newton Community Development Foundation for mixed income housing.

One of the joys I have had in the last 20 years as a parent actively working with others in P.T.A.s for Newton Public Schools has been the diversity of people. Our economic and social mix is valuable to us all and I want it to continue in Newton.

With current rents and selling prices going way out of the range of young families like we were 20 years ago, the diversity of our schools and community will not be possible.

One way to help curb that pattern is to create more affordable family housing which is partially subsidized. I have followed the development and management of the other N.C.D.F. projects in Newton Centre (The Hamlet, Sumner Street and Weeks) with pleasure and I feel sure that the Claflin neighborhood and the city as a whole would benefit from N.C.D.F.'s taking on this former school.

I urge you to take advantage of non-profit N.C.D.F.'s willingness to take on this service to the city.

A dark cloud threatened a bright future

All of which tremendously magnified the tragedy, the confusion and the despair that came with the shocking news that he was suffering from a tumor in his brain. For a brief moment, a dark cloud blotted out his bright future.

"I was experiencing some loss of hearing and sound. I had been seeing doctors for some time when I finally met a doctor, Dr. Charles Kent, at the New England Medical Center. He directed me to Mass Eye and Ear and Dr. Alfred Weiss for some x-rays. I recall being there for a long period of time," Mayor Theodore D. Mann said recently about one of the darkest periods of his life.

The x-rays showed that a tumor on his brain would require a craniotomy — a long, difficult, often dangerous operation involving cutting into his skull.

The news from the doctors was unexpected. "I really didn't understand it. I had a tough time comprehending it," he said. "In those days, with three kids (and the twins on the way), I had to make a decision. Concern about what would happen to my family raced past my eyes ... So many responsibilities ....

"I had just bought a house — an expensive house, for me — and, by this time, I had about 15 people working for me in my insurance business. I was active on the Board of Directors of the Insurance Brokers of Massachusetts. I had been building all this up and — poof! — I had a brain tumor!"

Doctors Sweet and Ojeman performed the 10-hour operation at Massachusetts General Hospital on April 1, 1963. There followed "a long period of recovery ... months," according to the mayor. "The effect of the operation was to sever a nerve, leaving me totally deaf in my left ear. For the longest time, I had a paralysis of the left side of my face."

The aftermath of his brush with tragedy has the mayor cracking up with laughter nowadays, looking back at it. "In those days, I wore an eye patch over my left eye and I had a corncob pipe to hold my lip up. I can laugh about it now, but ...." His words dwindled off as he contemplated the crisis.

"My nerves finally enervated, and I made a full and complete recovery ... so that, even to this day, I can do a backflip off a diving board. I did it just the other week at Crystal Lake."

The mayor praises the skill of his doctors, but he is quick to credit other's with less tangible, but no less important, contributions toward his recovery: "I prayed right and people prayed for me and I survived it. I owe lasting gratitude to Rabbi Israel J. Kazis, now rabbi emeritus at Temple Mishkan Tefila. He was a tremendous influence.

"I discussed the matter with him and he led me to a positive mental attitude, 'P.M.A.' He gave me a meaningful way to deal with what I had before me in a positive way."

Testimony to his full recovery from a potentially crushing blow can be found in Ted Mann's running for the State House of Representatives several years later. In a way, he was realizing a dream for himself and his father, Honey, who served in the house in the 1930's — the last Republican ever to be elected from the 14th District in Dorchester.

The man who has never lost an election since he first ran for Ward 8 alderman in the late '50's won the State Rep. race handily. "By that time, I had a lot of support coming in from all parts of the city," he said of his Statehouse run.

His first day in the House was "a day of excitement" that included formal introductions, by the Speaker, of his father and mother, who were there to see their son sworn in.

The mayor characterizes his role in the legislature as that of "consumer advocate." His considerable expertise in the insurance business led him to the House Insurance Committee, where he worked closely with young Michael Dukakis and Tommy McGee.

Through past involvement in the Roxbury area (In the 1950's, he was president of the Roxbury Kiwanis and he insured most of the businesses in the Dudley area.) he recognized that "certain low-income people couldn't own a home or a business because they couldn't get insurance." They were "redlined as high risks." To solve that problem, he helped create what came to be known as the FAIR Plan, which guaranteed low-income people "fair access to insurance."

In his own words, "The FAIR Plan had to be one of the most significant steps the commonwealth had ever taken, because it allowed minorities to participate in the American Dream." It also "provided a necessary step in the time of emergence of civil rights programs."

Other efforts he was involved in during his term on Beacon Hill included the smooth implementation of Medicare and Medicaid, two brand new programs, and a change in the laws that allowed family planning information to be disseminated to minors.

Through it all, Ted Mann adhered to the same principles his father had advocated during his tenure as a State Rep. from Dorchester. He was a populist, a "man of the people" ... ready to listen, ready to act to improve the lot of the oppressed, the underprivileged.

It was not a stance that fitted in, exactly, with the image of the party he chose to identify himself with, the Republican Party. The party was closer to power when Honey chose it 40 years earlier, but it was beginning a decline when his son entered the House of Representatives. Nevertheless, he stuck with it as he stuck with so many things he had learned from his father.

He explained, "The Massachusetts Republicans — the Christian Herters, the Leverett Saltonstalls, the Henry Cabot Lodges, the Ed Brookes, the Elliot Richardsons — were the people I had respect for and looked up to. That's not to say I had any less respect for any of my Democratic friends, but I grew up and was friendly with many of these people.

"Fred Fisher, Bob Townsend, Christian Herter, Jr., and I knocked on doors together in the early days. I remember having bonfires and political rallies in Newton. I remember Ed Brooke coming back to Newton to participate in automobile caravans for me. There was a sense of the community coming alive politically."

These men, many of whom would go on to the upper ethers of the political scene, were the same ones who had joined together to work with young Ted Mann on a rubbish truck in 1954. That's right: a rubbish truck.

In October of that year, a hurricane left the city "devastated," in the mayor's words. Trees were down all over town, most streets were impassible and the city was at a virtual standstill for several days. Ted Mann, in town for only four years by that time, helped organize 75 men from Oak Hill. They commandeered several trucks from the city's Public Works Department and organized their own cleanup.

For the most part, the men were members of the city's Young Republicans Club, who had been "working together to enervate the decline in political involvement." Fred Fisher, who was just recovering from a slanderous attack by the then-rabid red-baiter, Senator Joe McCarthy, that momentarily elevated him to the national limelight, was a member of the ad hoc division of the DPW. Townsend, Herter, Bert Thornquist and Frank Flaschner also joined up.

Asked of the increasing difficulty of a Republican's getting elected in an area that has made the liberal likes of Ted Kennedy, Paul Tsongas, Barney Frank and others its Democratic darlings, the mayor jokes, "It just shows the versatility of the personality.

Asked if things might have been different had he joined the Democratic majority, he responded, "One has no way of looking back to see if it would have been easier. The point is, whether a person is Republican or Democrat is not the question ... is not the key. It's how that person does with whatever challenge he or she might have in reflecting the philosophies of the individual parties.

"Most people aren't indoctrinated as to Republicans or Democrats," according to the Republican mayor who has dominated the political scene in a Democratic stronghold for the last 14 years — who has a Democrat, Ed Mandell, as one of his chief political aide-de-camps. "Who is a Democrat or Republican today is very hard to differentiate from a political point of view."

In the early 1970's Ted Mann would get a chance to prove the point of his political philosophy — that voters, at least in the Garden City, voted for the man and not the party. Recognizing that his real talents were in administration, rather than legislation, he would leave Beacon Hill to run for the office Mayor Monte G. Basbas was abandoning for a judgeship.

Soon, he would see if the roots he planted on Marvin Lane, Oak Hill, in 1950, would include the office of Chief Executive in their bountiful harvest.

(Next week, the Newton Graphic will follow Ted Mann from his decision to run for mayor, through four elections and the ups and downs of 14 years in office, to the present day. An outline of his future plans might include some disappointing news for those mayoral aspirants who are getting their ducks in a row for the 1989 election.)

Havurah's holiday services

NEWTON — The Greater Boston Reconstructionist Havurah will sponsor adult and children's services on Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur. Rabbi Herman Blumberg, Louise Treitman, and members of the Havurah will lead the services which will take place at the Solomon Schechter Day School, Wheeler Road campus.

For the past four years over 200 people have participated in this call to self-renewal. The Havurah looks forward to welcoming others from the Greater Boston Jewish Community to pray with them.

Babysitting is available by reservation and we encourage family participation. For further information, call 964-2791 or 861-6497.

The Reconstructionist commitment is a process of Jewish growth for which all participants take responsibility. Participation in services is egalitarian, and the Havurah offers a full program of activities year round. These include bimonthly Shabbat services, holiday celebrations, educational programs, life cycle events, and opportunities for community action.

The Havurah welcomes all inquiries about membership, and its activities are generally open to visitors.

Training program offers experience for teens

gram is to help these youths "break those patterns" of public dependency. Further, she adds, many employers are apprehensive about hiring special needs students. "We're here to bridge that gap." However, Capobianco emphasizes that the real justification for the program lies with the lawmakers who voted to allocate funds for training the youths.

According to counselor Glenda Huff, the program also teaches students how "to ask for a job, dress and appear responsible."

Huff required her 14 charges to attend a seminar, called "Focus," which is to help youths "focus in on what they want, get a feeling of self-worth and that if they strive, they will achieve." Huff provides additional career counseling for her students twice a week.

Another counselor, Brenda Jefferson, offered her youths with a check cashing workshop, which teaches students how to open accounts, cash checks and so on.

"They never had a summer job before. In the past, their mother cashed checks for them. This eliminates the need to depend on other people," says Jefferson.

Jefferson, who is in charge of the programs' first Metco student section, also evaluates participants at their job sites and then discusses their weaknesses with them in a private session.

"Some kids when they first started just said 'hello' instead of 'hello, City Hall,'" she explains. "We're working towards professionalism."

Russell Hill and John Montriro, both 15, of Dorchester and Metco students at Newton North, have spent much of their summer raking leaves, pruning trees and bushes, and cleaning the tennis courts at Newton's Burr Park.

"It's just like doing chores at home," says John. "You mow the lawn and rake it up."

Although these chores may not be novel for the teens, they said they did learn a lot about procedures connected with having a job.

"This year," says Russell, "a lot of applications were filled out wrong. Now we know things have to be filled out right and turned in on time."

Lateshia Crowder, 14, of Newton Highlands, says the training program got her "thinking more about a career and the future."

However, she's found that her summer receptionist position in the city physician's office in City Hall is not quite what she had in mind as a career.

After watching numerous episodes of the television show "Miami Vice," she's decided "I want to be an undercover cop" because "it seems like it would be fun."

Funded through the Job Training Partnership Act since 1983 as a replacement for CETA, Metro South/West is run through a governing body, called Private Industry Council Board, which divides responsibility for the planning and management of job training programs between the private and public sectors.

The Newton Public School system is one of three school systems involved in the Metro South/West council, along with Massachusetts Bay Community College and the Marlboro Public Schools. Newton Veteran's Services is also on the board, as are Digital Equipment Corporation, Raytheon Company, Honeywell, various banks, unions and agencies.

Area businessman is suing president

Sholkin is suing Reagan on the contention that the embargo is illegal and "abrogates treaties with Central American countries unilaterally."

"We have a sorry history of supporting right-wing dictatorships and facist governments all over the world," Sholkin says. "Ronald Reagan lies about Nicaragua — it is basically a pluralistic society."

Sholkin further justifies his position by arguing trade embargoes are "ridiculous" in light of the nation's massive trade deficit.

"The government of Nicaragua was duely elected by the people and needs help badly. Reagan is always talking about how bad the trade deficit is, so what does he do? He prevents American businesses from conducting business. That doesn't make too much sense from a capitalistic viewpoint."

He adds he does not consider himself a political activist.

"I don't march in protest, and I haven't committed any acts of civil disobedience. My duty as an American citizen is to challenge a government I feel is not acting with humanity or justice."

Sholkin expects the trial — to be held in the Boston District Federal Court — to begin in late September.

Ban advocates continue to canvass

Mann and said, "It seems more and more obvious that this administration, through whatever departments necessary, has tried to keep this question off the November ballot by whatever means they can."

John Darcy, an attorney for Revised Zoning in Newton (REZONE), said he believed the Law Department decision would be overturned in court. But time constraints would prevent the question from appearing on this year's ballot.

Susan Mirsky, co-president of the Newton Neighborhood Network (NNN), another pro-moratorium group, said members of her organization "found overwhelming support for the moratorium" as they canvassed for signatures.

"Even those who had some doubt about whether it was a good idea felt it should be on the ballot because that would bring out more information about it," said Mirsky.

Pam Bemis of Massachusetts Fair Share, a citizens advocate group, said members of her organization in Newton have been collecting signatures for the last four days and also found a favorable response to the moratorium.

Asked why her organization became involved with the moratorium movement, Bemis said, "Overdevelopment and zoning is an issue we've been working on across the state. We're also interested in giving residents more say in what happens in their neighborhoods."

State Treasurer Robert Crane announced that his office is attempting to return nearly $1 million to 4,000 Massachusetts residents under the state's unclaimed money law.

Bank accounts which have been dormant for at least five years are deemed to be abandoned and must be reported to the Treasury Dept. The following names are accounts from the Newton-Waltham area. Call 1-800-632-8027 to make a claim.

Hebrew camp brings heritage, language to life

By Joyce Leffler Eldridge

Twenty-five youngsters, some of them strangers before this summer, are being united by more than their Newton residency thanks to eight weeks of intensive round-the-clock Jewish camping at Camp Yavneh in Northwood, N.H.

Operated by Hebrew College in Brookline, the co-educational camp, set in 90 acres of woodland overlooking Lucas Pond 100 miles north of Boston, offers a full range of aquatic and field sports, plus aerobics, dance, drama, horseback riding, tennis, boating, archery, and track and field.

What separates Yavneh from hundreds of other overnight camps throughout New England is its morning program of academic courses in Hebrew. Given for credit, these courses range from Bible to Hebrew language to literature. Students may elect up to two 90-minute classes per day.

For Deborah, Nancy and Rebecca Slotnick, of Newton Highlands, the camp not only unites them together for the summer, but it also brings them in contact with a host of other campers with similar interests and priorities.

"We all have something in common and that is our Judaism," said Nancy, 18, a counselor for the Arayot group, who will be entering Harvard this fall. "It means a lot to each and everyone of us."

Her 17-year-old sister Debbie, a senior at Newton South who has been to Yavneh for five summers, described the camp as a "different kind of experience because Judaism is tied in fundamentally with the rest of your life at camp."

The 200-plus campers at Yavneh come from every New England state and such geographically scattered locations as Denver, Detroit, Austin, Baltimore, Jerusalem and Canada. Because 25 percent of the camp's population attends Jewish day schools, a special Hebrew curriculum has been prepared to accommodate their extensive backgrounds. Another 25 percent of the campers attend Hebrew College's Prozdor (high school) during the school year and use the summer term to take some additional credits, thereby accelerating the normal course load.

Two Newton day school students - Matt Levitt, 15, of the Maimondies Day School in Brookline, and Joshua Gann, 14, a recent graduate of Solomon Schechter Day School in Newton, both said Yavneh courses fit with their regular school-year curriculum.

Gann, a personable, freckled-faced youngster with an infectious smile, will be entering the Hebrew College Prozdor this fall, qualifying as a junior because of his day school background. He said he turned on to Judaic Studies intially because his sixth-grade Tanach (bible) teacher at Schechter got him "very involved" in the intellectual and philosophical dimensions of his religion, such as inquiry into Jewish law, science and religion.

But Gann is by no means all serious. An euthusiast of basketball and softball who plays Little League for the Newton East Padres, his answer to "Why did you first come to Yavneh?" was instantaneous: "My parents needed time to get away from my brother and me."

Jonathan Berkowitz, 9, another Little Leaguer who plays for the Pirates of Newton Central, said his favorite part of camp is afternoon sports. A fifth grader at the Ward School, Jonathan has literally "grown up" at Yavneh, starting as a two-year-old when his mother accepted a counseling position with the camp.

For the Berkowitz family, Yavneh is a tradition that goes back to the 50s when Jonathan's mother, Marjorie Berkowitz now director of the camp, met her husband Stan, an attorney, in Northwood. Now in her 13th Yavneh summer with three children who've attended for a combined total of 23 years, Margie said of her initial return to camp seven years ago: "I've never really left Yavneh. Its one united family welcoming every type of kid, the scholarly, the reclusive, the super-athlete. It's the way a family is meant to be."

Michael Kadish, 12, of West Newton, a seventh grader at the Cambridge Friends School, said although no member of his family had ever attended Yavneh, his father, Sidney, a radiation oncologist at St. Vincent's Hospital, had attended a Hebrew-speaking camp "and felt strongly that this was the route to go."

Youngsters who spend summers at Yavneh are encouraged to bring their round-the-clock Judaism home with them and interest their families in learning and/or perpetuating Jewish traditions.

Informal education, such as Israeli dance festivals, song festivals and cultural arts festivals are an important part of the educational program available throughout the summer. Later this season, the camp will feature a program of Ethiopian Jewery that will reenact "Operation Moses," the airlift out of Ethiopia and into Israel.

In addition to the formal and informal educational programs, what ultimately happens is that "campers learn Hebrew here almost by osmosis; it's spoken around the dinner table and over the PA system, and eventually you just pick it up," Berkowitz said.

"This camp is here to give campers and staff a strong dose of Jewish culture," said Programming Director Matt Green who is in his 12th Yavneh summer. Green, who met his wife, Sue, at the camp several summers ago when both were campers, returned this year with the entire family, including Rebecca, 3, and Joshua, 2.

"Yavneh has been one of the most important things that has come about in both Sue's and my life," Green noted. "We hope our kids will return every year. It's our base of Jewish culture and identity. During the year, you have to look for it...Here, it's here for you...What we have here is an intense eight weeks of Judaism, culturally and spiritually."

Financial junk-mail: Trash or treasure?

Part one of two

This column — although it may seem a little exaggerated — began with the appearance in my office of a mid-fiftyish gent in a rumpled pin-striped suit. In one hand he carried an obviously heavy suitcase. He identified himself as a local attorney, and said he had been referred by a colleague.

When I asked why he felt he needed my services, he made a frustrated gesture at the suitcase, and flipped it open.

It was filled with municipal bond, zero-coupon bond and municipal-zero-coupon bond pamphlets; prospectuses from front-end-load, rear-end-load and no-load mutual funds. Sales material from discount brokers was folded between the pages of bank booklets in which a confusing array of accounts vied for depositors money.

There were, said my prospective client, personalized tax-shelter seminar invitations addressed to "Dear Occupant;" there were offers from insurance companies selling mutual funds, and from mutual funds selling investment trusts.

Stockbrokers were having an identity crisis, he complained, and were unsure whether they were in the banking, investment, real estate or insurance business. And no wonder, he continued, it was no longer possible to distinguish between the purchase of a life insurance policy and investment in the stock market.

There were brochures from investment advisors, market timing services, and the people who write and sell investor newsletters on the subjects of gold, silver, collectibles, comestibles, and antique spitoons. And the latest of these was a series of letters from a man who couldn't understand why my visitor hadn't jumped at the opportunity to invest in a guaranteed method of winning at the track.

And that wasn't all. There were advertisements for free, do-it-yourself IRAs and Keoghs; and there were boring little pamphlets on the differences between three women with similar names — Ginnie Mae, Fannie Mae and Sally Mae.

Worst of all, said my client, were the little pieces of advice that jumped out at him and sparked his interest — easy ways to pay for college education; leveraged interest-free loans; conversion of ordinary income to capital-gain; deferred income; tax avoidance; lowered probate cost. And the mention of trusts with names as various as Clifford, Sprinkle and Crummey.

"I'm a simple guy, with simple needs," said my visitor. "Used to be I knew what I wanted. But all this ... " he waved his hand at the material now littering my office floor, "is the financial junk-mail I've received in the last six months. And it makes me wonder whether I'm missing out on all kinds of opportunities."

He paused.

"Yes?" I asked.

"Well, how long will it take you to go through all that stuff and give me an answer?"

For the answer to this man's question, be sure to read next week Money Talks column.

Bicyclist collides with open car door

NEWTONVILLE — A 22-year-old Newton bicyclist was slightly injured Sunday when she collided with an open car door outside the Newtonville Post Office, according to police.

Laura Acheson, of 26 Hollis St., Newton, was treated at Newton-Wellesley Hospital and released for injuries received at 8 a.m. when her Univega 10-speed struck the door of a parked car, a hospital spokesman said. Police issued no citations in the accident.

Woman finds car turned upside down

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — A Bedford woman leaving the Boston Fish House shortly after midnight last Friday discovered her car on its roof, police said. The woman found her 1983 Datsun turned upside down when she walked out of the restaurant-bar at 12:50 a.m. Saturday, according to police. Police gave no estimates of the damage.

$500 of tools taken from Sunoco station

CHESTNUT HILL — Tools valued at more than $500 were reported stolen from the Sunoco Gas Station, 325 Boylston St., police said. Among the items taken were three air guns worth a total of $385 and a torque wrench worth $135, according to police. Three metal storage chests for tools also were damaged, police said, and the phone line was cut prior to the theft.

Auburndale hit by car thefts last week

AUBURNDALE — This village was the site last week of one car theft and a series of thefts from cars, police said.

A California man reported his rented 1985 Cutlass was stolen from the second level of the Holiday Inn parking garage, police said. Five cars in Auburndale were also broken into, police said.

A Virginia man told police $1,500 worth of belongings were stolen from a car parked in the Marriott parking lot Tuesday. Taken from the 1984 Mazda were a four-man tent, backpack, sleeping bag, 350 silver dollars, tools clothing and camping gear.

A $300 Super Fox radar detector was also reported stolen from a 1984 Datsun parked in the Holiday Inn parking lot. A Maryland man told police the theft took place between 6:30 p.m. Tuesday and 8 a.m. Wednesday after the right front window was broken.

In addition, a stereo cassette and radar detector were reported stolen from a 1965 BMW parked at the Holiday Inn, police said. The theft to the car, registered to a New Jersey resident, took place between 11 p.m. Tuesday and 9:15 a.m. Wednesday, police said.

An Escort radar detector worth $240 was reported stolen overnight Tuesday from a car parked by a Grove Street home, police said. According to police, the 1985 Audi 4000 was broken into between 6:30 p.m. Tuesday and 8:20 a.m. Wednesday after the passenger side locks were broken.

Bicyclist injured in collision with auto

NEWTON — A 13-year-old bicyclist was slightly injured last week when she collided with a car coming out of an alley on Adams Street near the Murphy Street intersection, police said.

Gail Hoffman, of 15 Lawn Avenue, Newtonville, was riding on the sidewalk at 3:15 p.m. Wednesday when she collided with a 1973 Chevrolet driven by Nicholas S. Collela, of 13 Cook St., Newton. Police issued no citations. She was treated at Newton-Wellesley Hospital and released, a hospital spokesman said.

August 16 is deadline for firefighters' exam

NEWTON — An open competitive examination for the position of firefighter in municipal services will be held on Saturday, Sept. 14 for Massachusetts veterans. The last date for filing applications for the examination is August 16.

The open competitive examination is being held to establish lists for firefighters and for call firefighters for all cities and towns within the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in which either or both of these positions is classified under Civil Service.

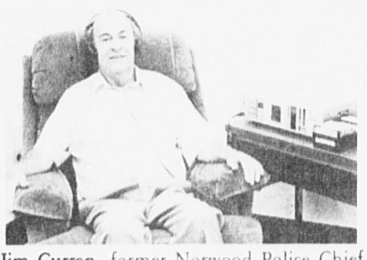

The Massachusetts Veterans' Service Agents Association head points out that all applicants must be at least 19 years old and not yet 32 years old at the time of the last date for filing applications. Further, disabled and regular veterans' preference may be claimed by the applicant, but the veteran must file a copy of his or her discharge or release (DD-214) at the time of examination.

Applicant cards may be obtained and filed in person at: Department of Personnel Administration, One Ashburton Place, Second Floor, Boston and suggests that all applications be mailed by certified mail, return receipt requested, if possible.

The Personnel Information Center is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday and those within the Boston area may call 727-8370 for further information. Interested veterans outside of the Boston area may use the toll free number 800-392-6178.

Officer Francis I. Burokas retired from the Newton Police Department after 25 years of service.

According to Chief William Quinn "Frank Burokas came to the department after a career as a machinist with General Electric Co. and in the approximately 7,000 days he served, his appearance hasn't changed a bit.

Anna Faith Jones

He looks as young today as the day he arrived."

The Chief continued, "Frank is a good example of a person who didn't accept stress as a part of life. Each day Frank had a joker or a funny story to share, and at all times he was a first rate police officer."

Burokas was born, raised and educated in Cambridge.

He served in the Army in World War II seeing service in the South Pacific in the Infantry and later the Signal Corps. Following discharge he returned to his job at General Electric and remained until his appointment to the Newton Police Department in 1960.

As a police officer his assignments were in West Newton, Oak Hill, Chestnut Hill and Newton Center. From time to time he would work as a detective when the need arose.

Burokas is married to the former Lucille Rocklan and they have three children, Laureen, Donna and Gary.

When asked about his plans for the future, he responded, "I'm going to the Cape and get used to doing nothing."

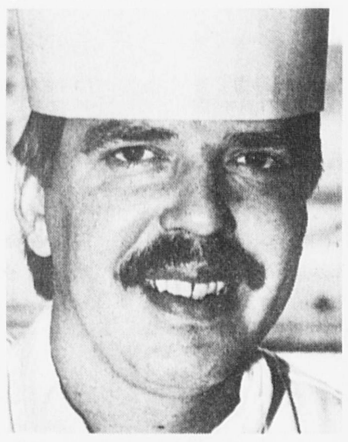

Jim Listebarger of Elm St., Newton, won fifth prize in the Minuteman Rally with navigator John Buono. The 40-question, 60-mile course was run between the Museum of Transportation, Brookline and the Museum of Our National Heritage, Lexington.

Anna Faith Jones, director of the Boston Foundation, heads this year's list of outstanding career women recognized recently by the College Club. This marks the tenth year that the College Club has honored women who have distinguished themselves in the world of work in the Boston area.

Georg Swarfenberg of Newton has been named executive chef of the Boston Marriott Hotel/Long Wharf, according to Jon Burgess, general manager of the hotel. Swarfenberg's responsibilities include supervision of all food preparation and presentation in the hotel's three restaurants and catering services.

Prior to joining Long Wharf, Swarfenberg was Executive Chef at the San Antonio Marriott in Texas. He previously was Chef Saucier at the Royal Tehran Hilton in Iran and a Chef Gardenmanjeier at the Edward Hotel in Durbin, South Africa.

Georg Swarfenberg

Sidman, originally from Nebraska, graduated from The University of Michigan in 1964. He also received a degree from Harvard Law School in 1967.

He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa Honorary Society; Executive Board member and Trustee of Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston; and Trustee of Beth Israel Hospital. Edwin Sidman is a member of the Executive Committee of the Boston Municipal Research Bureau and serves on the Chamber's Boston 2000 Steering Committee.

Sidman resides in Newton.

Dr. Lloyd S. Smith, a Newton Centre podiatrist, was recently elected to the Board of Directors of the American Academy of Podiatric Sports Medicine, one of the nation's largest organizations affiliated with the American Podiatric Medical Association.

Dr. Smith, a specialist in podiatric sports medicine, is a former President of the Massachusetts Podiatric Medical Society.

Dr. Smith is chief of the Department of Podiatric Medicine and Surgery at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Boston. He is also director of the hospital's Runner's Clinic. Dr. Smith is a consultant in research and product design for the Converse Biomechanics Lab.

Edwin Sidman

Richard N. Silverman, chairman of NeWell Health Corporation's Capital Campaign, announced that Newton residents Mr. and Mrs. Irving Campaign and Mr. and Mrs. Irving Usen have made contributions totaling three quarter of a million dollars. The announcement was during donor recognition ceremonies at Newton-Wellesley Hospital's annual spring gala in June. The Usen's most recent contribution of a quarter of a million dollars to the Capital Campaign was made shortly before the event.

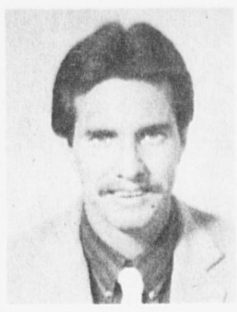

Dr. Norman S. Stearns, of West Newton, has been re-appointed Sara Murray Jordan professor of medicine at Tufts University's School of medicine for the 1985-86 academic year.

By tradition, all Tufts professors who hold endowed chairs are appointed annually by the board of trustees academic affairs committee.

Stearns has been a permanent member of the Tufts faculty since 1971. He received his bachelor's degree from Harvard College in 1943, and his M.D. degree in 1947 from Boston University's School of Medicine. He also has a master's in pharmacology from Boston University which he completed in 1950.

David Hahn of Newton was named Chairman of the "Day at the Races" event of the Men's Associates of the Hebrew Rehabilitation Center for Aged in Roslindale.

Hahn is the Men's Associates Financial Secretary. He has been active with the Men's Associates since 1982, and has helped organize a number of fundraising and service events to support the 725-bed, long-term care facility. He and his wife Amy have two children, Jeffrey and Joshua.

Don't play waiting game: Build your home

By Eric Jude
Copley News Service

Growing numbers of prospective home owners are taking matters into their own hands when it comes to buying a new house. Instead of playing the waiting game for mortgage interest rates and labor costs to come down, they are building their own homes — and finding it to be an easier project than they originally might have supposed.

Several companies cater to the owner/builder, offering credit loans and simplified approaches to building.

"Today many people can build their own homes provided they have the determination to succeed," said Ed Dabrowski, vice president of Miles Homes, a division of Insilco Corp. and a pioneer company in do-it-yourself home building.

"It's a lot of hard work, but the savings and the feelings of accomplishment are well worth it. Simplified instruction manuals and precut, coded building materials help a lot. If you follow the step-by-step procedures, you'll get there eventually," said Dabrowski.

Owner involvement in construction is a growing trend. One in five homes built in 1983 was constructed in part by the eventual owner rather than a professional building contractor.

Do-it-yourself home builders cited savings on construction costs as a major incentive to build your own home. Savings vary with the size of the home and regional differences in labor costs, but the savings can be significant.

"I figure I saved thousands by doing almost all of the work myself," said Jack Gajewski, a crop duster who built a three-bedroom, split-level home in Hanford, Calif.

"My son Jack and I knew little about home building when we started. We even had to go to the library to look up terminology. But the building materials came with complete instructions, and the materials were marked to make it easier. Except for the foundation slab and some drywall work, we did most of the work ourselves," Gajewski said.

In addition to savings on construction costs, many prospective home owners take the do-it-yourself route because of financing. Continuing high interest rates and tough down payment requirements exclude many families from home ownership through traditional channels. Many banks also shy away from making construction loans to anyone except professional building contractors.

To fill this gap, most companies in the owner-built housing market offer credit plans to prospective customers. While these plans vary, they generally offer to sell building materials on credit and require only interest payments for a specific period of time. A mortgage loan from a local lender usually can be obtained on the completed home.

Another big reason for do-it-yourself home construction is the satisfaction of knowing exactly what quality of material has gone into the home.

Do-it-yourselfers also are pleased that they can choose their own floor plans.

Computer design services formerly available only to architects and professional draftsmen now allow home owners to redesign basic floor plans to meet individual requirements. Walls can be moved. Doors and windows can be changed and rooms enlarged. Closets can be added and the entire home can be made more energy efficient.

Using a computer design service also helps eliminate many of the unknowns in home building.

"As an example, plans of the walls show where each stud goes, how long it should be, how many are needed, size of the headers and the most efficient way to cut the material to minimize waste," said Rick Clapp, director of packaged homes for Wickes Lumber, which offers a computer design service. The customer buys only what he needs with computer design services, Clapp added. "In a conventionally built home, materials routinely are overestimated by 10 to 15 percent to cover waste and miscalculation," he said. "There are substantial savings in labor and materials with the computer."

A year-round energy saver

By Carol Roberts
Copley News Service

Because of rising costs for energy, maintaining an energy-efficient home has become a priority. One of the best ways to promote energy efficiency, during winter or summer, is to install adequate amounts of insulation, according to Richard Trumbull, vice president at Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp.

"Traditionally, insulation was perceived primarily as a cold-climate product," explained Trumbull. "But the fact is, insulation can be just as important and effective during the hot summer as it is in the cold winter to cut down energy costs."

Regardless of outside or inside temperatures, the main concern is heat. Whenever there is a temperature difference between inside and outside, there will be heat flow. Insulation helps retard the process of summer heat entering the home, which helps keep the inside cool and lessens the need for continuous air conditioning. Similarly, in the winter, insulation keeps the house warm by reducing the escape of interior heat, Trumbull said.

Many people opt to have contractors install insulation in their homes. However, installing insulation can be a simple and inexpensive do-it-yourself project, Trumbull said.

The only tools needed are a sharp knife, a straightedge, a ruler, a pair of work gloves and safety glasses.

If the home has no insulation at all, the best place to start would be the ceiling, followed by floors over un-conditioned spaces and then walls, according to Trumbull.

Glass fiber batts or blankets generally are considered the most commonly used insulation for performance and installation ease, Trumbull said. Batts and blankets can be rolled out easily to blanket the desired areas.

Pouring wool also can be used to insulate floors. The insulation simply is poured out of a bag and then leveled with a rake or short board.

Check with a building materials dealer or utility company about what R-value, or insulating power, is needed to bring the home up to levels recommended for a particular area. Local utilities generally will perform low-cost energy audits that can point out trouble spots and places where insulation needs upgrading.

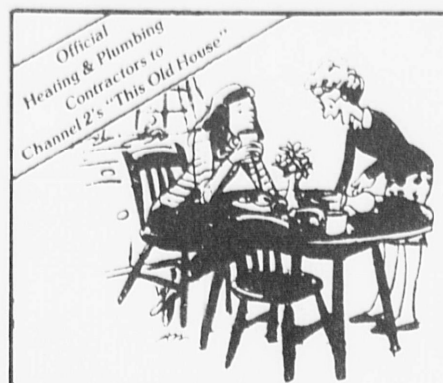

To determine how much insulation to buy, multiply the length of the area to be covered by its width. Be sure also to make any necessary repairs to the area, such as fixing leaky roofs and damaged floors.

For attics without floors, installation is simply a matter of laying the batts or blankets between the joists with the vapor barrier facing toward the warm-in-winter side.

If adding a second layer of insulation, unfaced batts or blankets should be used. Lay them perpendicular to the existing layer. Be sure to leave vents uncovered so that air flow is not blocked. Air flow is an important factor in preventing moisture buildup and in reducing the attic temperature.

Going for big air in Newton Centre

Whether or not skateboarding is a sport is open to debate. What can't be questioned is the delicate balance, dexterity and sheer athletic skill needed.

Russ Magnanti, 20, of Wellesley, is a World Cup-level freestyle skier, specializing in flips, twists and other acrobatics on skis. During the summer, however, Magnanti skates ... and skates.

At 155 pounds, Magnanti is taut, muscular and particularly adept at midair acrobatics. Heespelink, at 180 pounds, is built for speed, powering down the pipe like a runaway freight train.

"It takes less effort if you're heavier," says the 22-year-old Heespelink. "But one of the top pros is tiny, so you can't really figure it."

Modern skateboards, most of them speckled with decals and graffiti, are slightly concave and approximately a foot wide and two feet long. The components, most often purchased separately to fit a skater's individual style, cost in the vicinity of $130.

The rig consists of plastic or rubber wheels mounted on "trucks" — axles which swivel back and forth like a car's suspension — topped by a "deck," or the board itself. Most decks are covered with abrasive grip tape, which Day unsmilingly terms "the sacred surface."

Skaters wear protective pads as individualistic as their boards. About $60 will buy a set of fiber-stuffed knee and elbow pads capped with hard plastic cups — which often crack under jarring impacts. Padded bicycling gloves complete the outfit.

"You gotta have pads," says 20-year-old Scott Gray of Natick. "You can't skate without them."

"Pads are your life," echoes Magnanti.

"I've hit my head about six times in the past nine years," he says. "That's not a bad ratio, but I hit it bad about a year and a half ago."

He's worn the helmet ever since.

More severe injuries are not uncommon, predomidantly broken arms and dislocated shoulders. Gray still sports a wrist cast gained after a particularly nasty fall. And large scabs, relics from past spills, prominently scar the skaters' forarms and backs — despite which they defiantly skate shirtless.

Lannon, who took up skateboarding eight years ago, leaves his job as a carpenter to skate at Heespelink's pipe several times a week — as does most of the group.

> 'Half-pipes are much better to learn on. You can really get a long run going.'
> Scott Gray

Day feels none of the group is skilled enough to compete on a regional level — which on the East Coast is virtually 100 percent amatuer. On the West Coast, where the pastime originated, top pros actually earn a living whizzing around the pipes.

"Those guys are way better than us," Day confirms. "But Frank's getting up there. He's doing good today."

As he speaks, Lannon is finishing a spectacular run which showcases all the stunts in his repertoire.

"I was way over the top on that one," Lannon exults. "I was lookin' at the nails."

Luke Walden, 15, who lives in Boston and works at a skateboard specialty shop on Beacon Hill, watches Lannon's performance with a respect tinged with reverence. Walden got interested in skating at the MDC pool on Ringe Avenue in Cambridge — a mecca for skateboard enthusiasts. It was there that both Day and Lannon got their starts.

"There aren't that many pipes around," Walden laments. "They have them in Winchester, Braintree and Dighton, but that's about it."

According to Heespelink, designing and constructing his "half-pipe" was a collaborative effort undertaken jointly with his younger brother. The 14-foot high sides and parabolic curves give the skaters more than ample speed to practice zero-gravity aerobatics.

"Half-pipes are much better to learn on," Gray says flatly. "You can really get a long run going."

The Newton Centre half-pipe, which Heespelink estimates cost $1000 to build, must be resurfaced with plywood sheathing periodically to give the skaters a smooth surface.

"We resurfaced it just last Saturday and made it a foot taller," he says. "That's why it's so fast."

Heespelink's original design was a downsized "quarter-pipe," which stood for 2½ years until a complaint prompted local authorities to step in.

"It was breaking zoning laws so they made me tear it down," he recalls. "But the building inspector was sort of on my side."

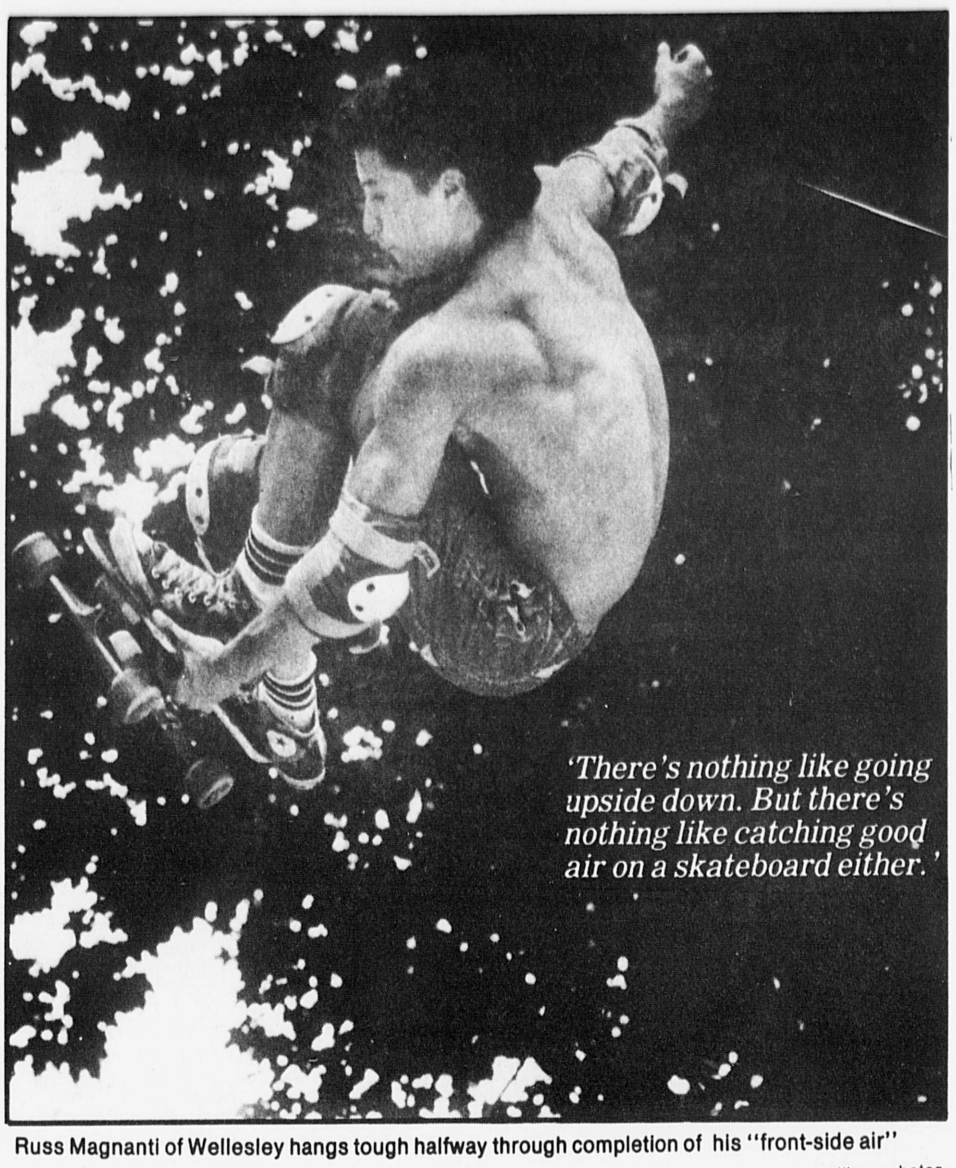

Nonetheless, prior to constructing the expanded "half-pipe" last May, the daredevils canvassed the Newton Centre neighborhood to forestall any potential opposition. A sign posted on the pipe spells out the house rules:

No skating without permission, no skating after dark and no skating without signing a release absolving the Heespelinks of liability.

"When we got a complaint we talked to everyone on the street," Heespelink said. "A lot of them have kids of their own and they actually support it."

Which is somewhat more than his own parents are doing.

"When we had the quarter-pipe it wasn't so bad," he cringes. "But now they're just barely tolerating it."

'There's nothing like going upside down. But there's nothing like catching good air on a skateboard either.'

Russ Magnanti of Wellesley hangs tough halfway through completion of his "front-side air"

Skaters flaunt their machismo

Like surfers before them, skateboarders create their own stunts, speak their own language and flaunt their own particular brand of machismo.

The only thing missing is a latter-day version of the Beach Boys to provide the skaters with an anthem all their own.

According to Russ Magnanti, who actually dangles a surfer's good-luck charm from his neck, all skateboard stunts are derived from four basic moves: footplants, handplants, and "airs," which can be performed either from the front or back side.

A skater "gets air" when his momentum propels him up off the pipe into midair. To avert disaster he must reach down and grab his board to keep it from flying off, while at the same time twisting 180 degrees to come down on the pipe properly.

An "ollie air" is performed without the benefit of grabbing the board to keep it underfoot. "You just go up, pop it, and put it right down again," grins Scott Gray.

Sure.

A "handplant" is trickier. Again, the skater leaves the pipe, reaches down and grabs his board. Simultaneously, he takes his free hand, plants it on a rail at the top of the pipe and does a brief, one-armed handstand before shooting the pipe again.

Nothing to it.

"Those are the basics, but they can be adapted to come up with incredible variations," Magnanti says.

One such variation, a "540 twist," is the closest thing to a double gainer with a full twist this side of Olympic platform diving.

"And there are locals who can do it," he adds. "Although the last guy I knew who tried it broke three toes."

For novices, "faking" is simply riding the board back and forth along the pipe in a linear movement. Both the board and the skater remain facing in the same direction.

Balance is the key here.

A "drop-in" is one way of starting a run, whereby a skater teeters precipitously atop one side of the pipe before smoking down the vertical.

"You get your most speed dropping in," said Steve Rosnick, 17, who lives at Harbor Towers on Boston's waterfront and learned to skate on city streets. "That way you can do airs on the other side."

> All the technical skill in the world means little without the agressiveness — the machismo — to push one another to the edge of control ...

But all the technical skill in the world means little without the agressiveness — the machismo — to push one another to the edge of control, knowing that a bad spill during the afternoon is virtually unavoidable.

It's this machismo which elevates skaters above the level of sportsmen and into the realm of race-car drivers and Acapulco cliff divers — those driven to toe that fine line between exhilaration and disaster.

Cracking jokes from the precipice, they push each other to attempt increasingly dangerous stunts.

"You almost made it," whoops Magnanti as Will Heespelink loses his footing and crashes hard. "That was a hot run."

And even though Newton Centre is a long way from Malibu, an observer can almost hear the Beach Boys singing:

"Everybody's skatin' ... skatin' USA."

"CUSTOMERIZED KITCHENS"

Over the past few years the term "Custom Kitchen" has taken on a new meaning. Through the development of space-age adhesives, companies like Norwood's LOWE CONTRACTING CORP. have developed systems to employ cabinet refacing in many remodeling jobs that at one time lent themselves only to total replacement of the kitchen cabinetry. In many instances LOWE CONTRACTING can alter or add cabinets and reface those that need no changes thereby avoiding the complete replacement formerly needed. Thus "CUSTOMERIZED KITCHENS" where the kitchen plan is tailored to the needs of the customer, by installing FULL CUSTOM CABINETRY, replacing with STOCK or a "CUSTOMERIZED" combination as described.
Drop by our showroom at the corner of Dean and Washington St., Norwood or call 769-2297 and talk to one of our reps. We'd like to show you how "CUSTOMERIZING" can work for you.

Mime pair at hospital August 27

NEWTON — As a gesture of good will this summer, the Metropolitan District Commisson will offer free mimes and magic shows at area hospitals.

Metro Mimes, Christopher Bell and Michael Gunst, will perform at the Newton-Wellesley Hospital on Aug. 27. All performances are free of charge.

'World of Difference'

Seven-year-old Lori Snyder of Newton Centre shares a smile with Dale of Chip & Dale at a recent "World of Difference" lunch in the John Hancock Observatory, sponsored by John Hancock, WCVB-TV's "Good Day Show" and Disney World. The lunch, which gathered families of diverse ethnic heritages, is part of a year-long prejudice awareness and reduction campaign.

Lloyd, Navratilova will play — again

In a replay of their exciting tennis match at Wimbledon last month, Martina Navratilova will meet Chris Evert Lloyd at Longwood Cricket Club on Monday, Sept. 9.

Union Warren Savings Bank will sponsor of the event, with NutraSweet acting as the presenting sponsor. The match gets underway at 7:30 p.m.

David Rogers, vice president of marketing for Union Warren Savings Bank, said the match "brings together the top two women's professional tennis players for a worthy cause — the NutraSweet Martina Youth Foundation."

Part of the proceeds will go to the foundation, which is a charitable organization founded by Navratilova to aid underprivileged children.

Navratilova and Evert Lloyd will hold a post-match reception for spectators who purchase special $45 box seat tickets. Other tickets are scaled at $25, $22, and $18.

For further ticket information, please call the Longwood box office at 731-4500 or visit any Union Warren Savings Bank offices.

Seniors' opera production set for September

NEWTON — "By Any Other Name" scheduled for Sept. 19 at 2 p.m. — the 21st in Newton Senior Center's monthly 'Operatic Personalities' series — will feature familiar arias sung in unfamiliar languages (Would you believe 'Traviata' in Estonian?)

Public response to the colorful presentations, which is comprised of slides and rare historical recordings to illustrate Center Coordinator Walter Wells' sometimes instructive, often amusing, and always opinionated comments, has been lively. The lecturer has, upon request, repeated presentations for such diverse petitioners as the New England Opera Club, New York's Italian Cultural Center, and Ron della Chiesa's WGBH radio program.

The 22 and 23 lectures in the series, on Oct. 24 and Nov. 24, respectively, will feature distinguished tenors Giovanni Martinelli and Aureliano Pertile on the occasion of the hundredth anniversary of the birth of each.

Senior sails Volga for peace mission

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — While many senior citizens consider a trip to Miami as the perfect way to spend the summer, Sophie Pann — a Newtonville resident describing herself as a "70-plus peace activist" — had better things to do with her time.

"I just got back from a trip up Russia's Volga River," Pann said proudly. "It was a peace mission — a way to meet the Soviet people and see how they live and how much they want peace."

As part of the fourth annual "Cruise for Peace," — a Connecticut-based organization dedicated to mutual understanding between the two "superpowers" — Pann and 109 other Americans from 22 states set sail for Moscow July 13. She said the trip was "the experience of a lifetime."

"When we got to Moscow, we met with a Russian peace committee there," Pann said. "Together, we demonstrated for peace in Moscow."

Pann said the Americans were greeted warmly.

"The Russian people were very pleased and happy that the Americans want peace. Everywhere we went the people shouted 'mira — drushba' — peace and friendship."

During the 22-day, eight-port cruise, Pann said she found many of the stereotypes Americans have about Russia untrue.

"In America, they say the Russian people are followed by the KGB and don't have freedom," Pann said. "From the people I talked to, this just wasn't true. We were able to go wherever we wanted, talk to whomever we wanted. No one ever followed us."

Pann, who is Jewish, recalled meeting a Russian Zionist who she said was free to speak his mind — something she said is contrary to public perceptions in America.

"We met a man who was speaking against Russia," she said. "He wasn't being harassed. He took us to his synangogue. We met Jewish women who fed us matzo. I don't think it's true that Jewish people are being persecuted in Russia."

Pann stressed during stops in Leningrad, Volgagrad, Vevushkin Island and Togliatti, an industrial city named for an Italian communist, the Russian people were adamant about working for peace.

Car care lesson set

NEWTON — "Women on Wheels," a one-session workshop teaching the "street-smart" facts about car care will be presented by Mary Jackson on Tuesday, Aug. 27 at the Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge, Washington Street over the Mass Pike (Exit 17), Newton. The workshop begins at 7 p.m. and lasts approximately 2½ hours.

The fee for the workshop is $35 with a $5 discount for registrations received by August 23. The fee includes a car care manual. For registration information call 973-6408.

Obituaries

Samuel H. Lebow, 84

Founded Lebow Brothers, Inc. in Boston

CHESTNUT HILL — Services were held Sunday afternoon at the Stanetsky Memorial Chapels, Brookline, for Samuel H. Lebow, 84, of Chestnut Hill, the founder of Lebow Brothers, Inc. in Boston.

The men's clothing store was located in downtown Boston for many years, until his son, Joel, moved the headquarters to Wellesley after Mr. Lebow's retirement in 1980.

Born in Boston, Mr. Lebow had been a resident of Newton for 35 years and was a consultant to clothing executives in the area for more than 60 years. He often donated clothing to the needy and in the 1930s and 1940s to servicemen.

A longtime active member of Temple Ohabei Shalom and its brotherhood in Brookline, Mr. Lebow was a member of Amos Lodge, B'nai B'rith, the Abedour Lodge of Masons, King Solomon Lodge, Knights of Pythias, Ledgewood Home for Children, the former Dorchester Civic Club and the Jewish Memorial Hospital.

He leaves his wife, Rose (Greenberg); a son, Joel of Needham; a daughter, Henrietta Hurvitz of Needham; a sister, Ann Roazen of Brookline; a brother, Joseph of Brighton; four grandchildren.

Christine C. (Miller) Wilson

Retired Senior Volunteer member

WEST NEWTON — A memorial service was to be held for Christine C. (Miller) Wilson, 73, of West Newton, who died last week at her home very suddenly.

Born in Springfield, Mrs. Wilson did general office work for the Springfield Institution of Savings. She later made her home in West Newton, where she had lived for the past 45 years.

She was an active member of the Newton Retired Senior Volunteer Program.

She leaves her husband, Beverley L. Wilson; two children, David L. Wilson of Wellesley and Constance A. Wilson of Newton; her sister, Ruth A. Plass of East Longmeadow.

Arrangements by the Lyons and Hayes Funeral Home, West Newton.

Lucia (DiBona) Mazzola, 76

Longtime resident of Newton

NEWTON — The funeral of Lucia (DiBona) Mazzola, 76, of Newton, was held from the Andrew J. Magni Funeral Home, 365 Watertown St., Newton, Wednesday at 9:15 a.m., followed by a funeral mass in Our Lady Help of Christians Church, Newton, at 10 a.m. Burial was to be in Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

Mrs. Mazzola died Saturday at WalthamWeston Hospital after a lengthy illness.

A resident of Newton for 60 years, she was a member of Our Lady Help of Christians Church, Newton.

Anna M. Jaynes, 70

NEWTON — A funeral mass was celebrated last Thursday in Sacred Heart Church, Watertown, for Anna M. (Polovitch) Jaynes, 70, of Newton, formerly of Somerville.

Born in Norwood, she lived in Somerville and Cambridge before moving to Newton two years ago.

The wife of the late John R. Jaynes, she leaves two sons, Edmund J. of Newton, John R. Jr. of Revere; a daughter, Frances A. Jones of Somerville; three brothers, John, Anthony and Paul Polovitch, all of Norwood; two sisters, Frances Johnson of Norwood, Helen Joy of Brighton; nine grandchildren.

Arrangements by the Stanton Funeral Home, Watertown.

Vera F. Dudley, taught in Newton

MILTON — A memorial service was held Saturday afternoon in the First Congregational Church, Milton, for Vera F. (Ross) Dudley, 92, of Milton, a retired teacher who taught in Newton, Boston and Milton public schools.

Mrs. Dudley taught in Newton schools for three years prior to her marriage. In 1950, she returned to teaching in Boston and taught in Milton for five years prior to her retirement at age 70.

Born in Toronto, she had lived in Milton since the 1920s and was a graduate of the former Northfield Seminary in Northfield and of Wheelock College.

She leaves a son, Benjamin F. Dudley, Jr. of Dunwoody, Ga.; a daughter, Jean R. Dudley of Milton; three grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

Dorothy Stratton, daughter of Newton

NEEDHAM — A memorial service was held Monday in the Congregational Church of Needham for Dorothy (Mathews) Stratton, 59, a former real estate broker with Akers, Bowen, Burnham and Bergin of Needham.

Mrs. Stratton died Friday in Newton after a long illness.

Locally she is survived by two daughters, Christina M. Stratton of Waltham, Constance N. Stratton of Auburndale. She also is survived by a son, Gardner N. Stratton Jr. of Boston; a brother, Robert Mathews of Weatherford, Tex.; a sister, Patricia Berry of Bethesda, Md.

A native of Dallas, Mrs. Stratton had lived in Needham for 32 years. She was a sustaining member of the Junior League of Boston.

A graduate of Randolph-Macon Women's College, Lynchburg, Va., she was past president of the Randolph-Macon Women's College Alumni Association and also was the alumni advisor to the college's board of trustees.

Former Newton City Clerk, Joseph Karlin dies at 76

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — Former Newton City Clerk, Joseph Karlin, 76, of Newton Highlands, died after a brief illness last Wednesday at the Ellis Nursing Home, Norwood.

The funeral services for Mr. Karlin were held at the Stanetsky Memorial Chapels, 1668 Beacon St., Brookline. Interment was in Sharon Memorial Park.

In tribute to Mr. Karlin, Newton City Clerk Edward English said, "While serving as Joe's assistant he taught me everything I had to know in order to be an able city clerk, and for that I will be forever grateful. In public life, he never had an enemy and was admired by all who were lucky enough to have known him. His memory will linger long here with his fellow employees at Newton City Hall."

In 1966, Mr. Karlin was appointed city clerk for the City of Newton under Mayor Monte Basbas and served as city clerk until 1979, under both Mayor Basbas and Mayor Theodore Mann.

When Judge Monte Basbas became Mayor of Newton, Joe Karlin applied for the post of City Clerk with the support of the then Mayor Basbas, who had become friends with Joe while Joe was a reporter for the News Tribune. Karlin was later appointed city clerk by the Newton Board of Alderman.

In learning of Karlin's death, Judge Basbas said in a tribute to him, "He was very thorough and conscientious as a reporter. He had a lot of compassion for people and was very patient and willing to listen to and to help people who came to city hall while he was City Clerk...A very fine gentleman."

Waltham News Tribune Senior Editor Thomas Murphy spoke highly of Joseph Karlin's professionalism as a member of the paper's news staff.

"The more than 25 years that Joe Karlin covered Newton City government and other local activities marked him as a top grade reporter," said Murphy.

"His fairness in handling the most sensitive political material won him many friends for the Waltham News Tribune. No one ever questioned his accuracy or his ability to provide detail."

Joe Karlin succeeded his late brother Harry in the Newton assignment. "His newspaper experience gave him a knowledge of the community that was invaluable when he accepted an opportunity to go into the city clerk's office," Murphy added.

Joseph Karlin

A resident of Newton Highlands for 31 years, Mr. Karlin was a former reporter for the News Tribune, having served with the Tribune for 25 years. He also was a district correspondent for the Boston Globe, the Boston Herald and the Record-American.

Born in Portland, Me., Mr. Karlin was graduate of Portland High School. He attended Boston University's College of Liberal Arts and was a graduate of Boston University Law School, where he received his LLB degree.

After graduating from BU Law School, Mr. Karlin practiced law for eight years with his brother Louis and, later with his brother, Nathan Karlin in the law firm of Karlin and Karlin of Boston.

Mr. Karlin was a life member and a former secretary and director of the Young Mens Hebrew Association (YMHA) and wrote monthly bulletins to members of the Armed Forces, who were members of the YMHA serving overseas as well as in the U.S. He also was a former director of the Boston YMHA Hecht House.

Mr. Karlin also was a member and past chancellor commander of the Bay State Lodge, Knights of Pythias. He also was a member of Temple Emanuel in Newton Centre, the Massachusetts and Federal Bar Associations, the Dalhousie Lodge AF & AM, The Newton YMCA Businessmen's Club, the Boston Press Club and a former member of the Newspaper Guild of Boston.

The brother of the late Louis Karlin and Harry Karlin (who also was a reporter for the News Tribune) and Samuel Karlin, he leaves his wife, Emma (Trehub); two brothers, Nathan Karlin of West Roxbury and Morris Karlin of Needham.

Newton Sobin, formerly of Chestnut Hill

SARASOTA, FLA. — Funeral services were held last week in Sarasota for Newton Harrison Sobin, 88, of Sarasota, formerly of Chestnut Hill.

Mr. Sobin founded Fulton Aniline Corp., Boston, in 1931 and in the 1960s, he bought United States Dyestuffs Corp., Boston.

In the 1920s, he was a commodities broker and from 1936 to 1939, he founded and operated Harris Finishing Co., Woonsocket, R. I.

He was a member of the Shrine and Masonic Lodge No. 47 in Sarasota, the Numismatic Society, Boston, and he was a Scottish Rite 32nd degree Mason in Boston.

He leaves his wife, Helen (Aisner); two sons (from a previous marriage), Harris J. of Tucson, Gustav P. of Gordes, France; four grandchildren.

Library debate avoided

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — An effort to bring the main library issue to a head on the floor of the Board of Aldermen failed Monday night by only two votes.

Aldermen voted 16-7 in favor of a procedural motion that would have put up for debate a nonbinding resolution endorsing the construction of a new main library at the corner of Homer and Walnut streets.

The move came up short, however, because it needed the support of 18 legislators — three-quarters of the full board.

Aldermen Rodney Barker, Cynthia Creem, Sondra Shick and W. Arthur Reilly sponsored the proposal, which would have asked Mayor Theodore D. Mann to submit an appropriation request to pay for the architectural and engineering drawings for the new facility.

Barker said he will call a special meeting of the aldermanic Human Services Committee sometime after Labor Day to discuss the item.

"It may be in the nature of a public hearing," he added.

Those aldermen voting in favor of bringing the resolution up for debate were the four sponsors and Wendell Bauckman, Paul Coletti, Paul Daley, Elaine Gentile, Louis Irwin, Michael Malec, George Mansfield, James Regan, William Shaevel, Robert Tennant, Verne Vance and Carol Ann Shea.

Those aldermen voting against the procedural motion were Richard Bullwinkle, Bruce Carmichael, Matthew Jefferson, Ronald Marini, Richard McGrath, Carol Robinson and Dominic Taglienti.

Alderman Edward L. Richmond was absent from the session.

Although they were unable to get the issue on the floor of the board for debate, supporters of the brand new facility recommended by the Main Library Facility Committee were bolstered by the wide margin of the tally.

Library Trustee Florence Rubin called the lopsided vote "a sign of support" for the Homer/Walnut site and Library Committee member Sandra Butzel described the tally as "positive."

Benedetto DeMambro, 93

Self-employed landscaper and gardener

WEST NEWTON — A funeral mass for Benedetto "Ben" DeMambro, 93, of West Newton, was celebrated Wednesday in St. Bernard's Church at 10 a.m. Burial was to be in the family lot at St. Mary's Cemetery, Needham.

Mr. DeMambro died Monday at the Wellesley Manor Nursing Home, after a long illness.

Born in Italy, he later came to the U.S. where he settled in West Newton and for 60 years had been a self-employed landscaper and gardener, working at homes in Newton and throughout the area.

Mr. DeMambro was a member of the Newton Retired Mens Club. During World War I, he served in the U. S. Army and was a member of the VFW in Needham.

The husband of the late Nora (Cadigan), he leaves a brother Chris DeMambro of Dover, N.H.; a nephew, Francis DeMambro of West Newton; several other nieces and nephews.

Arrangements by Lyons and Hayes Funeral Home, West Newton.

Philip D. Barron, 72

Retired associate in metals firm

NEWTON CENTRE — A funeral service was held Monday afternoon in the Stanetsky Memorial Chapel, Brookline, for Philip David Barron, 72, of Newton Centre, a retired associate in the metals firm of M. Burstein & Co., Chelsea.

Retired since 1980, Mr. Barron, a former Chelsea resident, had been an executive in his family's coal and oil business until the late 1940s.

A graduate of Chelsea High School, he attended the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy and had been a resident of Newton since 1968.

He leaves his wife, Rosalyn I. (Freedman); two sons, Kenneth C. of Brookline, Richard N. of Maplewood, N. J.; a sister, Ann Smith of Margate, Fla.; four grandchildren.

M. Dorothy McKinnon, 87

Former teacher in Waltham, Newton

WEST NEWTON — The funeral of M. Dorothy McKinnon, 87, of Newton Centre, formerly of Newtonville, was held from the Lyons and Hayes Funeral Home, 1479 Washington St., West Newton, Wednesday at 8 a.m., followed by a funeral mass in Our Lady Help of Christians Church at 9 a.m. Interment was to be at Holyhood Cemetery, Brookline.

Born in Brookline, she later made her home in Newtonville, where her father, Malcolm P. McKinnon, had owned McKinnon's Market on the corner of Watertown and Walnut Streets.

Mrs. McKinnon attended Emmanuel College, Boston, and earned her master's in Education from Boston College.

She had been employed for 55 years with the Waltham school system as a teacher and also had taught in St. Bernard's School in West Newton.

Miss McKinnon was an active member of the Boston College Alumni Association. An avid traveller, she had made numerous donations to charities of all faiths throughout the world, during her travels.

She was the daughter of the late Malcolm P. and Mary A. McKinnon.

Pasquale J. Valenzano, 63

Former City of Newton employee

NEWTON — The funeral of Pasquale J. "PeeWee" Valenzano, 63, of Newton, will be held from the Andrew J. Magni Funeral Home, 365 Watertown St., Newton, Friday at 9:15 a.m., followed by a funeral mass in Our Lady Help of Christians Church, Newton, at 10 a.m. Burial will be in Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

Mr. Valenzano died Monday at the Newton-Wellesley Hospital, after a lengthy illness.

A lifelong resident of Newton, he was an employee of the City of Newton's Public Works Department for 27 years and was a former employee of the Gloria Chain Grocery Store for 25 years.

Mr. Valenzano was a member of the Knights of Columbus Council No. 167. A veteran of World War II, he was a member of American Legion Post 440, Newton.

The brother of the late Alfonso Valenzano, he leaves his wife Lillian (Drake); his children, Mrs. Richard (Donna) Cottens and Mrs. Edward (Linda) Casey, both of Newton and Stephen Valenzano of Revere; his brothers and sisters, Concetta Spampinto of Watertown, Philomena Santosuosso and Daniel Valenzano, both of Newtonville; Rae Haley of Pelham, N. H., Michael J. Valenzano of Daly City, Calif.; five grandchildren.

Michael Lys, 66

GLEN COVE, N. Y. — Funeral services were held last week in Merrick, N.Y. for Michael Lys, 66, of Glen Cove, N. Y. Burial was in Calvary Cemetery, Queens, N. Y.

Mr. Lys died suddenly in Glen Cove, N. Y.

Mr. Lys was employed as a meat cutter for Pathmark Supermarkets in New York. He was a past commander of VFW Post 347 in Glen Cove.

He leaves two daughters, Barbara Hoffman of Farmingville, N. Y. and Jeanne Tinari of Merrick, N. Y.; two granddaughters, Laura and Carolyn Hoffman; a sister, Mrs. Thomas (Joan Malone) Shoemaker of Newtonville; his nephew and niece, Michael and Christine Malone of Newtonville.

Veterans to boost North softball

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A team with no veterans in the outfield and an unsure pitching situation has to be happy with a season that resulted in a tournament berth. In fact, the Newton North softball team wasn't satisfied just to make the tourney, beating Acton-Boxboro before being ousted by Arlington.

The final log was 13-7, including a 9-3 record in the Suburban League, good for second place, behind Brockton.

"The kids who came up did well," said Coach Carolyn Harrington. "We put things together."

It had been quite a while since the Tigers had been in the tournament, though they missed first place by only a game last year, finishing third.

As is usually the case with a tournament team, seniors played a key role. The Tigers boasted the Suburban League's co-MVP in Jackie Kinsella, and several other regulars who stood out.

Among those who will be missed is Sharon Cullins. The team's top pitcher posted an 8-4 record, 6-2 in the league.

The Tigers may have an ace in the hole in Nancy Sullivan. She came up from the junior varsity partway through the year and notched a 5-2 mark, and was unbeaten at 3-0 in the league. She'll be back for another season, and hopefully is ready to step into the number one slot.

Still, Harrington hopes "to see what our freshman and jayvee teams have to offer." Overall, one of the coach's goals is to see the staff cut down on the number of walks issued.

The infield boasts several returnees. Though shortstop Kinsella and her .525 average and 21 RBIs, and All-Star first baseman Beth Morahan and her .354 mark with 19 RBIs are gone, two starters are back.

That's not to say the two All-Stars won't be missed. Kinsella led the club in just about every offensive category. She hit three homers, three doubles and four triples, and her defense bordered on the spectacular. Morahan was also excellent defensively, and was a leader.

Second baseman Robin Silver, only a junior this spring, started for the second straight year. She'll be back to reclaim a starting job next spring.

Offensively, Silver was a standout. She got a hit in every game this season, finishing at an even .500, second to Kinsella. She was third in RBIs (17) despite hitting second in the order. Because of her and Kinsella, the Tigers were "a legitimate double-play threat," according to the coach.

The other starting infielder who's back is third baseman Marie Farrar. The junior-to-be did an excellent job in her first season as a starter and Harrington is counting on her heavily for next spring, both offensively and defensively. She hit .351 this season, so she could be one of the top offensive threats in the league over the next couple of seasons.

Staying in the infield, the catching position looks a bit unsettled with the loss of tri-captain Nuala Horkan. A .377 hitter, Horkan was outstanding defensively. Though not possessing the strongest arm in the world, her glovework was superb, particularly when chasing down pitches wide of the plate.

One possibility for that job is Wendy Rogers, a sophomore last spring. She saw most of her playing time in the outfield, but is capable of playing almost any position. Her strong arm and good size would seem to make her a natural for catcher.

A .247 average belies her hitting ability. The lefthanded hitter has power, and should substantially improve on that mark as a junior. Harrington thinks Rogers could be an "all-scholastic calibre" player.

The outfield shapes up as a Newton strength. Even without Rogers, two starters return.

Right fielder Jen Quigley is back for one more season. Though it took her awhile to adjust to varsity pitching after playing JV ball, she came on strong toward the end of the season and finished at .250.

Over in left, Diane Tormey this spring became the first freshman ever to start for Newton North softball. Though she also had some adjustment problems at the plate early on (resulting in too many strikeouts), she turned into a tough out by the season's end. Her final mark of .260 shows the promise she has for the future.

Gone from the garden are Susan Dore and Sue Nguyen. Dore hit .375 in limited action, while Nguyen stroked the ball at a .318 clip. Her speed will be missed.

Another graduate was Debbie Visco, an infielder/designated hitter who missed much of the latter part of the season with illness.

One thing that keeps Harrington looking ahead is the success of the freshman and junior varsity programs. Coaches Mike Copolla (JV) and Peter Capodilupo (frosh) received a lot of credit from Harrington for their part in keeping the program strong.

"The future looks good for Newton North softball," summed up the varsity coach. "I'm looking forward to next spring already."

Newton swim team 2nd in B Regionals

The Newton Recreation Swim Team, fortified by its strong freestyle relay contingents, finished in the runnerup spot in the B Division Regional Meet held recently at the Canton Town Pool.

Walpole took first place with 299 points while Newton, which has a 9-1 record in dual meets, was second with 214.

All the Newton freestyle relay teams placed in the top four positions in their respective age groups. The 13 & 14 boys won the 200 freestyle relay in 2:45.49. The winning combo was formed by Joey Avis, Tom Robertson, Mario Velez and Billy Beal. Kristen Byrnes, Maggie Flynn, Melissa Dezotell and Tanya Page teamed up to win the 13 & 14 girls' 200 freestyle relay.

Tom and Michael Robertson both won individual turnouts.

B Regionals summary:

Posted 9-1 mark

The Newton Recreation Swim Team closed out its season recently with a pair of victories, routing both Framingham (220-171) and Sherborn (217-168). The Garden City swimmers boosted their record to 9-1.

At Framingham, Eileen Walsh bettered her 13 & 14 butterfly record with a time of 31.31. The boys' graduated medley, consisting of Jim Robertson, Scott Stover, Michael Beal and Steven Beal, bettered its record with a time of 58.86.

Three records were broken in the meet at Sherborn. Miriam Kornitzer cracked a pair of records, winning the butterfly in 35.08 and the freestyle in 30.77 in the Girls' 11 & 12 bracket. Eileen Walsh bettered her butterfly record with a 30.91 clocking.

The 9 & 10 girls swept the butterfly with Kathleen Snyder and Emily Grantham. The 11 & 12 boys were 1-2 with Michael Beal and Clem Roberts. Eric and Josh Osterberg swept the freestyle in the 8 and Under grouping.

The 11 & 12 girls' Miriam Kornitzer and Lauren MacKay swept the freestyle event. Martha Quebec had three wins for the 9 & 10 girls, scoring in the graduated medley, breaststroke and freetsyle relay. Kathleen Snyder had three wins for the 9 & 10 girls in the butterfly, freetsyle and freestyle relay. Jim Robertson was a triple winner, copping the butterfly, freestyle and freestyle relay.

The mile swim was held at Sherborn's Farm Pond. The Newton girls placed fifth out of 13 teams and the boys were sixth.

International League playoffs

Boys' Club, Troubadour advance

The Boys' Club took advantage of 12 walks and a pile of errors, adding just three hits of its own, to take a series-deciding 11-1 victory over Carson Post Thursday in the Newton International League playoffs.

With the victory, the Boys' Club wins the best-of-three series, 2-1, and was to have played C&K Components in the Copp Division final.

Boys' Club sent 12 batters to the plate in the fourth inning, beating out one hit, and scored nine runs to break a 1-1 tie and coast to victory.

Steve Fontano had the only hit of the inning, a run-scoring single his second time up.

Boys' Club combined the one single with five walks, two errors, and a hits batsmen to record the nine runs.

George Haggie took the win, pitching the first four innings. Fontano and Mark Maiocca split the duties the rest of the way.

Troubadour advances

Troubadour, which won the International League championship as On the Road last season, took the first big step in its title defense on Wednesday with a 15-7 victory over Oakley Spa. That gave Troubadour a two-game sweep in the Murphy Division semifinals, and sent the winners into the division finals against the Oak Hill Cubs.

This was a close game until Troubadour scored five times in the seventh, but the winners never trailed after they broke a 4-4 tie with a run in the fourth.

Ironically, the run which put them over the top came without a hit, as Oakley contributed a walk and an error.

Troubadour apparently put the game away in the top of the fifth with four runs. A Derek Fergus single, walk and error loaded the bases for P.J. O'Toole, and he responded with a two-run single. Craig McGary's basehit accounted for another run, with Chris Scalia driving home the fourth with a sacrifice fly.

It turned out that that wasn't enough for a comfortable lead, however, as Oakley answered with three in the bottom half of the frame. Fourth-place finisher in the regular season, Oakley used two walks and a single by Ken Kazarosian to load the sacks for Josh Logan, who roped a two-run single. Arthur Magni's fielder's choice drove in the other marker.

Troubadour finally put the game out of sight with the five-run seventh, keyed by Scalia's three-run homer. the 15-year-old catcher finished the night with three hits and five RBIs.

Troubadour left no less than 13 men on base with less than two outs but still managed to scored two runs each in the fifth and sixth innings to pull out a 4-3 victory over Oakley Spa on Tuesday at Lincoln Park.

Troubadour was aided by a shutout relief effort from Craig McGary. The righthander got a lot of help from his defense, which turned over three double plays in as many innings.

Troubadour looked to be in trouble, down 3-0, going into the fifth, but clutch doubles by Peter Hinterreger and Derek Fergus helped turn the game around.

Cubs cop series

A seven-run lead going into the final inning ought to be enough for a comfortable win in any league, but the Auburndale Warriors made things mighty uncomfortable for the Oak Hill Cubs on Tuesday before finally succumbing, 12-10, at Newton South. The victory gave the Cubs a sweep of the best-of-three quarterfinal matchup.

Oak Hill held a 12-5 lead going into the final frame before a walk, two errors and an infield hit made it 12-7 with nobody out. When Al Clark doubled in two more, it was time for Cub fans to start getting uneasy.

Then came what was probably the turning point of the game. Dan Cedrone singled to center to plate Clark, and when center fielder Rich Freeman's throw went to the plate, he tried to take second. But catcher Dan Freeman fielded the throw and fired a strike to second baseman Dan Katz, who held his ground to lay the tag on the much-bigger Cedrone for the first out of the inning.

The next batter struck out, but the Warriors still didn't roll over, stroking two singles to get the tying run aboard before winning pitcher Harley Malter notched K number seven to end the game.

The other turning point might have come as early as the first, when Auburndale loaded the bases with one run in and no outs, but Malter escaped without further damage.

Dan Freeman cracked two hits and quarterbacked his team defensively as the Oak Hill Cubs brushed the Auburndale Warriors, 11-9, in the series opener at the West Newton Common.

Freeman, Oak Hill's 15-year-old catcher, made a number of key defensive plays in the game in addition to knocking home three runs with two singles.

C&K sweeps

Tom McMillen tossed a three-hitter and drove in his team's first run as C&K Components eliminated Post 440, 6-2, at Cabot Park.

C&K completes swept the best-of-three quarterfinal series, taking a 9-2 decision Monday.

McMillen fell behind, 2-0, after three innings before the C&K bats came alive. McMillen doubled home Frank Battista in the fourth inning to cut the Post 440 lead in half, then delivered the crunch in the fifth with two runs.

Rich Maloney walked and advanced the third when Angelo Tomaino reached first on an error. A Paul Fay sacrifice to left field brought home Maloney with the game-tyer.

Tomaino created the eventual game winner, stealing second while drawing a bad throw that soared into centerfield. The ball continued to roll as Tomaino crossed the plate.

Hehir lifts East in LL tourney

Fortified by a strong four-hit performance by pitcher Brandon Hehir, Newton East gained an avenging 3-1 victory over Warrendale Monday night in a Little League District 7-11 Post-season Tournament game at Praught Field, West Roxbury.

Newton East (3-1) moves into the semi-finals in the losers' bracket and was to face Upper Roxbury at Lyons Field. The loss eliminated Warrendale.

Wild pitches enabled both Bobby O'Toole and Ryan Younger score in the second inning for Newton East. The Garden City nine got an insurance marker in the sixth on a run-scoring double by Steven Elliott.

Newton East evened its record at 1-1 in the tourney last Wednesday by pounding of Parkway Federal, 24-8.

Wednesday's game was stopped after five innings. The winners scored 13 times in the fifth inning to send the lead into the stratosphere.

Brian White led the onslaught with a 5-for-6 performance. The shortstop included two doubles in that bunch.

Winning pitcher Khari Brown fanned eight and walked three, giving up all of his runs in the last inning. In addition, he slashed three doubles.

Dan Dedoling rapped two doubles and scored four times, as did Tony Pasquarosa. The latter was one every time he got up except for once, when he hit a sacrifice fly.

The summary:

NEWTON EAST(3)-Farina 3-0, Pasquarosa 3-0, Hehir 3-0, O'Toole 3-2, Timmons 3-0, Younger 2-0, Burrows 1-0, Elliott 2-1, Finklestein 2-0. Tot. 22-3.

Hanelin letters in lacrosse at Dean

Jim Hanelin, a 1983 graduate of Newton South High School, completed play as a member of the Dean Junior College lacrosse team. The Red Demons finished the regular season with an 11-2 record. The 11 victories set a school record for most wins in a single season.

Hanelin saw considerable action on the Demons' second midfield line. He tallied three goals with no assists, and scooped up 39 ground balls. He is a two-year letter winner.

A business administration major, Hanelin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hanelin of Lincoln Street in Newton.

Tag Football to start in September

The Newton Tag Football League will kick off its 15th season beginning in September with a six-team, 10-game season planned.

Joe Connors of the Newton Park and Recreation Department said there is an opening for two clubs, one from Newton and another from out of town.

The games are played Monday through Thursday at Albemarle Field in Newton beginning the second week of September and the cost for participating in the league is $450 per team. There is a 20-player limit to a team. Anyone interested in joining the league should contact Connors at 552-7120.

Greg Larson fanned 12 in shutout

Our Lady's finalist behind Larson, 2-0

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Eric Goolst flagged down a potential game-tying drive by Jon Glick to make Greg Larson's four-hitter stand up as Our Lady's ticket into the National League finals on Monday night at Burke Field. When Goolst slid across the right-field line with Glick's belt in hand, Our Lady's had earned a 2-0 win over Mosca and the right to face the Boys' Club for the league title in a best-of-five series which begins tonight at 8 at Burke.

Though Goolst drove in the final nail, it was Larson who was the chief carpenter in building the Mosca coffin. He put on an impressive display of power pitching, striking out 12 and walking six while allowing only four hits, none of which were ever in any danger of tearing the cover off the ball.

But because Ray Gladu turned in an exceptional performance himself for Mosca, the outcome was still in doubt when his club came up for its final licks in the seventh, particularly with the top of the order coming up.

Steve Stoller became K victim number 11 when he was caught looking at a 3-2 fastball, but Pillan Thirumalaisamy kept his team's hopes alive with an infield hit. Larson then reached into his reserves for a little extra, getting the dangerous Steve Altman to look at a third strike.

That put it all on Glick's shoulders, who already owned one of the Mosca hits. On an 0-1 count, Glick went the other way and lined a shot down the line. Goolst came racing over and half dove, half slid as he hauled it in in fair territory before sliding across the line. If he hadn't gotten it, Thirumalaisamy would have scored easily, and Glick might have come all the way around.

That concluded what Our Lady's coach Frank Cooney called a "super" effort from Larson. Though he retired the side in order only once all night, he had the strikeout pitch working when he needed it. Coming off a hip pointer which forced him out of Friday night's game, Larson seemed to be at full strength. He stranded seven men in scoring position, getting stronger with runners on base.

The Mosca hitters did have their chances, especially in the first inning when they loaded the bases with nobody out on a wild third strike and two walks.

But once Larson started getting the ball over the plate, Mosca was done. He fanned Glick and Matt Spengler before getting Greg Manthei on a foul popup.

That was the best, but not the last, chance for Mosca, which missed an opportunity for its fifth consecutive berth in the finals.

They put two men in scoring position in the second, but a popup ended the threat. Another man reached third in the third, but Larson whiffed Manthei. A second-and-third situation in the sixth went for nought thanks to a strikeout and groundout.

Meanwhile, the Our Lady's hitters were just giving Larson the bare minimum to work with. They managed only six hits and two unearned runs off of Gladu.

Mosca's righthander pitched an entirely different kind of ballgame from Larson, but was equally effective. He didn't walk a batter and fanned only one, preferring to let Our Lady's put the ball in play and let the defense do the work. For the most of the game, that strategy paid off, but twice the defense let down, and twice Our Lady's made Mosca pay.

The first chink in the Mosca armor came in the second, when third baseman John Fletcher threw away Mark Bilodeau's ground ball. Britt Ryan followed with a line single to left to score Bilodeau from second for the only run necessary to win.

Larson wanted one more though, so he smashed a one-out double to right in the third. When Altman couldn't flag down Fletcher's low throw on Chris Bercury's ground ball, Larson came around to score the game's only other run.

Gladu kept his head despite the miscues. He never got rattled and continued throwing ground balls, with better results. The defense turned over three double plays behind him, as Our Lady's had a hit in every inning but the fifth.

"Ray pitched an exceptional game," said Coach Gary Mosca. "We played well in the field."

The Mosca mentor was quick to credit Larson, however: "He pitched a hell of a game. He deserved it."

Rundlett NE long drive champ

FRANCONIA, N.H. — A blast of 356 yards, one foot was good enough to send West Newton's Bob Rundlett into the national PGA-Golf Digest Long Drive quarterfinals for the first time ever.

Rundlett unleased his shot at the New England Regionals on Sunday at Franconia Golf Course, and it was good for first place.

Only five years ago, Rundlett didn't know if he'd even be walking around, much less playing golf. At the age of 25, he had open-heart surgery to replace a heart valve.

But someone who has golfed for 20 of his 31 years like Rundlett has doesn't let a little thing like that hold him down, and he was soon back out there swinging.

In fact, he became a teaching pro in 1979, and now holds that position at the McGolf Driving Range in Dedham.

Rundlett, who shoots "in the low 70's," got interested in the long drive competition during the last "four or five years." His interest began when the tournament was held at the Leo J. Martin course in Weston.

Rundlett, who stands 5-7 and weighs 180, had to outdrive a lot of bigger competition in Franconia. By doing so, he will head for Akron, Ohio on Aug. 19. There the resident of 174 Webster St. will compete in the national quarterfinals just before the World Series of Golf.

Division I South Lacrosse All-Stars

Dream team dominated by Newton North's 6 nominees

NEWTON — Six all-stars graced the roster of the 1985 Newton North lacrosse team, three more than any other team in Division I South play. Maybe that's why the Tigers are number one in Eastern Massachusetts.

Attacker Fran Yerardi, midfielders Tom Dalicandro and Dan Nardone, defenseman Scott Lanciloti and Scott Hamblett, and goalie Matt Keegan were all named to the all-star squad earlier in the summer.

Weymouth North and Lincoln-Sudbury both put three men on the roster, one attacker, one midfielder, and one defenseman, followed by one man each for Framingham South, Framingham North, and Needham.

The Newton North all-stars:

Fran Yerardi — Five-goal games against Framingham South and Lincoln-Sudbury highlighted Fran Yerardi's season, and a "heck of a season" at that according to coach Rick Clark.

"Fran's not a superb athlete but he had a good knack and played good, heads-up lacrosse," the coach said. "We really didn't expect that much out of him."

Also a football player, Yerardi will attend Mass. Maritime Academy in the fall, where he will play lacrosse.

"Tom is by far the best midfielder I've ever had," he said. "He ate up ground balls. He's probably responsible for five or six of our wins because of his ability to pick up those ground balls and hit the open man."

Dalicandro played even strength, man up, man down, and was constantly in the thick of things when the ball was free. "You don't realize how good Tom is unless you see what he does away from the play," said Clark.

Dalicandro, a tri-captain, will play for the University of Lowell in the fall.

Dan Nardone — Dan Nardone's big moment came in overtime of the semifinal of the Division I State Tournament against Lexington. His goal put North into the State Finals.

"Dan's got one of the most powerful shots in the league," said Clark, who also said Nardone could be a dominant force in college lacrosse.

Also a tri-captain, Nardone will attend either Ithaca College or the University of Lowell.

Scott Lanciloti — If no one else noticed Scott Lanciloti on the playing field, North's top-scoring opponent usually did.

Lanciloti, only a junior last year, was usually given the task of shadowing the opponent's toughest attackman and proved himself as one of the league's best one-on-one defensive players.

"Scott is a very smart player," Clark said, "He was a surprise this year with his performance."

Clark said the three-sport letterman could be an all-scholastic next year. Lanciloti also played football and wrestled.

Scott Hamblett — Not a flashy player, Scott Hamblett took the routine path to the all-stars: Consistency.

"Scott does everything fairly well," Clark said. "He plays defense well, clears well, he has a good stick. We didn't expect as much from him as he gave us. He showed a lot of good things."

With experience on defense, Hamblett added a touch of know-how to the defensive corps.

Also a football player, Hamblett will attend Ithaca in the fall.

Matt Keegan — Despite a back injury, Keegan was "the best goalie in the league" according to Clark.

"I was very pleased with his performance, considering the injury," the coach said. "He's got a good perception of the game but has to work on his consistency."

Keegan, who will be back next year, was a big key to North's fast break. Clark said Keegan's outlet passing is the best aspect of his game.

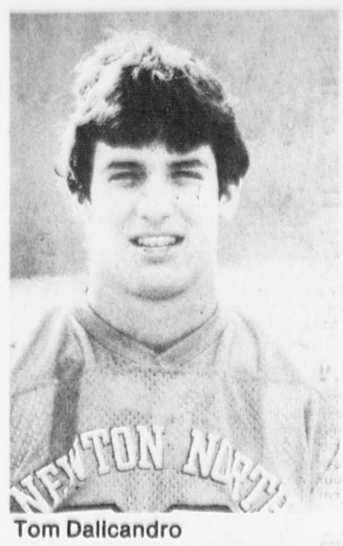

South All-Stars

Attack
Fran Yerardi, Newton North; Mark Donovan, Weymouth North; Ken Cotton, Framingham South; Brian Stenberg, Lincoln-Sudbury.

Bourland gets 100 Percent Award

The awards were presented to men and women in the Masters', Open and Scholastic categories of the Games who exemplified the "grit and spirit that go into a 100 percent performance," according to Robin Rosenbaum of the Nutrasweet Group, the company which donated the trophies and helped sponsor the Games.

"We established this award to recognize the true spirit of competition and personal achievement that characterize the Bay State Games. All 100 Percent winners gave it their very best, and nothing beats that."

Bourland, the Boys' Scholastic winner, has been a member of the varsity soccer team at Newton North High School for three years. He has been selected a team captain for the upcoming season. The 18-year-old points out that he has been playing soccer for two-thirds of his life, having entered the game at age six.

In addition to athletic prowess, Bourland's achievements also encompass academic work; he is a very good student. His brother also competed in this year's statewide games.

"Bourland is to be commended for his perseverance and pluck," said Doug Arnot, Executive Director of the Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation, which runs the Bay State Games. "He's a winner in every sense of the word."

Giving It 100 Percent Award winners were selected based on recommendations by the Games' directors and coaches.

Peter Bourland gets off kick in soccer.

About 3,600 Massachusetts residents of all ages competed in the Bay State Games, which were held July 11-14.

Mack to face Embassy in exhibition

New Mexico, here we come.

The Waltham Moose will tune-up for the upcoming Connie Mack National Finals tonight at Jake Dennis Field (7:30) in a exhibition against Embassy Trophy of the Stan Musial League.

Moose Coach George Viens and his high-flying troops leave Thursday for New Mexico. Having been idle since last week, Viens would like to have any kinks worked out by the time the Moose plays it first tourney game on Sunday.

Viens, who used a half a dozen pitchers in the recently completed Regionals in New Jersey, said he will "probably use four or five guys" tonight.

Wayne Johnson will start the game for Moose. The big righthander won a pair of games in three appearances in New Jersey.

Viens said righthander Mike Burke is scheduled to start for Embassy.

Wallaby's captures 3rd straight crown

Wallaby's women's softball team is looking for new worlds to conquer after again romping to the Village Belle League championship.

Undefeated through three consecutive seasons, Wallaby's hammered out a 28-8 victory over United Security Thursday night at Albemarle Field to retain its crown. Winning pitcher Debbie Visco shared the mound chores with Patty Tower.

Ball, Bellevue put Stones up

NEWTON — Ray Ball had a home run and Jack Bellevue knocked in three runs to lead the Stones to a series-opening, 7-2 victory over Heshal Club Wednesday in the Newton Men's B League Softball playoffs at Hawthorne Park.

The Stones, first-place finishers in the regular season, take a 1-0 lead in the best-of-three first-round series.

Winning pitcher Steve Lafko allowed just four Heshal hits and struck out six in going the distance. Offensively, Bellevue led the way with two hits while Barry Breen also added two safeties and a pair of RBIs.

Game two will be played tonight at Albemarle Field at 6.

"My house is worth how much?"

In recent years, homes have escalated rapidly in value. If you have not been interested in buying or selling, you may have no idea of the current value of your home. Don't try to estimate its value on your own—get professional help from your real estate agent. You may not realize you've priced it too low until it's sold.

Board will reconsider permit flap

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The Board of Aldermen will reconsider last week's vote denying a special permit to Newton Equity Partners for the construction of five condominium units at 175 Auburn St. The vote will take place September 3.

The motion to reconsider, offered by Alderman George Mansfield, came in the wake of confusion over whether or not the board acted on the permit before the 90-day deadline allotted by city ordinance.

According to Alderman Richard McGrath — who voted to deny the permit — the fact the vote took place 15 minutes after the deadline is a moot point.

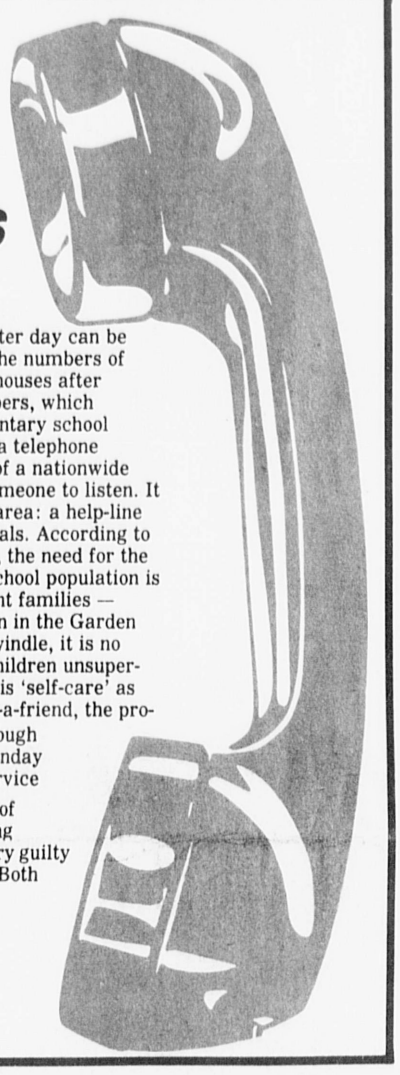

"Since the board voted 12-11 to deny the permit, Newton Equity Partners should not be allowed to build the condo units, even though the 90-day time period technically expired before the board made their decision at 12:15 a.m.," McGrath said. "In my experience as a legislator, the legislative day is not over until the final votes are in."

City Clerk and Clerk of the Board Edward English agreed with McGrath.

"In my position as both city clerk and clerk of the board, it

Newton hotline helps kids to help themselves

By Jeff Peterson, In Focus Editor

For an adult, arriving home to an empty house day after day can be depressing. For a child it can be devastating. And still the numbers of "latchkey" children — those who come home to empty houses after school each day — are rising. In response to these numbers, which researchers have listed as high as one-third of all elementary school students, a Newtonville-based agency will be launching a telephone hotline for latchkey children. CONTACT-Boston is part of a nationwide hotline service providing information, support or just someone to listen. It currently operates two programs in the greater Boston area: a help-line for adults and a message relay service for deaf individuals. According to Stanley Becker, executive director of CONTACT-Boston, the need for the children's hotline is particularly accute. Newton's K-8 school population is approximately 6,200, while it has some 2,100 single-parent families — which could translate into thousands of latchkey children in the Garden City alone. And as day-care rates soar and vacancies dwindle, it is no longer unthinkable for working mothers to leave their children unsupervised for some period of time each day. "The term now is 'self-care' as opposed to 'day-care,'" Becker said. Dubbed CONTACT-a-friend, the program is being targeted at children aged kindergarten through Grade 6 and tentatively planned to operate 3 to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday. Sharon Rogers of CONTACT, said the service hopefully will allay fears of parents who, for any number of reasons, may be forced to leave their children alone during after-school hours. "They're feeling very anxious and very guilty about putting their kids in this situation," she explained. Both Rogers and Becker stressed that the line is intended solely as a "backup" to existing parental or family structures. "We're certainly not trying to walk in and

Survey says:

B.C. needs new garage

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

CHESTNUT HILL — A capacity crowd at Boston College's planned 8,500-seat sports center would fill neighborhood streets with parked cars and leave over 200 more spectators searching for places to leave their vehicles, according to a study released last week by the university.

If the city implements a permit parking system in the Chestnut Hill area, approximately 700 cars carrying Eagle hoop patrons would be stranded or forced into local streets, the report found.

But a BC spokesman said the school will render a decision "by the end of the year, if not sooner" on the study's recommendation that a 700-space parking garage be erected next to the new arena to handle the potential overflow.

The parking garage idea is just one of the numerous suggestions contained in a 20-page traffic and parking study conducted by the Boston firm of Tippetts, Abbett, McCarthy & Stratton (TAMS).

BC hired TAMS to "quantify the need for additional parking on campus" generated by the school's 10-year development plan and to "develop programs

Marini versus the developers

By Howard Altman, Staff Writer

NEWTONVILLE — Angered over the prospect of increased development in their neighborhood, a group of Newtonville residents led by Alderman Ronald Marini has docketed a petition to rezone 200,000 square feet of land on Crafts Street, which is now zoned for manufacturing.

The petition asks the current zoning classification of 18 lots on Crafts Street and Maguire Court be changed from a manufacturing to a private residence district.

The perils of retirement

By Lauren McFalls
Assistant News Editor

For some, retirement means playing more golf, puttering around in the garden, and becoming involved in hobbies they've only had time to dream about.

But according to Henry McDade, president of the Retired Men's Club in Newton, other elders will "retire in May and be buried in November."

And his only explanation for this phenomenon is that "there's nothing to keep their interests up."

Many retirees "expect a happier and carefree time," says Beverly Sorge, a counselor for the elderly with Newton's Public Health Department. "What's happening is they're missing structure and they are not accomplishing things." This results in a loss of self-esteem.

In addition, spouses may find they "don't know each other very well" after the husband and/or wife retires, making communication between the pair difficult, says Sorge.

She adds, however, that others "do very well" because they have prepared for retirement. "They have other interests (besides work) to fall back on," she says.

But for those couples and individuals who have a hard time adjusting to their retirement years, Newton has a team of four nurses, plus Sorge, who can help.

Funded for the past seven years through a federal block grant, the staff handles 100 clients in a year. Currently, the program has 40 to 50 active cases.

Abundance of programs for retired

By Lauren McFalls
Assistant News Editor

Approximately 20 percent of Newton's population is 60 years old or older, compared to Wellesley's and Weston's 14 percent, according to Lois Harris, Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) coordinator. This, at least in part, explains the large number of senior services available in Newton today, she says.

A multitude of organizations in the city offer volunteer opportunities, social events, meals, classes and other preoccupations which bring seniors together for an hour or two of socializing and, in some cases, hard work.

One of the primary programs for volunteer programs for seniors in Newton is RSVP, a national organization that started 13 years ago with funding from the federal government. Interested participants must be at least 60 years old to join any of the nine programs offered by the local program, Harris says, but over half of them are 76 years or older.

According to Harris, the senior program is "a pure volunteer organization."

She explains that "anybody who is retired is a volunteer because they want to do it, not because they're being coerced" by parents, spouses or friends.

In Newton, senior volunteers "do a number of things" from 64 non-profit organization locations within the three towns covered by the program, including Weston and Wellesley.

Although many work at the Newton-Wellesley and the WalthamWeston hospitals, the Diabetes Association, and the Red Cross, others participate in the programs set up by RSVP itself.

The Non-Profit Organization Mailing Service volunteers, affectionately called "the Mailing Ladies" by Harris, meet every Wednesday to chat while stuffing envelopes and stapling pamphlets for nonprofit mailings.

The Friendly Visitors group makes weekly visits to housebound elderly and nursing home residents to "help keep them in contact," says Harris.

Elvis 'live' in the Lake

By Howard Altman, Staff Writer

NONANTUM — It was as if the hip-thrusting rocker from Memphis never died.

Thousands of screaming, adoring Elvis fans packed Hawthorn Field Sunday to pay tribute to the "King" of rock and roll. With the band members arriving in '58 Chevy Impalas, sporting greasy hairdos and leather jackets, the calendar, it seemed on the gray and muggy afternoon, never advanced beyond 1959.

Highlighting the day-long commemoration of Elvis Presley's 50th birthday, Monk Elvis and the Legends belted out Elvis standards like "Blue Suede Shoes" and "Jailhouse Rock" — songs that inspired a generation and changed forever the face of popular music.

"He'll always be the King," Elvis fan Janice Pollman shouted. "His legend and his music will live forever."

Pollman recalled growing up in the fifties when Elvis' gyrating hips and sweltering lyrics caused parents to cringe — bringing on what came to be known as "the Generation Gap."

"My father wouldn't let me watch Elvis on Ed Sullivan's show," Pollman remembered. "I had to sneak out and watch it at a friend's house. My dad thought he was obscene. I thought he was deliciously obscene."

Pollman and her friend, Mary Bradey — who were teenage friends during the King's reign — said Elvis' stage presence is mild compared to today's performers.

"My kid loves Elvis," Bradey said of her 15-year-old daughter. "My parents wouldn't let me watch Elvis either, but compared to what's on MTV, he was really very tame."

Not all parents were so adamant about Elvis. Sam Bianco remembered his son, Sam Jr., being influenced by the King as a boy growing up in Newton during the fifties.

"I liked his style," Bianco said of Elvis. "That hip stuff never bothered me. My son Sam was a musician and he liked to listen to Elvis. I did, too, and I was 50."

Not all those on hand were around when Elvis was playing. Some fans, like five-year-old Eddie Kadoe, weren't even born when Elvis was alive.

"I think he's great," Kadoe said through a smile missing some baby teeth. "My favorite song is 'Don't Be Cruel.'"

One of Kadoe's friends, 12-year-old Leo Camilli, sadly remembered Elvis' death.

"I wish he were still alive, because I think he was the greatest," Camilli said.

Like the days of yore, when the real Elvis would send young girls swooning into ecstasy, Monk Elvis' arrival onto the field caused quite a commotion.

be a surrogate parent," Becker stated. "We will be heavily emphasizing 'What would your mother or father say,'" Rogers added. "I think most kids know what their parents want them to do but are too upset to think it through." Becker predicted calls from young people would range from simply "needing someone to talk to" to responding to crises. In short, he added, children call for counsel on anything and everything from what to do about thumps in the basement to how to make a sick pet feel better.

Parents generally try to be careful about who comes to visit the house when they are not home, and tell their children not to let anyone know they are alone.

"Latchkey kids typically are put in positions of responsibility," Rogers said. "They are expected to grow up very quickly."

It's this sort of high expectations from parents which often leads to recurring problems among latchkey children — from nightmares and insecurity to poor nutrition.

"I wish we'd go completely out of business," Becker sighed. "We really shouldn't have to exist but we do."

At present, CONTACT is seeking both start-up funding and volunteers to man the lines.

"We're all ready to go, we're just looking for people to start up," Becker said. "With 10 or 12 people we could get underway.

"We were just able in May to get up to 24-hour-a-day service on the help-line," Becker said. "We don't want to suck all those volunteers up."

At present, CONTACT has 120 volunteers on its help-line, while an additional 40 man the message-relay phones.

Volunteers for the kids support line will be expected to complete a basic six-week, 20-hour training course. At this point, the first classes are expected to commence in mid-fall.

""We think you need at least that much time to learn empathic listening," she said.

The best situation, Rogers added, would be to have all CONTACT-a-friend workers fully trained on the help-line. This could involve a significant amount of additional training.

"There is a lot of support from the school system," Rogers said. "They think this is just fantastic."

She added CONTACT will be making presentations this fall to both the Newton School Committee and local PTA groups.

Although the pilot program will be launched exclusively in Newton, eventually CONTACT hopes to expand the program to service the entire greater Boston area.

"At this stage we need a lot of evaluation," Rogers stressed. "We'll have to see how it goes before we think of expanding."

Though both Rogers and Becker acknowledged the possibility that parents may use the service as a surrogate babysitter, they stressed such a practice would be discouraged.

"We will not I'm sure be on the phone for a half-hour with one caller," Becker said. "It's not a chatter line."

"We're really helping kids to help themselves," Rogers added.

Unlocking latchkey mystery

At the turn of the century, children of working mothers were labeled "door key children" and typically viewed as misfits — ill-adjusted and just plain strange. And, though large numbers of women joined the labor force during World War II, latchkey children have only recently become prominent in American society.

It is said that modern latchkey children can be distinguished by the keys they wear around their necks. Statistics currently show up to 75 percent of children aged 6 to 13 have working mothers, and that more than one-third of these are unsupervised for significant periods.

Sociologists identify four factors contributing to the latchkey epidemic: two-income families, a growing divorce and separation rate, the feminist movement and an increasingly mobile society.

"Some people say you don't need (a children's help-line) in Newton, it being a resonably affluent community," Sharon Rogers said. "Well it is an affluent community — and one reason is because both parents are working."

Staying active in retirement

"Depending on their needs," Sorge explains, "the nurse will sit down with an individual or both people (in a couple) involved."

Still, she continues, "usually it's the man" who is depressed because "masculinity and productivity is associated with work."

In fact, she stresses that "the depression rate is quite high after retirement for men, and their wives won't understand why he's so depressed." These retirees are bored, and they're not sleeping or eating well, she says.

The nurses, who have been specially trained in psychiatry, will identify the feelings, then problem solve.

However, diagnosing the ailment is not always cut and dry. "Sometimes it's hard to tell if the problem is physical or mental," she says, which is why program employees have training in both nursing and mental health.

Once the problem is determined, referrals are made "to what's available in the area that will correspond with identified interests," Sorge says.

The available resources can provide retirees with more structure and activities (see related article).

The men in the Small Appliance Repair Shop operated by the city's Retired Senior Volunteer Program, located in the Newton Community Service Center, West Newton, joined because they simply enjoy each other's company.

Allie Cohen explains, "We like to do things of this type. We have a lot of fun just getting together here." Gesturing toward several men standing nearby, he continues, "Morris here, he and I went to college together. Ed is a neighbor, and I got him to come here."

Morris Danovitch enjoys the small repair group, even though his work with it scarcely utilizes the wealth of knowlege he developed during his career at the Plymouth Rubber Company in Canton. Danovitch includes the invention of plastic electrical tape among his many accomplishments.

"I enjoy this," he says, standing amidst his friends and the numerous small repair projects underway. "It's good experience, and I meet a lot of interesting people."

George Kirkcaldy agrees, and adds, "you can't just spend all your time doing one thing (at home). This is another thing to do. Basically I think we're all nuts. That's why we're here."

Marguerite Chase, who has been a volunteer with the Non-Profit Organization Mailing Service for 12 years, says "I don't think any retiree should stay in the house all day. They should have something to look forward to, to put aside to do."

She says that one of the benefits of working is that "for a few hours you forget your problems. If you have a pain, you come up here and socialize."

And Carmen Tibbetts, who has been a volunteer worker for RSVP since 1973, says she "comes here because I feel I'm needed. I get more out of RSVP than I give."

John Gurry, a member of the Retired Executive Volunteers, says he joined the group to "learn something." And besides that, he adds, "I guess I'm not old enough to retire yet."

Gurry, who is involved in a number of other community activities in addition to the REV group, explains "If you stop pushing, you stop learning. Now, I'm just waiting for circles to close."

Activities abound for retirees

Offshooting the Visitors group are the telephone reassurance volunteers, who call frail and elderly people daily just to make sure they are safe.

"One woman fell on the floor," recalls Harris. "But she knew someone would be calling." When her phone rang unanswered, the caller immediately contacted the police department to check in on her.

The following is a list of other volunteer opportunities available to seniors through the program:

Lifetime Learning — Retired teachers and professors volunteer their services to provide academic courses for other senior citizens;

Woodworking Workshop — Volunteers repair toys and furniture for nursery schools, and create gifts for RSVP to sell;

Fair Workshop — Seniors skilled in hand-crafts meet weekly to create articles to be sold at RSVP fairs;

Small Appliance Repair Shop — Volunteers repair small appliances such as toasters, mixmasters, and hair dryers, for senior citizens;

REV — Retired Executive Volunteers — Retired executives with expertise in management, finance, public relations, insurance, fund-raising, law are available as consultants to area non-profit agencies.

Other local groups in which seniors can become involved include:

Newton Corner, Newtonville, Nonantum Drop-In centers — All offer lunches; language, dancing, crafts and exercise classes; discussion groups; and health clinics. The Newtonville center also schedules movies and lectures on operatic personalities;

Senior Adult Association — Organized through the Newton Department of Parks and Recreation, the association offers day trips twice a month to locations throughout New England. In addition, the program schedules aerobic dancing classes, swimming, walking, bowling and other exercise programs. There's a monthly supper for seniors at the Lower Falls Community Center, where the association maintains a "Victory Garden" of vegetables they offer to abutting elderly housing residents.

Retired Senior Citizen Employment Program — Organized by Al Green, a retired senior himself, this program finds work for seniors in a variety of positions, including gardening, plumbing, driving, homemaking, and more (552-7170);

Senior Community Programs — Sponsored through Newton Community Schools, this program offers a variety of educational and cultural programs, trips and entertainment at four different sites in Newton: The Upper Falls Senior Activity Series; the Oak Hill Park Leisure Group, The Thompsonville Senior Forum; and The Newton Highlands Senior Group. Call Newton Community Schools office at 552-7118, for more information.

Retired Men's Club — This club will resume meetings this fall at the Newton Highlands Congregational Church, Lincoln and Hartford streets, at 9:30 a.m. on alternate Thursdays. On the other Thursdays, the discussion group meets at 9:30 a.m. at St. Paul's Church on Walnut Street in Newton Highlands.

The investment/financial group meets on the first Wednesday of each month at the Second Church, Chestnut Street, West Newton at 1:30 p.m. All retired men are welcome. Call Henry McDade for information at 527-4269.

$2 million of city's certified free cash already spoken for

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — State officials have certified the city's fiscal 1985 free cash at slightly more than $5 million, but almost $2 million of that amount is already spoken for, according to Comptroller Lawrence Marino.

The Department of Revenue's computations, which were completed last week, place the total free cash available for appropriation at $5,066,285, Marino said.

However, approximately $1.885 million of that record-breaking figure is already slated to be set aside for specific purposes, which reduces the total amount of spendable funds to approximately $3.2 million.

The city will use about $1.1 million in free cash to establish its traditional contingency account reserved for "extraordinary or unforeseen" expenditures.

Since contract negotiations with the labor unions representing police and fire department employees are still in the works, another $700,000 must be set aside to cover those future settlements.

Meanwhile, the Board of Aldermen has approved an $85,000 appropriation from free cash to pay for the creation of new classroom space at the Mason-Rice Elementary School.

An as yet undetermined sum of free cash also will be reserved in a special account to create a liability fund for third-party legal claims filed against the city.

The city's policy regarding the remaining free cash is "to avoid using it for any continuing purpose," which restricts its use to nonrecurring requirements — typically, capital improvements, equipment purchases and capital outlay projects.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann is expected to formally outline the Executive Department's plans for the free cash on September 3, when he submits to aldermen his suggested Supplemental Capital Budget and an updated version of the city's five-year Capital Improvement Program.

Neighbors join in Claflin reuse process

NEWTON — A fledgling neighborhood group's late entry into the aldermanic reuse process has delayed for two months any further deliberation on the fate of the vacant Claflin School building.

The Real Property Reuse Committee last week bowed to the group's demand that neighbors be given the chance to recommend their preference for the Lowell Avenue site.

Although a spokeman for the organization, which was formed two weeks ago, asked for 90 days to think about the issue, aldermen balked at such a sizable delay and set Thursday, Oct. 17 as their next meeting date.

The five-acre Claflin site, declared surplus five years ago, had been destined for use by the Hospice of the Good Shepherd, but the Waban-based organization was forced to pull out of the deal in early February.

Asked why it took her group six months to organize, Co-Chairman Catherine L. Farrell, of 67 Oak Cliff Road, said the abutters were unfamiliar with the city's reuse process and did not learn of the matter until just prior to a June 27 public hearing.

The tentative sentiments expressed by committee members in attendance last week revealed initial support for some type of mixed housing reuse for the former school.

Aldermen OK Mason-Rice renovations

NEWTON — An $85,000 appropriation from surplus to build more classroom space at the overcrowded Mason-Rice Elementary School has received a final vote of support from the Board of Aldermen.

Although opponents had dealt the item a number of last-ditch delays in the past months, school officials remain confident that the project will be completed in time for the school's 1986 fall opening.

Aldermen Michael Malec and Rodney Barker, still smarting from the School Committee's decision to close the Hyde Elementary School last year, voted against the appropriation request.

Malec said he told School Committee members before their vote on the Hyde and Oak Hill Elementary School that the closings would involve additional, unanticipated costs.

He said a project to increase the classroom space at Countryside is due this winter and estimated that unexpected costs totalling $250,000 have arisen from the School Committee's failure to implement a politically sensitive redistricting plan.

Barker was more emphatic in his criticism of the School Committee.

"The Board of Aldermen is being asked to spend city tax money so (committee members) can avoid the tough, necessary decisions," according to Barker.

He called the School Department's "makeshift and temporary" plan to convert the partially underground storage room at Mason-Rice into classroom space the equivalent of teaching children in "a dungeon."

When the School Committee decided to close the Hyde, members said they could not condone building new classrooms when there were empty ones available, according to Barker.

"Now they've completely reversed themselves. What was gospel last year is heresey this year and we're getting them off the hook," he added.

Liquor license suspended for 3 weeks

NEWTON — The state Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission has upheld the Licensing Commission's decision to suspend the license of Bay State Liquors, in Newton Centre, for a period of three weeks.

According to reports from the Newton Police Department, the store sold alcoholic beverages to four minors on Jan. 12, 1985 and Jan. 15, 1985.

In subsequent criminal proceeding at the Newton District Court, the four youths admitted to sufficient facts on charges of purchasing liquor and in possession while under age. Criminal proceedings against the package store owner and an employee were continued without a finding at Cambridge Superior Court.

City's insurance costs skyrocketing

NEWTON — The aldermanic Finance Committee has approved an $85,361 appropriation from free cash to cover the city's skyrocketing insurance costs, but balked at Mayor Theodore D. Mann's request for $10,000 to conduct an audit of the city's total coverage package.

With little debate, FinCom voted 6-0 in favor of the larger financial request, which is needed to make up for an increase in the bid price on the city's general liability package.

By the same vote, however, aldermen delayed action on Mann's proposal to engage an insurance advisor to audit the city's coverages, help prepare the bidding specifications for next year and to advise the city on whether more or less self-insurance is needed.

The city budgeted $170,000 for its insurance costs this year, but the bid that was received carried a total cost of $255,361. The policy covers every conceivable mishap from employee dishonesty and wide-scale riots to damage to the War Memorial dioramas.

The one firm that responded was the Brewer & Lord Insurance Company, a Boston-based insurance agency that finds carriers for its clients. Brewer & Lord has handled the city's policies for several years.

"We were fortunate to get any bids at all. Nobody wants to touch it," Comptroller Lawrence Marino said. Three different companies offered bids for the city's policies in 1982.

Clarification

The Newton Graphic apologizes to its readers for not presenting this week the fourth part of a series on the city's next mayor, Theodore D. Mann, as promised. The copy disappeared early Tuesday in the midst of a computer foulup. The final installment, which deals with Mann's term as mayor and his future plans, will appear in two weeks.

Fire talks stymied

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Newton Firefighters Association (NFA) President Kevin McArdle has accused the city of trying to wait until firefighters are "desperate" before settling their collective bargaining impasse.

The two sides first sat down to talk about a new two-year agreement in March 1984 — four months before the contract expired in July.

"When the city stalls likes this, they realize that, with people on vacation at this time of year, my membership may not be as militant as they would be around Christmas time, when they have to buy presents for their families. They'll wait until we're desperate," Kevin McArdle said.

McArdle is "not optimistic at all" about a state-sponsored mediating group's entrance into the talks

"I'm not knocking the Joint Labor Management Committee, but they have no substantive effect under law. They cannot render a decision that is compelling to both sides. Only the city can win. We have no legal recourse to compel an agreement," he said.

JLMC Field Investigator Theodore O'Brien has been assigned to the case, but a date for the first session has yet to be scheduled. The NFA refused to join the city's petition asking for the JLMC's involvement.

McArdle, then a "fledgling union member," was not impressed when the JLMC took over negotiations with the union in 1981.

"It was totally fruitless. We were supposed to meet at two o'clock. The city's bargaining team came in 20 minutes late, called a caucus five minutes later and never returned to the table for the rest of the afternoon. They were totally unwilling to bargain effectively," he recalled.

As a counter-offer to the JLMC petition, McArdle said he asked the city to consider the "voluntary arbitration" option allowed by the state's public bargaining law.

"The city rejected that idea flat out. If my demands are so incredibly outrageous, then the city would have nothing to lose by going to voluntary arbitration. If they feel so strongly that their offer is fair, what would they have to lose?" McArdle said.

"We don't know where to go from here. The city knows this. The city knows that they are dealt all of the cards and, if they want, they're going to deal me all jokers. They're not going to deal me an ace. They're going to deal me a joker," he added.

McArdle believes the city should consider abandoning its policy of not using free cash for union pay hikes, arguing that a 1-percent pay raise for all the city's non-school workers would cost only $260,000.

"We cannot go back to our body with something substantively the same or less than the offer we rejected in March," he said.

That offer consisted of a 5-percent raise for each of the first two years of the contract and a one-time cash bonus of 1 percent, but the city has reached more favorable financial settlements with the unions representing teachers and school custodians.

McArdle said his membership would also like to see the hundreds of thousands of dollars in interest the money has earned during the 13 months since their previous contract expired.

A city-wide strike has been ruled out, even though negotiations are non-existent at this point and there are few new options left to try.

"If we contemplate a strike situation, who pays? The citizens of Newton pay. We cannot play that type of politics, that type of dirty pool. We can't play games with the lives of the citizens," McArdle said.

Crafts Street project triggers legal action

By Gary Dorion
County News Service

CAMBRIDGE — A group of Newton residents calling themselves GARDEN (Guard against Reckless Development Endangering Neighborhoods) and an alderman are suing the city and a developer in an attempt to stop construction of a five-story office building on Crafts Street.

The suit was filed by GARDEN and Alderman-at-Large Bruce Carmichael. Named as defendants are Michael F. Iodice Jr., Trustee of Chatham Investment Trust, of Newton, and the city's board of appeals.

GARDEN charges the board violated its owns rules June 25 in upholding the building inspector's issuance of a building permit on what residents contend was a "reconsideration" vote.

The board took the position the vote was not a reconsideration of an earlier vote but in fact was the end result of a continuation of an earlier hearing.

According to the suit, the board voted 4-0 on May 28 to deny the issuance of the building permit, then reversed that decision June 25.

The plaintiffs claim "for purposes of reconsideration" there were insufficient members present to constitute a quorum because only three of the four members voting on May 28 were present on June 25.

On June 25, the complaint further contends, the time for reconsideration had expired and no notice was given of any new public hearing to be held on the petition and no new public hearing was ever held.

The plaintiffs had objected at the May 28 hearing to the issuance of the building permit, stating the proposed building would violate city ordinances by creating a traffic hazard, by exceeding maximum height restrictions and by otherwise destroying the neighborhood's aesthetics.

The plaintiffs also contend the zoning ordinances of the city do not allow for construction of an office building in a manufacturing zone, at least not without meeting height and parking regulations.

Helping those with habits

NORWOOD — Joan O'Brien of Norwood quit smoking 10 weeks ago at the Michelle Dyan Studio on Rte. 1, Norwood, after just one private visit.

She is joined by 60 other local residents who have "kicked the habit" by using a new technique developed by Michelle Dyan of Braintree. Judy Walsh, owner of the Norwood studio explains that clients are very awake and alert at all times while using the new Audio Conscious methods of hypnosis. Most clients who have been unsuccessful with other methods of hypnosis are experiencing success with the Audio Conscious technique. All appointments and sessions are private.

Since opening the studio in Norwood, 75 smokers have used the Audio Conscious Hypnosis method and 60 have quit. There have been 48 weight clients with only three having difficulty in achieving their goals.

No Dieting — Eat All You Want, Pill Does All The Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA — An exciting new "all natural" weight-loss "Super" Pill developed by the JMA (Japanese Medical Association) has just been approved for distribution in the United States. Reportedly, it can guarantee that you will lose more than a pound a day without dieting, from the very first day until you reach your ideal weight and figure. News of this "Super Pill" is literally sweeping the country. It's called Amitol and there has never been anything quite like it before.

"Flushes Calories Right Out Of Your Body"

What makes Amitol so thrilling and unique is its reported ability to flush calories right out of your body. Amitol is completely safe, it contains no drugs whatsoever. Its ingredients are derived solely from the Konjac root which grows primarily in Northern Japan.

Why the Konjac root? It has been used in Japan for over 1600 years to produce rapid and natural weight-loss!

Japanese studies verify that Konjac root actually prevents fat producing calories from being absorbed into your system. They say it does this by surrounding much of the fats, proteins and carbohydrates you have eaten with a protective viscous coating which is then gently flushed out of your system. And according to Japanese research this produces absolutely amazing results.

And who can disagree! Amitol (although brand new to this country) is already being called by many people, "the most exciting weight-loss breakthrough of the century." In fact, everywhere there are reports of easy and fast weight-loss from formerly overweight people (in all walks of life) who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Company Offers Extraordinary Guarantee

You now can purchase Amitol direct from the North American distributor, and it comes with an extraordinary guarantee.

If you place your order now and then follow the simple instructions for a period of 30 days, you must be completely satisfied with the dramatic visible results or just return the empty container and Dyna Labs will immediately send back your entire purchase price. This guarantee applies regardless of your age or current weight level. What could be better than that! It's just that simple. If you've tried to lose weight before and failed you no longer have an excuse. Amitol is available, it's easy and it works without dieting!

Best of all, ordering Amitol is simple, fast, and reliable! Simply call Dyna Labs Toll Free: (1-800-441-5454) Ext. 901, and order with your credit card. If you don't have a credit card Dyna Labs will also accept C.O.D. orders right over the phone! All orders are shipped immediately by UPS, which means no delay and no orders lost in the mail!

$19.95—30 day supply, or $35.95—60 day supply. Operators are standing by and will be glad to take your order. You can order 24 hrs. a day, 7 days a week! Please don't wait to call. You really do deserve to be thin!

Taking care of business

In case you missed it, the Board of Aldermen, last week, apparently failed to notice that a developer's application for a special permit had been on the docket for more than 90 days before it was acted upon. That means the developer's original plan was passed by default, the way some people see it.

The board's "oversight" has already prompted considerable personal criticism, with aldermen scurrying around looking for somewhere to place the blame. Land Use Committee Chairman Cindy Creem, whose responsibility it is to keep track of such matters, has been a prime candidate in some eyes, as has former alderman Mark White, attorney for the developer.

Some are saying White had a "moral obligation" to inform the aldermen the deadline was at hand. White has responded with the contention that such an announcement would run contrary to the ethics of his profession.

City Clerk Edward English, whose adept management of the board's affairs has been, in our eyes, above reproach, was even brought into the fray. We see that as a measure of the frenzy that followed the fiasco.

Since Highlands Alderman George Mansfield has asked that the matter be reconsidered, the board will have another shot at the petition. No doubt the reconsideration proceedings will likewise be marked with a certain amount of finger-pointing and namecalling, but those who indulge in such activities are missing the point.

The point is, the board is not "picking them up and laying them down" the way it is meant to. The 90-day rule that has come into question recently was designed to insure that petitions are treated evenly and fairly.

If more meetings or longer meetings are what is needed to make sure last week's incident is not repeated, we would advocate them. It seems more likely, though, that simply applying the same attentiveness to board business that we all apply to our daily business would probably be sufficient.

Taking a bigger bite out of crime

We applaud Governor Dukakis' recent two-pronged push to take a bigger bite out crime in the commonwealth. It's rare that any two pieces of legislation enjoy such a symbiotic relationship as the bills aimed at toughening up sentencing procedures and making more room in our prisons.

The bill the Duke promises will "guarantee certain punishment and predictable sentencing for violent criminals, while dramatically increasing the length of time served by repeat offenders" is praiseworthy and timely. But it is useless as along as the state's correctional system is functioning 1,100 beds above capacity.

For all the good it might do, the governor's two-pronged approach to a revamp of the system still depends on adequate funding.

We can only hope our state legislators share his concern for a situation that will be out-of-hand in the near future if appropriate steps are not taken now.

Father knows best

'Hey, stupid, I've been there'

By Richard W. Bishop

"When I was a boy of 14, my father was so ignorant I could hardly stand to have the old man around," Mark Twain wrote nearly 100 years ago. "But when I got to be 21, I was astonished at how much he had learned in seven years."

So it also seems to be today with the youth of our nation, at least those who reside in my home and in the homes of several acquaintances. Perhaps, as it was in Twain's time, it has always thus been between fathers and sons...and perhaps with daughters and mothers as well.

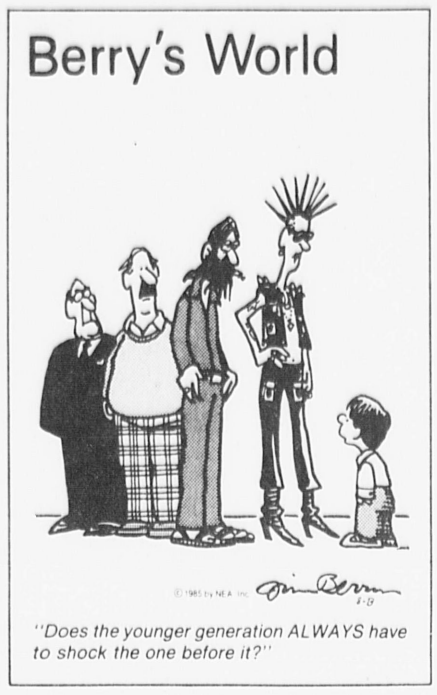

The "children" are positive that their fathers and mothers don't know a great deal now, never did know much of anything, and may very well go to their graves in a state of almost complete ignorance - particularly when they, the children, have so much greater knowledge. The prevailing attitude appears to be that parents can't possibly understand us because the parents never, no, never, went through any of the trauma that we are going through.

Parents didn't fall in (and out) of love the way their children do. Schoolwork today is much more difficult and time consuming than it was years ago, they tell us, and they may very well be correct on that premise. They do, however, make it sound more like centuries ago.

At nearly 51 years of age I find this situation not so much amusing as I do irritating. "Hey, stupid," I want to scream, "I've been there. I know. I've had the same experience. I thought my father was an idiot too when I was your age. But guess what, young child of mine, I was the one who was less intelligent...in just the same way that you are less intelligent than I."

It's amazing what the experience of age can do for one. We, the "older" generation that is, experience, and that is the key word, we experience life. It teaches us that black isn't always black; white isn't always white. It teaches us to question. Where did this so-called expert - "x" being the unknown quantity, and a spurt no more than a drip under pressure - where did this expert get the data that he...or she...let's not be sexist...gives to us as the gospel according to St. Youth?

The answer generally is, unfortunately, that the expert either read a book, saw a television program, or spoke with a peer, and that now qualifies him or her as the leading authority in the family...usually an authority on what is wrong with adults.

"Does the younger generation ALWAYS have to shock the one before it?"

Of course, we as parents are not perfect. We do make mistakes, some more serious than others. Perhaps that is why our children consider us to be failures. Yet, parents are considered to be perfect beings by the very young. When suddenly they find that we are not infallible, that there are "chinks" in our armor, it is a difficult concept to accept.

When children branch out, begin to seek their own identity, begin to question, does it then become a necessity to brand parents with a label, or at the very least to admit to peers that, "Yeah, well, my parents aren't so smart either."?

My dad had a sixth-grade education. He left school to work in the granite quarries of West Quincy. It was a family business. It went belly-up in the depression. I don't believe that there was such a thing as Chapter 11 at that time, but I admit it, I'm not certain.

Anyway, it did go out of business. Dad worked hard. In 1934, with less than a high school diploma, he went to work in a shipyard. He had a vision. He wanted to make money and he wanted his kids to get the education and some of the niceties of life that he never had. He had pride. He wanted to make it for us, even though he really wasn't qualified to become a company president...at least not by educational standards he wasn't.

Dad never made it, not by his standards. I put myself through college after the freshman year. How Mom and Dad handled the first year, I never did learn. My brother and sister didn't want to go to college, but they've succeeded in their own right, "doing their own thing." But, at least according to Dad, he never achieved that certain standard that he had set for himself, the goal that would have allowed him to have a greater inner peace.

He was wrong. Now that he's gone, I guess I can say that. He did so much for each of us. He taught me that rabbits freeze when they're frightened and that's when they are easiest to shoot - I hated hunting. He taught me never to jerk a trout because they'll spit the hook everytime - and I love fishing. He taught me that there are people who will tell you one thing and mean another, and oh boy, was he right about that one. He taught me to trust what I believe, not what others try to make me believe.

He taught me more than perhaps I will ever know. He set standards of living and of working to which I can only hope to measure up. If I have a work ethic that says I must always give just a bit of extra effort, just another hour on the job to insure that it is completed properly, it's because that was my father's philosophy. He taught me, as Twain said in Life on the Mississipi, to feel "...gratified to be able to answer promptly, and I did. I said I didn't know," but not to feel ashamed for saying it.

Thanks dad. You may have seemed rather backward when I was growing up, but I guess the tables were really reversed. I regret with such great sorrow that I never adequately told you how much you had given; how much I now appreciate it; how much I really love you.

(Richard Bishop lives in West Newton. He is the father of two daughters and a son, "and like so many other parents," he adds, "Joan and I are surrogates to dozens more.")

Just color me red...tape that is

By Sarah Droney McGurrin

I have a tale to tell. One of those woeful nightmares inflicted upon lowly human beings by computers and bureaucrats.

The problem with this tale is that I don't know who the villain is. The cast of shady suspects, though long and muddled, is familiar to Bay State motorists: Insurance companies, the Registry of Motor Vehicles, the collector of taxes and the excise tax department.

This story began when a woman with a patch over her eye pulled in front of my car without so much as a glance to see if anyone was coming. My car was totalled, the insurance company said, failing to inform me that they would now crumple the car in some automobile death factory without my permission but with plates still attached.

That's what started this whole horrific situation, for license plates forever tie you to that great computer in the sky.

The helpful people at the insurance company told me when I went to insure and register my new vehicle that I should definitely file a lost and stolen plate form (though it was neither lost or stolen ... merely crumpled) with the registry to save any future hassles.

I filed, as advised.

I also gave my insurance company a copy and saved a copy for my already bulging auto-problems file tucked away at home.

Life passed pleasantly those next few months until low and behold I recieved an excise tax bill for — you guessed it — the crumpled car with crumpled plates. On that bill, there were several numbers to call for questions. I called all of them, but as in most state offices, either there was no answer or an incessant busy signal.

I wrote a cordial note, politely but firmly explaining that I couldn't pay excise tax on a totalled car — but would gladly pay it on the new car parked in front of my house.

It is now five months since the plate was crumpled. I received a memo informing me that copies of the stolen plate form and an insurance company statement were required to resolve the matter.

I dutifully obeyed.

A month later, thinking naively that everything was cleared up, I got a "DO NOT IGNORE THIS NOTICE OR NO IGNORE ESTA NOTICA" letter informing this law-abiding citizen a warrant had been issued to collect the $13.75 in excise tax plus daily penalties.

I picked my chin up from the floor and between expletives tried vainly to call the number on the notice.

Ha Ha.

It is now eight months since I filed the stolen plate form with the registry. I try to muster the strength to trek into Boston City Hall and confront this monster. Parking is a major problem. One hundred people at a time cruise the Cambridge Street strip eyeing a dearth of legal spaces. Then there's the problem of feeding the quarters into the ever-hungry meters.

There's nothing worse than attending to car-oriented business and geting snagged with a $15 ticket.

I find a space, jam in four quarters to earn an hour's respite from the meter maid and head towards 89 State St., Office of the Deputy Collector. It's interesting to note this office is situated right next to Chelsea's Bar, the establishment where Larry Bird allegedly got into a fight. I theorize he had just left the Deputy Collector's office and a fistfight was a natural reaction.

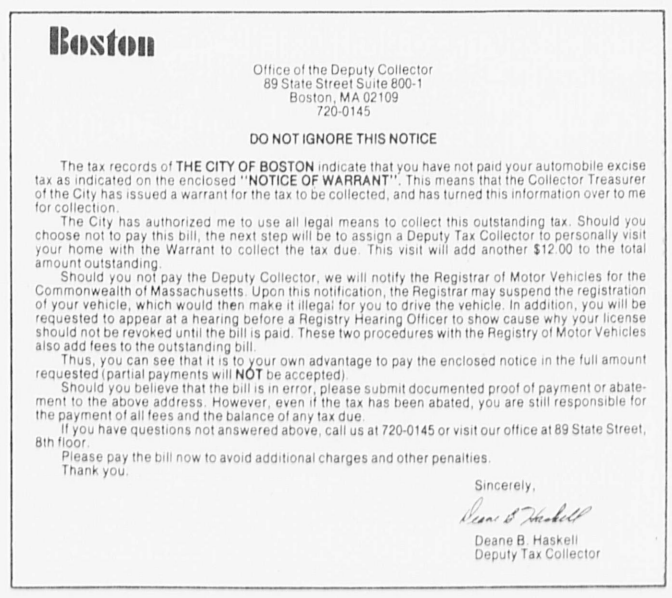

The office is dreary, small and hot; a torture chamber for those poor slobs unlucky enough to have warrants out for their arrest. After listening attentively and sympathetically, a lovely young lady informed me she was indeed sorry (aren't they always), but I'd have to cross over to city hall and explain my problem to the excise tax people. They would decide if I owed any money, after which I would return for the collector's stamp of approval.

Naturally the excise tax line in the next office — spacious in comparison — is long, hot and bothered. Not one person stands in front of the property tax window.

I explain to the man that I have been trying for months to tell this office that the car is in auto heaven adorned with crumpled plates. I have done everything the excise people have asked. Could he help? Yes ma'am, I understand, he said swiftly as he gathered all my papers and punched numbers into a computer and stamped on my warrant the sum of $5.

I now foolishly believe progress has been made and I trudge back to 89 State St. to get stamped. I think about pumping more quarters, but decide to just get this over with. With five dollars in my hand, the same pleasant young lady takes the warrant and begins crossing off numbers.

DO NOT IGNORE THIS NOTICE

The tax records of THE CITY OF BOSTON indicate that you have not paid your automobile excise tax as indicated on the enclosed "NOTICE OF WARRANT". This means that the Collector Treasurer of the City has issued a warrant for the tax to be collected, and has turned this information over to me for collection.

The City has authorized me to use all legal means to collect this outstanding tax. Should you choose not to pay this bill, the next step will be to assign a Deputy Tax Collector to personally visit your home with the Warrant to collect the tax due. This visit will add another $12.00 to the total amount outstanding.

Should you not pay the Deputy Collector, we will notify the Registrar of Motor Vehicles for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Upon this notification, the Registrar may suspend the registration of your vehicle, which would then make it illegal for you to drive the vehicle. In addition, you will be requested to appear at a hearing before a Registry Hearing Officer to show cause why your license should not be revoked until the bill is paid. These two procedures with the Registry of Motor Vehicles also add fees to the outstanding bill.

Thus, you can see that it is to your own advantage to pay the enclosed notice in the full amount requested (partial payments will NOT be accepted).

Should you believe that the bill is in error, please submit documented proof of payment or abatement to the above address. However, even if the tax has been abated, you are still responsible for the payment of all fees and the balance of any tax due.

If you have questions not answered above, call us at 720-0145 or visit our office at 89 State Street, 8th floor.

Please pay the bill now to avoid additional charges and other penalties.
Thank you.

Sincerely,
Deane B. Haskell
Deane B. Haskell
Deputy Tax Collector

She then announces that I owe the $5 plus $11 in late penalties.

Once again, I pick up my chin from the floor and ask incredulously why I should pay late fees when everyone else fouled up. She explains sympathetically it's not her fault (it never is — state agencies love to blame each other) but all the excise people are interested in is the dates on the computer printout which says I'm paying this bill in August when it was due in April.

"I refuse to pay it," I declare with ruffled feathers and sweaty brow. "Fine," she says. "Your license and registration will be revoked and even if you win the case it will still cost you $40 to get them reinstated."

Mercilessly beaten down, I fork over the cash. Bewildered, I stumble out of the office and shuffle to my car, cursing all bureaucratic red tape and wondering what will happen when THEY find out I've never been sent a bill for the car and non-crumpled plate I'm approaching.

There is a happy ending though. I didn't get a ticket.

City's support of festival cited

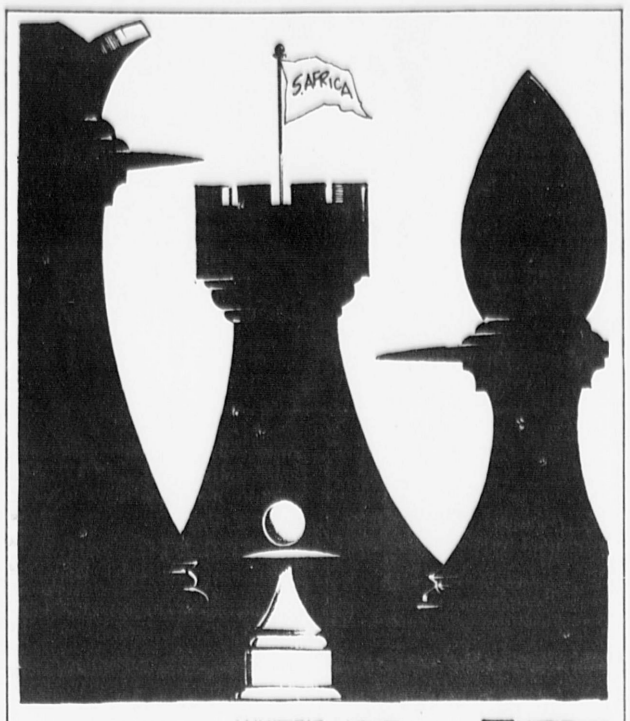

Open letter to Mayor Theodore Mann:

On behalf of the Saint Mary of Carmine Society I would like to say thank you for your help and support in making this year's festival a success. The festival was attended by thousands of people who enjoyed the weeks festivities, especially the processions.

I am proud when I say I am from Newton, for we have a city that is rich in culture and tradition, thanks in part to you.

I full well know how much you have supported us over the years. The society is going through a change, which is hopefully for the better. Once again thank you for your help and support.

Sincerely Yours
Tony Gentile

WHITE'S MOVE

Backing a loser

By John Carpenter

The United States has once again placed herself on the wrong side of a revolution.

Eighty percent of the people in South Africa are slaves and they are, justifiably, ready to explode in revolution. Yet the U.S., the greatest and most powerful country in the world, continues to finance the white minority racist rulers of that country.

As the death toll rises in that backward land, apartheid has become a household word in America. (Though South Africa boasts all the comforts of modern "civilization," can a country based on slavery be called anything but backwards?)

Apartheid means separation. It means whites in South Africa live on the best land, get the best jobs, and move about the country freely. Though blacks there are paid for their work just as Americans are paid for their work, they are no better off than slaves. Whatever rights they have are purely cosmetic, given by the whites as tokens to appease the rising tide of outrage against them.

The question is, how can we stop it?

The answer is: stop paying for it.

South Africa is blessed with rich mineral deposits vital to the United States. And, perverse though it may seem, the cheap labor force and stable environment that apartheid provides means large profits for international corporations. These corporations, in turn, pour money into the coffers of the minority rulers.

It is this corporate money that is the backbone of white oppression there.

President Ronald Reagan vigorously condemns apartheid. His solution is to do nothing that would harm the white minority rulers. Rather, he advocates maintaining the status quo — continuing to pour American dollars into the coffers of the white minority — while "pushing for reforms."

Reagan and others also argue that it took America hundreds of years to free the slaves and we have still not achieved total equality. This is a blatant rationalization.

Whites in America abolished slavery without giving up any of their power or wealth. This would not be the case in South Africa.

That country's system is completely dependent on apartheid. If whites were to voluntarily do away with apartheid, it would mean giving up everything they own. The wealth that only two out of ten people now enjoy, would have to be shared by all. Judging from the white's history of utterly amoral behavior, it is not likely the whites will make this sacrifice.

Reagan and others also argue that blacks will be worse off if American companies divest. This strangely resembles the argument of plantation owners in our south, who used to say that blacks were better off as slaves because they were well taken care of. This, of course, is moral hogwash.

If American companies pulled out of South Africa, blacks would be hurt. Whites would be hurt as well because the South African economy would likely crumble.

But it would be a fair fight. The whites would be lowered to the poverty of the blacks and from this equality would emerge a government representative of all of the people. Once this government had emerged, the wealthy and powerful U.S. could return and help its new friends achieve prosperity.

This will not happen, however. The United States will continue to finance apartheid. The black revolution will continue to grow and, in desperate need of help, will turn to the Soviet Union. The result will be another Marxist regime that hates the United States and loves the Soviet Union, unless something is done to stop it.

The Abracadabra Eater is alive and well in Newton Centre

Herpetologists (i.e. experts in the study of snakes) claim that, in the wilds of Borneo, there exists a reptile, the largest in the jungle, called the Abbracadabra Eater, which devours everything it can reach. When it exhausts live victims, it will chew on grass, flowers, and underbrush. When food runs out completely, it begins to feast on its tail and, eventually, gorge itself out of existence.

Hence its name: Abbacadabra; now you see it, now you don't.

A fact of the parking fiasco in Newton Centre recalls the tale of this reptile.

The residents of Newton Centre have long complained that employees of businesses have clogged peripheral streets (in addition to laying claim to meters) and have been content to receive a $2 parking fine for the privilege of parking all day long in the shade of residential trees.

One remembers the howls of protest by some leaders of the business community when an increase in parking fines was proposed; $5, they blurted, would not prove a deterrent.

But now it is reported that, since the $5 parking fine has become law, there has been an increase of almost 20% in parking meter revenues; the meter-hoggers are not allowing the meters to expire.

Of more cogent interest is the statement by an operator of a business which is closing its doors. He asserts that employees in the Centre preempt the meters and run out to feed them every few hours. And he concludes that there is no room for customers to park.

It should be pointed out that many of these customers are tax-paying citizens who come from all sections of Newton. In short, the Newton tax-payers are subsidizing the parking of employees in Newton Centre.

Incidentlly, a recent study showed that of 1900 cars parked in Newton Centre, 77% were registered to non-residents.

If the employees cannot provide private parking for their employees and if customers refuse to come to Newton Centre because employees have gobbled down meters and curb spaces, we may well had a repetition of the tale of the Abbracadabra Eater; already, the businesses, in Newton Centre are beginning to choke on their own huge size and bid fair to eat themselves out of existence.

Frank has added to red tape

In studying about our Congress from their record, I recently discovered that our Congressman Barney Frank stands alone in advocating burdensome record-keeping from American businessmen and women.

In the conference Report H.R. 1869 "Automobile Record-keeping Requirements," the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 included a provision that required taxpayers to keep detailed "contemporaneous" logs for their business and personal use of automobiles, home computers, and other equipment in order to qualify for tax deductions. H.R. 1869 was introduced to repeal this new paperwork burden.

Out of 435 Congressmen, ours was the only Congressman who saw fit to force this burdensome regulation on those productive Americans who work for a living.

Use old building for library

I can't believe that the city of Newton is still up in the air about a new library.

With all the vacant buildings in Newton, why is it so important to have a brand new building? Look at our new public buildings, Newton North High School and Day Jr. High School - they cost the taxpayers money constantly with repairs. I can't understand why Newton finds it so difficult to utilize their closed buildings, such as Warren Jr. High, the Ed. Center, which will be closed soon, and Bigelow.

The argument that these buildings are not strong enough for a library seems kind of fishy to me with all the restoration of old buildings that is being done with today's new technology. Somebody in Newton just wants a new building not a new library.

New head for ed foundation

By John Moroney
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The Board of Directors of the Newton Schools Foundation (NSF) has selected Marilynne Bellengi of Stamford, Conn., to serve as the independent, non-profit organization's first executive director. Bellengi, who is currently regional director of the American Diabetes Association of Connecticut, will assume her new position on Sept. 16.

"The board of directors stressed the need for a person with proven fund-raising experience," Superintendent of Schools John Strand said.

Strand, who served as executive director while the board pondered its final decision, said Bellengi was selected from a field of 10 candidates because of her extensive experience in fund raising and community education for non-profit organizations.

Under contract with the foundation, Bellengi's salary will start at $30,000 a year. The length of her tenure has been left to the "discretion" of the board of directors, Strand said.

The NSF, a 20-year-old program designed to raise money through the sale of school curriculums and programs, was revamped by the School Committee last year to help augment the annual school budget which is facing the fiscal constraints of Proposition 2½. In the past, the foundation raised from $3,000 to $4,000 a year for the school system, Strand said.

"It's really been pretty dormant," he said. "It's really just been a bank account."

The decision to turn the NSF into an organization independent of the committee and the superintendent's office came after the city examined a similar program in California. Like Massachusetts, California school budgets are limited by Proposition 13, a tax measure similar to Proposition 2½.

"Basically," Strand said, "the concept was we need more money without raising taxes. The idea of the foundation is to ask for voluntary donations in lieu of taxes."

As the first executive director, Bellengi will assist in fund raising, the recruitment and training of volunteers and with public information efforts to explain to residents the need for supplemental funds.

Previously, the school system has received grants and funding from national endowment organizations like the Ford and Carnegie foundations. Over the past few years, the superintendent said, these institutions have "fallen apart" or have become interested in areas other than public education. "The result is we've had to pay out of our own pockets," he added.

Strand believes the NSF's revised charter, which allowed the creation of the board of directors and the executive director's position, can "serve to support and maintain innovative" education in the city's schools. Specific requests he might make to the foundation for funds include more computers and modernized science equipment.

The foundation's board of directors responsible for choosing Bellengi include: Anna Faith Jones, Buzz Birnbaum, Walter Jennings, Richard Hamermesh, Marian Klein, Ann Berwick, Paul Guzzi, Alan Tichnor, Robert Ricles and Robena O'Malley.

Bellengi, a Massachusetts native formerly from Reading, has held positions in the Bay State as executive director of the National Kidney Foudation and associate director of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation of Massachusetts.

Elvis lives

Escorted by a Newton Police motorcycle officer, Monk pulled up to the stage in a silver limo. As he jumped out of the car, throngs of screaming fans mobbed him. It was, in the words of Pollman, as if the King himself had only been away for a little while.

"There will never be another Elvis Presley," she sighed. "Today's musicians will come and go, but Elvis will always be the King."

"Elvis' music was so real," she said. "Today, the music is phony. I doubt if 25 years from now anyone will be holding Prince days."

As for "the man who would be King," Monk Elvis — who has played the role each of the seven years the festival has been around — said he was honored to be playing the part.

"There was only one Elvis," Monk Elvis said. "The people love him and always will. I'm grateful for the chance to be involved with his legend."

Dan Pelligrini brought the King back to life for his 50th birthday.

Marini moves to stop developers

According to Marini, the petition is designed to protect the neighborhood. "This area is really congested," Marini said. "There is a place for business and a place for homes, and we want to make sure the neighborhood retains its quality of life."

Marini is so serious about the petition, he and his group kept it secret until last week's meeting. "We wanted to make sure no one knew about this too soon because we don't want anyone filing a perimeter permit," he said.

According to Marini, a perimeter permit would preserve the right of development for the owner of the property, preventing the city from changing the classification.

Marini said if a perimeter permit was granted to owners, the city would not be able to change the classification of the commericially-zoned land in question, something he said would make for a "messy situation."

"It's not friendly between (the property owners and the petitioners)," Marini said. "There's just too much commercially zoned land. I think you're going to see this issue get very hot soon. We're going to grab the bull by the horns and stop the infringement on the neighborhoods."

Marini said while the petition is not aimed specifically at developer Michael Iodice — who is building a five-story office building across Crafts Street — it is designed to dissuade others from undertaking similar construction.

"This isn't really aimed at Michael Iodice," Marini — whose ward the Iodice development is in — said. "We just want to make sure that type of development doesn't happen again. We don't want to see what happened over there happen here."

"What (Iodice) has done is an outrage," Coletti charged. "We are beginning to feel there's nothing we can do. What's happening to this city in terms of development is unreal."

Coletti described the petition as "a counterpunch." "We are trying to protect ourselves from this thing happening again," he said. "The building going up now is much too intense for the area. The city's abandoned our interests to look for more commercial taxes and by the time this thing would go through committee all available property will be built on. We want to make sure there is something we can do about it."

Iodice, however, said he is being "scapegoated" by the petitioners.

"There has been a lot of development in this city over the past couple of years. I think our development came along at the ideal time to be picked on," Iodice said.

Iodice — who hadn't heard about the petition — added he "doubted" it would pass the board.

"I understand that the people are concerned about the impact of the building," he said, "but I don't think rezoning the land is the way to go. I think it would be ideal to have the area zoned as commercial and manufacturing."

BC's arena plans require building a new garage and strategies for improving traffic circulation" on and off campus, the study said.

City officials, neighborhood leaders and school administrators will receive copies of the analysis this week.

Although some portions of the report appear more favorable than others, BC Community Affairs Director Laurence Barton believes "the bottom line indicates that our proposals will have little, if any impact on area traffic, and may indeed reduce commuter trips."

"The release of this study should alleviate any fear or concern in the neighborhood that Boston College's proposals to improve its existing campus will negatively impact the area," he said.

"No doubt there will continue to be a few, vocal neighbors who will be displeased that positive findings emanated from this report. However, we are committed to following through on the recommendations made, and in working with the city of Newton to insure that, as we improve our campus, it is to the benefit of the Garden City," Barton added.

TAMS believes that the implementation of BC's development plan over the next decade will respond to the concerns voiced by Chestnut Hill residents, who complain of the excessive on-street parking, noise and lights during major sporting events, and by Allston-Brighton residents, who resent the intrusion of students into their neighborhood's housing market.

One of the most significant conclusions of the study involves the school's plan to build a joint basketball/hockey arena on the present site of McHugh Forum. Construction is scheduled to begin in April 1986 and last 18 months.

Using the worst case scenario of a capacity crowd for basketball, TAMS recommends the creation of the new garage along Lower Campus Road on the site of five tennis courts across from the Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, Jr., Library.

The firm said traffic flow "can be controlled adequatelty" by placing police at the intersection of Hammond and Beacon streets and at the Beacon Street entrances to the campus.

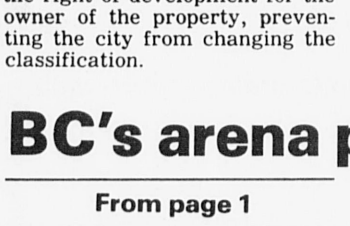

The study found that 2,736 cars would arrive at the school for a capacity basketball game and quickly take the 2,529 spaces available on the campus, on the local roads surrounding the school and along St. Thomas More Drive.

This would leave 207 cars without a place to park, according to TAMS.

With this conclusion in mind, the study also considered the effect of the permit parking program proposed for the Chestnut Hill neighborhood.

"In a full capacity situation, if most of the off-campus parking were no longer available to basketball patrons, the parking deficit would increase to approximately 700 spaces," the report stated.

"A garage for appromiximately 700 vehicles would more than suffice for a 'worst case' basketball event, and also should eliminate any concern in the neighborhood over school day or special event parking. The university should consider this possibility," TAMS added.

THE GENUINE ARTICLE

It is often contended that imitation jewelry will oust real jewelry from the position that it has held for centuries. This is unlikely. However beautiful imitation jewelry may appear, there is still a special feeling which only real jewelry can give. This is, in some measure, due to a sense of ownership and personal association with an object of value. However, there still remains the inexplicable enchantment of jewelry which has fascinated mankind for centuries. Even when these wonders of nature have been modeled and put together by human skill, they do not give up their mystery. As a result, they will keep their strange and indescribable allure forever.

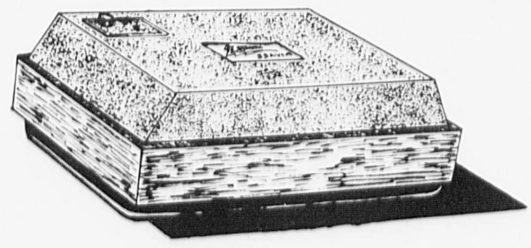

Whether giving or receiving fine jewelry it is always so much more special when it is a true gem stone. There is a certain quality and brilliance about real stones that make them appreciate in value over the years as opposed to the imitations. Visit CAROL "THE GOLD LADY" to view a wonderful display of exquisite stones set in equally beautiful creations. People come from many towns around to have us design a piece of jewelry especially for them. We are reopening in August after a month off. Linkage plan eyed

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Looking at ways to generate more low-to-moderate-income housing, the Aldermanic Land Use Committee Monday night voted to further study a proposal requiring commercial developers to contribute toward a housing fund.

Though the proposal — submitted by Housing Subcommittee Chairman Carol Robinson — offered no specific formula for the contributions, the subcommittee will research ways to link city commercial construction with housing.

Currently, the city has an ordinance calling for residential housing developers to set aside 10 percent of a development's total square footage for low-to-moderate-income housing. According to Robinson, if passed, the commercial ordinance would add to the financial pool for such housing.

"We want to work out a proposal that will link the wallets of the business community to housing," Robinson said.

Alderman W. Arthur Reilly, a Boston Redevelopment Authority employee, was more blunt. "What we are talking about," Reilly said, "is extraction. We want to find out what we can extract from the developers in return for developing in Newton."

According to Reilly, the city of Boston "extracts" certain payments from commercial developers in return for special permits allowing them to build over and above what is called for in zoning regulations. Such "density bonuses, like the ones in the 10 percent ordinance," Reilly said, could be used in Newton as "an ace in the hole" to get developers to contribute to the housing pool.

"The long-term question is what kind of cards we will have to play," Reilly said. "In order to be able to extract money from developers, we will have to be able to offer them something that is beyond their matter of right with regards to zoning regulations."

Alderman Verne Vance, who is on the subcommittee, said one way to increase Newton's bargaining ability is to change zoning regulations.

NEWTON — Howard Altman has been named as city hall reporter covering the city of Newton for the News Tribune and Newton Graphic. Altman, a 1982 graduate of Ithaca College in Ithaca, New York, received a degree in communications.

A native of the borough of Brooklyn in New York City, Altman now resides in Hyde Park. Altman worked for radio stations and freelanced for area newspapers before being hired by Transcript Newspapers.

Board will reconsider permit denial doesn't matter to me what time the vote took place. I recorded the vote as taking place August 12 — within the 90-day timeframe," English said.

In light of his English's opinion, McGrath said the motion "is legal dirty pool."

"(The motion) plays into the hands of the developers," McGrath said, "because as far as I'm concerned, the issue would have been dead. To solidify his position, (attorney for the plaintiffs) Mark White had to get someone from the prevailing side to reconsider — which as I see it was the only way to keep the issue open. I think Mr. Mansfield was duped into requesting the motion because of his inexperience."

Mansfield, however, said he reserved the right to reconsider the motion after speaking with Assistant City Solicitor Michael Pierce.

"(Pierce) told me that in all likelyhood," Mansfield said, "if the vote were challenged it would be ruled null and void. To protect the neighborhood and keep the proposal to five units instead of six without restrictions, I called for the reconsideration. I acted out of concern for the best interests of the neighborhood. I don't think I was duped into anything."

White maintained the board failed to act within the alloted time and as a result the permit was technically approved.

"The statute doesn't say anything about a legislative day, it says 90 days," he said. "No one has the right to determine what a day is. The law determines what a day is. As far as I'm concerned, the permit is good."

White also denied "putting anyone up to" a call for reconsideration.

"I called every alderman on the board and explained to them what my role is and what the options were," White said. "I spoke to George and told him that there was a reasonable likelyhood that the original permit calling for six units without any conditions would be approved. He asked what the alternatives were and I told him if the motion was reconsidered, we'd go along with five units. George realized that the board is in a tough position and called for the reconsideration — no one was 'duped' into anything."

White argued the motion to reconsider would be in the best interests of all parties involved.

"My guys aren't looking for trouble," White said. "Five units would be the best thing for the neighborhood. There was a lot of work done to reduce the size of the proposal. We would rather have board approval, because the alternative would be to go with six units."

White added if the board denies the motion, or votes against the proposal if the motion passes, he will assume the proposal has passed and ask the Building Department for a building permit. He added if the city instructs the Building Department not to grant a permit, there is a possibility the case could wind up in court.

City Solicitor Dan Funk said his department is looking into the matter. Funk said, "We are analyzing and preparing strategies for our client, the board. The threshold question here is if the board failed to act within the timeframe. If the answer to that is yes, then we need to find out what options the board has."

Sculpture that's as large as life

By Christie Herlihy-Starr
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The shape of a large man sitting quietly by the sidewalk, but close enough to potentially touch a passerby is enough to startle many neighborhood joggers who round the sidewalk near 9 Gay Street. Closer inspection reveals the life-like figure is not human, but a life-sized impressionistic cement sculpture.

In fact, five such "people" populate artist Heidi Tobler's sideyard, some made more lifelike by their proximity to the clothes hanging from her clothesline. Tobler is used to the attention her figures attract.

"For me, it's great. I'm usually working outside, so I see people stop, and take a long look. They say, 'May I come in?' and ask 'What are you doing?'" she said.

Tobler is simply expressing herself as an artist, and struggling to find a market for her work. Until April, when she could no longer afford the $300 monthly rent, she worked in a studio in the Waltham Watch factory. Since then, the divorced mother of three teenagers has used her yard as a studio.

Tobler wants her art to confront people. That's why she prefers to do life-sized figures.

"When you see that man on the bench, maybe it will remind you of someone you know or someone you have seen. If it was a little figure, you would look at it as a sculpture. If it's larger it comes closer to reality. It's not so distant. It doesn't look like a piece of art," she said.

With her large subjects, the 42-year-old Tobler wants not only to confront viewers but prick their consciences. For example, the rotund man sitting on the bench Tobler calls "The Ice Cream Lover." There is no ice cream in sight, just the end result of such a love — a person whose fat arms rest on fat thighs, belly protruding slightly, body hiding the bench upon which he sits.

Another sculpture suggests a thin elderly woman walking her dog. "I saw such a woman walking near the Museum School in Boston," Tobler said. "She was so thin. The little fat dog she was walking seemed her only companion. She, herself, was so undernourished. It was obvious most of food she had was going to the dog. It haunted me." In Tobler's sculpture, there is no body to the woman. Simply the shape of her half-opened coat.

Much of Tobler's work has to do with alienation, those of conformity opposed to the free spirit. Going against the grain has been the theme of much of her life.

In the small village in eastern Switzlerland where she grew up, Tobler said always wanted to be an artist. But the prevailing attitude was an art education for a woman would be a waste.

Tobler did spend a year in Basel, Switzlerland, studying art, but she was eventually pursuaded by her parents to become a lab technician. When she moved to the Boston area with her husband and three children in 1973, Tobler began to take evening art classes at Newton North High School. A Newton neighbor, who was an art historian at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, encouraged her to enroll in the evening program there.

With a year and a half to go before getting her diploma from the museum school, Tobler dropped out for financial and artistic reasons. "I felt I had reached a stage where I could do the work at home," she said.

With a $250 grant from the Newton Arts Lottery invested in cement, the cheapest material for outdoor sculpture, Tobler began working 6 to 7 hours a day on her art.

It takes one to two days alone to form one of her figures out of chicken wire. "Afterwards I look like 20 cats ran over me," she said of the scratches she receives. Over the chicken wire form, Tobler places burlap and coats this with cement that has been strengthed with acrylic latex.

She realizes her prime interest in doing life-sized figures is somewhat impractical. They are too big to construct inside, and too large for the typical buyer's home, so she's trying to find out if she can achieve the same artistic satisfaction by creating on a smaller scale.

"I realize the size is difficult for people to deal with," Tobler said, wondering if her work would have the same impact if reduced to a size over which humans could tower.

Tax increase nominal

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — After beating back several attempts to ease the commercial tax burden, the Board of Aldermen last week voted only a nominal, one-year increase in the city's tax rates.

Aldermen overwhelmed three separate efforts to reduce the tax rate on business parcels and voted 20-3 to continue the policy of placing the highest possible tax burden on commercial, industrial and personal property.

The decision translates into a modest 20-cent increase in the current residential tax rate and a 42-cent hike in the rate paid by commercial property owners.

The new residential rate will be $20.54/$1,000 and the new commercial rate will be $34.54/$1,000. City Treasurer Theodore L. Scafidi hopes to have first-half tax bills in the mail by mid-September, but they still will be payable by Nov. 1.

The average assessment of a home here is $121,000, meaning the owner will see a total tax bill increase of approximately $24.

Finance Committee Chairman Paul Coletti took the steam out of proposals that would have asked Mayor Theodore D. Mann to use part of the city's record surplus to reduce the tax rate on commercial property or stabilize both the commercial and residential rates.

Coletti told his colleagues that it would be "highly unlikely" for Mann to approve any suggestion involving the use of surplus monies.

Alderman Michael Malec got the ball rolling by saying that he saw "no new arguments" persuading him that a reduction in the commercial burden is imperative.

Business advocate Alderman Robert Tennant countered, "The pendulum usually swings in two directions. It hasn't been swinging in any direction as far as the businessman in this city is concerned.

"Some day, we're all going to be sorry," he said, warning his colleagues of a potential revolt by disgruntled businessmen.

Alderman Richard Bullwinkle noted that the high burden on

Ward 2 alderman race:

Three vie for two at-large slots

Irwin's goal — capital gain for city

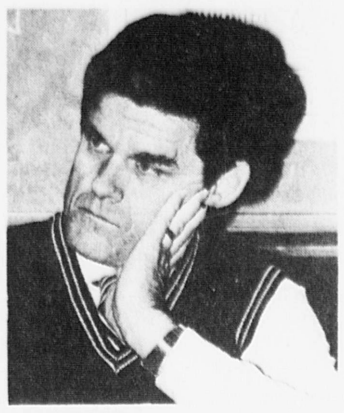

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Now that Ward 2 Alderman-at-Large Louis Irwin has successfully focussed his colleagues' attention on finding a solution to the city's main library dilemma, he intends to revive their interest in the capital improvement process.

Greater attention to planning for the city's long-term capital needs is Irwin's goal as he mounts his bid for a second term on the Board of Aldermen.

"It's my present and future desire to focus attention on the importance of the Capital Improvement Program as a meaningful financial tool that the board has control over. It's a serious document and one we can work with the mayor as a partner in developing," according to the 42-year-old Lowell Avenue resident.

Irwin, a professor of biology at Simmons College, believes he has done "pretty much" what he said he was going to do during the 1983 race, including "trying to strike a balance between social needs and financial gain when disposing of surplus property."

Louis Irwin

As a member of the Real Property Reuse and Finance committees, Irwin has become "very interested" in the city's long-term financial strategies and management.

He believes School Committee members should be paid as much as aldermen because they control half the city's budget and face "a job that's politically more difficult."

"The compensation should be comensurate with their responsibilities. I think $3,000 a year is enough for now," he said.

Although he sympathizes with those supporting the push for a development moratorium, Irwin believes the current wording of the proposal includes "too many exceptions" that make the document "a weak instrument."

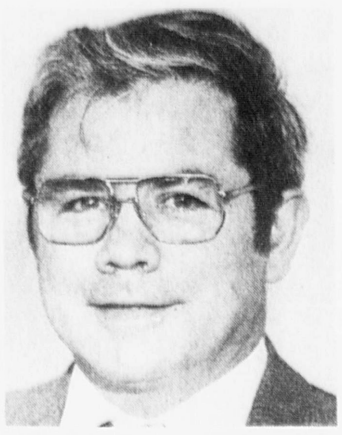

"It doesn't achieve what it seeks to achieve. My greatest hope is with the Economic Development Commission. It's the brightest spot on the municipal landscape as far as land use controls are concerned," he said.

Irwin expects construction on a new library to be underway by January 1987.

Although he would prefer to see the facility built at the corner of Homer and Walnut streets, he will support renovations at the former Warren School if there is no other way to put the issue to rest.

"It's not my way or no way," according to Irwin, who served as a member of the Main Library Facility Committee.

He lives in Newtonville with his wife, Carol (Crumrine), and two sons, Anthony, 13, and Brian, 5.

Ciccone to ensure neighbors participate

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Allan L. Ciccone, a candidate for alderman-at-large in Ward 2, believes November's election is his chance to make sure residents have a role in the city's legislative process.

"I'd like to get involved. I'm concerned about the neighborhoods. People who have objections have the right to be heard. Right now, they're calling for a modernization of our zoning ordinances," according to the 45-year-old Fair Oaks Avenue resident.

Ciccone, who retired from the Police Department in 1983, said he would make "a full-time job" out of his aldermanic post.

"I have the time, and it's a job that takes that kind of commitment," he added.

He believes it is "proper" for aldermen and School Committee members to be paid stipends, although he said he would continue his campaign even if the position was completely voluntary.

"For the time they put in, it's right that they get some kind of reimbursement. $3,000 is almost like a token fee," according to Ciccone, who staged an unsuccessful effort to join the Board of Aldermen two years ago.

He believes residents should be given the chance to vote on the current moratorium proposal.

"The people should be heard and the ballot box is the place for them to speak out. The moratorium supporters are not asking for a great deal. You have to feel sorry for the people who have commercial buildings going up in the middle of their residential neighborhoods," said Ciccone, who favors a building ban of "at least one year."

He added the residents who abut developer Michael Iodice's planned Crafts Street office building "have a legitimate squawk."

Ciccone, who supported the renovation of the former Warren School during the last campaign, believes a city-owned building should be converted into a library as long as the project can be accomplished safely.

"There's no doubt we need a new library. The building in Newton Corner is almost a disgrace. Most of the city's buildings are in good shape, but the most important one is falling apart.

"The cost to build a new library is going to be astronomical if we don't act on it soon," he added.

Ciccone lives in Newtonville with his wife, Patricia (Maloney), and three children, Allan Jr., 20, Margie, 18, and Shannon, 16.

Ward 2 alderman runs uncontested

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

Elaine Gentile

NEWTON — Ward 2 Alderman Elaine M. Gentile believes her uncontested status in this November's election is indicative of her commitment to her constituents.

"I think I do a good job. I keep my constituents informed. I'm there when they need me. They know there isn't anything too large or too small for me to undertake," according to the Broadway Street resident.

Gentile, one of three owners of Ray's Deli in Nonantum, said she has been effective on both a ward and city-wide level during her last term.

Her list of ward accomplishments include working with a variety of neighborhood groups to clean out and landscape the Crafts Street Yard; stopping major commercial development projects; helping to start the processing of returning Bullough's Pond to its natural state; and, pushing for a new reuse of the former Claflin School.

On the city-wide level, Gentile points to her role as chairman of the Public Safety & Transportation Committee and her work on expanding the tax base, while still maintaining essential city services.

As she heads into her fifth term on the board, Gentile believes the aldermanic stipend of $3,000 should be increased.

"It's not a part-time job as most people think. Actually, I feel as though I'm a full-time employee of the city. In other cities, the legislators meet once a month and get $6,000 a year. I think $3,000 is bargain. I'm working pretty cheap," said Gentile.

She continues to oppose a moratorium on commercial development.

"I don't think the moratorium is the answer. It's too drastic a change. Instead, we should close the zoning loopholes," she said, adding that she has yet to see hard evidence of the proposed building ban's potential economic impact.

Gentile has "very mixed feelings" on how to solve the city's library dilemma.

"I will concede the fact that we need something, but I haven't fully digested the idea of a brand new building at the corner of Homer and Walnut streets," she said.

Gentile's goal for the next two years is a peaceful resolution to the city's sporadic zoning woes.

"I want to deal very heavily with zoning and land use items. There's some pretty nitpicking issues that have come up and they're causing a lot of serious problems that we have to resolve," she said.

Davidson 'desires' to make impact

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Joshua E. Davidson wants to play a role in determining the city's future and intends to get that effort underway as one of two aldermen-at-large from Ward 2.

"My desire is to have an impact on my environment — the world we live in, our country and our city. I'm not sure politics is the answer, but it's a good place to start," according to the 26-year-old Dale Street resident.

Davidson, the senior vice president for a local property management firm, said he intends to carry on the tradition his family started two generations ago by making the Garden City his home.

"Our community will only thrive and flourish if we all get involved," he said.

If he wins a spot on the Board of Aldermen, Davidson wants to "lay the groundwork to guarantee that the residential quality and suburban beauty of Newton is preserved, while, at the same time, our economic lifeline is not cut off."

He believes aldermen and School Committee members should be paid for their effort.

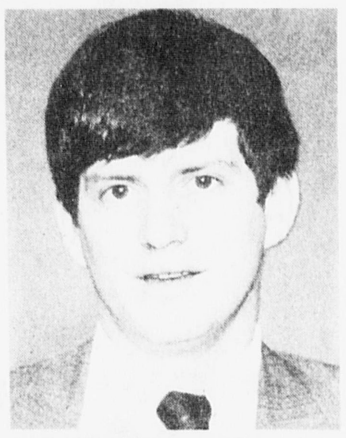

"To become an alderman is, in many ways, a second full-time job," according to Davidson.

One way to insure a strong commitment and a sense of accountability from the city's elected representatives is to offer stipends, but he said he does not know whether the $3,000 annual salary that aldermen receive is the proper amount of compensation.

"I'm not an alderman yet," Davidson added.

The moratorium movement as it is currently represented constitutes an unnecessary "broad brush" approach, he said. "We need to address the specifics — the problem of by-right buildings that disrupt residential neighborhoods. If we impose a moratorium, it'll send shockwaves through the business community. It'll have a very negative impact," according to Davidson.

Although he admits he is "not well-versed" on all the elements of the library issue, Davidson believes residents "deserve as new a facility that will last well into the future.

"The time to make a decision is now. We can't put it off any longer," he added.

He said he needs to study the various components of the problem more carefully before he can come out in support of one scheme or another.

Ward 2 school committee race:

Jones vacates — two candidates compete for seat

Huntington counts on experience to win seat

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Jennifer Huntington is one of two candidates running for the Ward 2 School Committee seat being vacated by Katherine Jones.

Huntington, 44, is the mother of two children who attended Newton schools and is currently taking a year off from her position as English teacher and assistant house master at Brookline High School.

Huntington has been active in the PTA for the past 10 years. She said she divided her time between the elementary, junior and senior high school levels. In addition, Huntington said she served on a number of city-wide education committees, including education, guidance and counseling, and minimum competency.

Huntington, originally from Kent, England, received a master's degree in education from Boston University in 1975. She has lived in Newton for the past 12 years.

Huntington said she is running for the seat because she knows the community.

"I've been here for 12 years," Huntington said. "I am familiar with Newton schools as a parent and I know the community. Also, I am up on the current educational thinking — I've kept up to date with educational reports and I think I will make a strong candidate based on my experience as a teacher, parent and Newton resident."

Jennifer Huntington

Huntington said her experience is a major reason people should vote for her.

"Because of my 10 years at Brookline High School as both a teacher and administrator, I understand the educational process. I will be able to relate to the voters on many levels — as a parent, taxpayer and educator. I will use all three phases of my experience to make decisions, and I will be accessible to the community."

Hartford runs again for board

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Kenneth Hartford is one of two candidates running for the Ward 2 School Committee seat being vacated by Katherine Jones.

Hartford, 53, is the father of three children who have attended Newton schools. Hartford has worked at Raytheon for the past 34 years.

Hartford was on the Superintendent Search Committee that selected present Superintendent John Strand three years ago as well as two Principal Search Committees. Hartford twice ran against Jones, once in 1976 and once in 1981, losing both times.

Hartford said he is running for the position because he "has followed the schools since 1975."

"I went to almost every School Committee meeting for about six years until 1981," he said.

Kenneth Hartford

He said he would make a good committee member because he "cares about the city and cares about the schools."

"I still have two children in the schools and education is very important to me," he said.

Meet the candidates

Each week, The Newton Graphic will highlight candidates running for alderman and school committee seats. The series focusses on issues facing Newton and topics that are likely to be discussed during the race, which culminates on election day, Nov. 5. The series started in The Graphic's Aug. 7 edition with Ward 1 candidates.

This week's paper focuses on Ward 2 candidates, and next week's will be concerned with those running for Ward 3 openings. Out of fairness to all parties involved, this newspaper will continue to interview candidates numerically, ward by ward.

Diane Ellen (Etscovitz) and Scott Lloyd Dolin

Diane Ellen Etscovitz marries Scott Lloyd Dolin

Diane Ellen Etscovitz, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Eli Etscovitz of Newton Centre, and Dr. Scott Lloyd Dolin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Saul Dolin of West Hartford, Conn., were recently married at Congregation Mishkan Tefila in Chestnut Hill. The ceremony was performed by Rabbi Richard Yellin and Cantor Gregor Shelkan.

The bride was attended by her cousin Nancy Ann Etscovitz as maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Cheryl Dolin, sister of the groom, Gail Plesset, Susan Hecht and Elizabeth Hoffman, cousins of the bride.

The best man was David Carlow, and ushers were Steven Feinstein, Howard Sakowitz, Paul Dolinsky, cousin of the groom, and Larry Etscovitz, brother of the bride.

The bride is a recent recipient of a master's degree in piano performance from Boston University's School for the Arts.

The groom recently completed a fellowship in ocular plastic surgery with Dr. Sanford Hecht in Waltham. He is currently practicing ophthalmology with Dr. John Franklin and Dr. Paul Singer in West Hartford, Conn.

Elizabeth Morse and Dave Finch wed on July 7

Elizabeth Nancy Morse, daughter of Channing and Nancy Morse of 10 Cromesett Road, became the bride of David Lawrence Finch, son of Harold and Ruth Finch of Newton, at Seamen's Bethel in New Bedford on the afternoon of Sunday, July 7. The Rev. Stephen Ankudowich of Wareham officiated at the single ring ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a simple A-line full-length gown of ivory-colored satin with a fingertip veil. Her flowers were white roses and blue delphiniums.

Serving as his brother's best man was Henry Finch. Ushers were Warren Morse, brother of the bride, Chet Conboy, and Andy Finch, brother of the bridegroom.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Morse selected a dusty rose suit with a raspberry blouse. Her flowers were white roses. The mother of the groom wore a pale blue dress and her flowers were also white roses.

The bride obtained her master of science degree in engineering from Stanford University. Her husband attended Rochester Institute of Technology and Northeastern University, and is president of Finch Engraving Company.

A new arrival for Newton

Laureen (Mahoney) and Kevin Byrne of Waltham announce the birth of their first child, a son, Kevin Howard, on April 13, 1985 at Waltham Hospital. Grandparents of the new arrival are Angie and Howard Mahoney of Watertown and Marie Cleary and the late William E. Byrne of Newton. Great grandmothers are Leunora Diodato of Watertown and Theresa Mahoney of Waltham.

B'nai B'rith annual barbeque set

WALTHAM — MayFlower Lodge, B'nai B'rith, and Mayflower Chapter, B'nai B'rith Women, will hold their annual barbeque for residents of the Walter E. Fernald State School, Waltham, on Sunday, Aug. 25, at noon, at the New Activity Center. Irene and Stanley Gaffin are chairmen of this event.

The residents will be treated to hot dogs, hamburgers, watermelons, and drinks. Entertainment will be provided by Iz Doveburd and his guitar. A large committee consisting of Lodge and Chapter members will assist with the preparation and serving of the food.

Cynthia Marie Jones and Howard Stephen Katz

Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Jones of Waltham and Pompano Beach announce the engagement of their daughter, Cynthia Marie, to Howard Stephen Katz, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joel D. Katz of Chestnut Hill.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Waltham High School and Bates College where she was graduated magna cum laude with honors in mathematics. She is completing courses towards a masters degree in Computer Science at Boston University and is currently employed by Intermetrics, Inc., as a systems engineer.

The bridegroom-to-be is a graduate of Brookline High School and Bates College where he received his degree in Political Science. He is currently employed by Chrysler Corporation as a district manager.

A September wedding date has been set.

Girl Scouts win $175,000 challenge grant from Kresge Foundation

WALTHAM — The Kresge Foundation of Troy, Mich. recently awarded a $175,000 challenge grant to Patriot's Trail Girl Scout Council. This was one of the largest Kresge Foundation grants ever given to a Girl Scout Council.

The grant brings the council's $2.5 million Capital Campaign total to more than $2,122,000. In order to meet the challenge grant requirements, the Council must raise the additional $380,000 by Jan. 31.

The $2.5 million Capital Campaign was launched in March 1984 to raise funds to renovate and restore council-operated facilities in Massachusetts and New Hampshire. The $175,000 Kresge grant has been awarded for extensive renovations to the pools and pool house at Cedar Hill Outdoor Center in Waltham. Once completed, more than 7,000 individuals — an increase of 5,000 — will be able to enjoy the renovated pools.

Capital Campaign Co-chair John Bacon, president of Boston Gas, remarked that the Kresge grant will have a strong impact on campaign volunteers and supporters. "The Kresge Foundation recognizes that our campaign will reach it's goal," Bacon stated. "Their support is a reflection of the work and dedication of campaign volunteers at every level."

Patriot's Trail Girl Scout Council is the largest council in New England serving more than 37,000 girls and adult volunteers in the greater Boston area. The Capital Campaign is the first major fund-raiser of its kind in the 70-year history of girl scouting in Massachusetts and has received broad-based support from corporations, foundations, small businesses, Girl Scout families and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Keith Craig, of Nassau, N.Y., announce the marriage of their daughter, Sharon Lee, of West Yarmouth to Roy Gordon Cornelius, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cornelius of Brockton.

The couple were married by Rev. Thurman Beavers at 11 a.m. on May 4 at the United Grace Methodist Church. The bride was given away by her father, Keith Craig.

Matron of honor was the bride's cousin, Charlene Yaeger, of Saratoga Springs, N.Y., and bridesmaids were Kelley Yaeger, cousin of the bride; Heather Cornelius, of Brockton, daughter of the groom; Linda Mohan, cousin of the bride, of Colorado Springs, Colo.; and Wendy Craig, sister-in-law of the bride, of Canal Fulton, Ohio.

The best man was Douglas Cornelius, son of the groom; ushers were Gary Craig, brother of the bride, of Canal Fulton; Albert Cornelius, brother of the groom; Todd Yaeger, cousin of the bride; and Scott Fitzgerald, of Quincy.

The bride carried a bouquet of white daisies, white carnations, and stenphanosis. The wedding gown, which was made by the bride, was a Priscilla of Boston pattern of white satin and cut out gallon lace, off the shoulders.

The bride earned her bachelor of science degree from Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y., and her master of science degree from Simmons College. She is currently employed as a food service director in the Dennis-Yarmouth schools.

The bridegroom graduated from Worcester Polytechnic Institute with a bachelor of science degree and earned a masters in business administration from Boston University. He currently works for the Newton Public Schools.

The couple now reside in Brockton.

"CUSTOMERIZED KITCHENS"
Over the past few years the term "Custom Kitchen" has taken on a new meaning. Through the development of space-age adhesives, companies like Norwood's LOWE CONTRACTING CORP. have developed systems to employ cabinet refacing in many remodeling jobs that at one time lent themselves only to total replacement of the kitchen cabinetry. In many instances LOWE CONTRACTING can alter or add cabinets and reface those that need no changes thereby avoiding the complete replacement formerly needed. Thus "CUSTOMERIZED KITCHENS" where the kitchen plan is tailored to the needs of the customer, by installing FULL CUSTOM CABINETRY, replacing with STOCK or a "CUSTOMERIZED" combination as described.
Drop by our showroom at the corner of Dean and Washington St., Norwood or call 769-2297 and talk to one of our reps. We'd like to show you how "CUSTOMERIZING" can work for you.

R-value is the guide on insulation

By Carol Roberts
Copley News Service

Insulation is easy to install and can help reduce cooling and heating costs.

Wood, brick, plaster, masonry and glass — all materials commonly used to build houses — are not particularly effective insulators. That's why energy-conscious home owners insulate their homes with blankets, batts and foam made from materials that resist the conduction of heat.

The ability of a material to resist heat conduction is known as its R-value. The higher the R-value, the more efficient its heat-resisting qualities, therefore, the better it can insulate.

So when shopping for insulation, shop for R-value, not for inches, according to the U.S. Federal Trade Commission. One brand of insulation might be slightly thicker than another, but if the two are marked with the same R-value, they resist heat flow equally well.

Using R-value to choose the most effective insulation is simple if you follow these steps:

— Find out what R-value you need. This varies according to the part of the house you're insulating and the climate you live in. You can get help in determining necessary R-values from a local utility or energy office.

— Find out how much insulation you already have, then determine what additional insulation you need to install. R-values are additive: Two R-19s make R-38, R-19 and R-11 make R-30.

— Decide what kind of insulation to install. Insulation is sold in blankets (or rolls), batts (short-length blankets), loose fill, foam, plastic and foil. One product may be better suited than another for your needs.

— Measure the area you're going to insulate. Coverage charts on insulation packages will tell you how much insulation you'll need to get the R-value you want over a certain area.

Bear in mind that you don't have to do all your insulating at once to reap energy savings. You can take it a ceiling, wall or floor at a time. Since heat rises, it stands to reason that it will leak out of the top of your house first. And because the summer sun beats down from overhead, heat also enters your house from the top, at exactly the time of year you don't want it. Therefore, the place to start insulating your home is the roof above your highest heated room, or the floor of your unfinished attic. From there, work your way down to exterior walls and finally to floors.

Book list for the do-it-yourselfer

The best way to get things done right is to do it yourself, but only if you know what you're doing. There is plenty of help available in books, and judging by their number, there has to be one for the job you are planning.

Reader's Digest

A consistently popular volume is the Reader's Digest "Complete Do-it-yourself Manual." For $20, this book gives you illustrated, easy-to-read and follow instructions for using tools, making interior and exterior repairs, maintaining plumbing, heating and cooling units, wiring, woodworking and ceramics. In fact, this manual tells you how to take care of most problems that might occur.

Two other books that might come in handy from the Reader's Digest are the "Home Improvements Manual," for $24, and a "Fix-It Yourself" book for $21.50. The home improvements book is a guide to all that's involved in renovating your home.

Time-Life

Also from Time-Life is "How Things Work in Your Home (And What to Do When They Don't)" This informative book addresses itself mainly to the things in your house that are powered by electricity and to the plumbing. For $25, it tells you how a garbage disposer grinds up food, how to fix your food processor and figuring out why the washing machine makes strange sounds. The instructions on repair are accompanied by very well labeled, clear diagrams.

Simon & Schuster

Other books that might prove useful include the "Complete Guide to Home Repair and Maintenance" from Simon & Schuster. This costs $24.95.

There also are many books available on overall repair and maintenance for considerably less than $20, though some many not be quite as detailed or be as clear as the above.

Arco, Better Homes

The Homeowner's Complete Manual of Repair and Improvements (Arco, $14.95). This deals with plumbing, heating, furniture repair and the like. Better Homes and Gardens also has a "Do It Yourself Home Repairs" for $14.95.

BH&G also helps the builder or homeowner plan any renovations before starting with its inexpensive — $9.95 each — series of books that deal with on add-ons, baths, the yard and the family center. This would be a good series to read before you start work.

Another very useful set of books is the Time-Life series. Each volume addresses itself to a different topic, "Working with Wood," "Add-Ons," "The Old House." The books are reasonably priced at $11.95 and are well illustrated too.

Sunset Books

Inexpensive volumes are available from Sunset Books. These range from $3.95 to $5.95 apiece and tackle pools, kitchens, storage, decks.

A $5.96 book "Home Repairs," that deals with wiring and other topics can be had from Ortho books.

After you've gotten the wiring and plumbing in your house in shape, you may then want to turn your attention to the walls and floor and such. "Designer's Guide to Surfaces and Finishes," by Penny Radford (Watson-Guptill, $29.95) will tell you all you want to know about different finishes and how to achieve them — stippling, a wood-grain look, moldings and trim are all covered in this volume.

Laura Ashley

Then comes the extra touches, wallpaper, fabric coverings and such. For great tips, look to "The Laura Ashley Book of Home Decorating," by Elizabeth Dickson, Margaret Colvin, Dorothea Hall and Peter Collenette. Apart from detailing Ashley line of materials, this book gives you tips on quilting, sewing and refinishing furniture. This is from Harmony Books and runs $24.95.

Choosing financial tools

Part II

(In my last column, a rumpled, pin-striped attorney made what seemed like a very simple request of me. The financial junk mail he'd collected over the last six months gave him a nagging feeling that he was missing out on all kinds of marvelous opportunities. He wanted me to look through the contents of the suitcase strewn across my office floor, and tell him whether — or what — he was missing.)

"It's a little difficult to do that," I said, "without knowing something about you."

"Nonsense," he said, waving his hand and rising. "My personal affairs are none of your concern. Your business is with all that stuff on the floor. Just tell me how long it'll take you to do the job."

"Well," I said, looking at my watch. "Do you have some time right now?"

"You mean you can do it right now?" he asked with doubt in his voice. "Are you a speedreader or something?"

In answer I knelt on the floor and began going through the booklets, pamphlets, solicitations, invitations, analyses, and newsletters that had spilled under my desk and buried my schnauzer. By the time the pile had diminished enough to reveal her wet nose, I had organized my clients junk mail into three piles.

"Here it is," I said, pointing at the smallest pile. "This stuff doesn't warrant any more of your attention. It consists of products and services that make unwarranted claims, are costly or unnecessary, or provide a service that's good — but not as good as something in another pile."

I pointed to the mid-sized pile. "This stuff needs more evaluation before I can tell you how good it is."

Then, turning to the largest pile, I gently shoved my schnauzer from his perch at the summit. "This is the stuff you should be interested in," I said. "Every item here offers something valuable, whether it be a money market fund with a high return, or the opportunity to shelter your income by investing in government subsidized housing, or advice on the benefits of making gifts to your children."

"Hold on a minute," said my client. "Those aren't marvelous opportunities at all. I've never liked money market funds — I think they're a ripoff. I don't need to shelter any income. And I don't have any kids."

"That's not my problem," I answered. "You asked me to see which of those documents offered marvelous opportunities — and I've done that. What more do you want?"

"I want to know whether they're marvelous opportunities for me," he said, jabbing himself in the chest. "Do you think I'm paying you out of my own pocket to do a survey for the public?"

"Of course not," I said, rising from the floor and brushing the doghair from my knees. "But you did say that your personal affairs were not my concern. And that leads me to believe you're going about this backwards."

He looked at me in disbelief. "But I'm a lawyer," he said. "I have a sharp legal mind."

"Then answer me this," I said. "Assume you wanted to write a book, but couldn't decide on a subject. Would you go through the dictionary looking for words that might be helpful?"

"Don't be ridiculous," he replied. "Words are only tools."

"Precisely," I said. "But you expect me to tell you which financial tools would be helpful to you – without giving me any information about the job you want them to do."

He was silent for a moment, and then withdrew his appointment book from his jacket pocket. "Next Wedneday at ten?" he asked.

I nodded, and he rose to leave. "By the way," he said, "do you have a large garbage bag I could use?"

Boston Academy Donizetti concert August 28

NEWTON — For the second concert of Boston Academy's Fifth Summer Festival of Music, Artistic Director Richard Conrad has chosen an unusual selection from the works of the great 19th century "bel canto" composer, Gaetano Donizetti.

The concert will be held on Wednesday evening, Aug. 28 at 7:30 p.m. in the air-conditioned Ellsworth Hall on the campus of Pine Manor College in Chestnut Hill.

Featured will be the first public performance of three songs for voice and piano (Il Sospiro del Gondoliere, Perche due Cori, Se tu non vedi) and Le Depart pour la chasse for Baritone, French Horn and Piano.

Boston Academy of Music obtained copies of the manuscripts of these unpublished works from the Naples Conservatory Library. They will be performed by Norma Giusti, soprano; Richard Conrad, tenor; David Murray, baritone; Richard Greenfield, french hornist; and pianists Beverly Gibbons and William Merrill.

Gibbons and Merrill will give the Boston premiere of three recently published works for piano four hands, the Sinfonia in F, the Sonata in A, and the Sonata for "Four Paws." The collection of songs and duets, Soirees d'automne a L'Infrascata, the scena, Il Pescatore, the Sonata for Flute in C (Peggy Friedland, soloist), and Amor Funesto for Baritone, French Horn and Piano complete the program.

Tickets, at $10 and $8, are available at Out of Town (492-1900), Countercharge (497-1118), or Bostix (723-5181). Student and senior tickets are at the door only on the evening of the performance for $5. For further information call 241-8282.

Police, fire briefs

Employee vandalizes Dynamic building

WEST NEWTON — A disgruntled employee at Dynamic Research Corporation Test Equipment on Border Street smashed one of the machines there with a sledge hammer last week during the lunch hour, police said. He also vented his anger on a sprinkler head and fire box, according to police. Police said the company had not yet decided whether to press charges against the individual, who was not identified.

If at first you don't succeed ...

CHESTNUT HILL — A man who tried to steal a car last Monday at the Chestnut Hill Mall, but failed when it wouldn't start, may have succeeded several minutes later with another car elsewhere at the mall.

A Framingham woman at 5:40 p.m. discovered a five-foot, five-inch man in her 1978 Pontiac, which was parked behind Bloomingdale's in the lower mall, police said.

"What are you doing?" she reportedly asked.

"I was going to steal your car but it wouldn't start," the man, who was not wearing a shirt, answered as he left the car.

Five minutes later a Sharon man reported his 1981 Chevrolet Camaro stolen from the lower mall, police said.

City equipment found at Albemarle Field

NEWTONVILLE — A door to a storage room at the Horace Mann School was found open and some city-owned equipment was piled at the edge of the playground at Albemarle Field early Saturday morning, according to police.

Police said they received a call from a citizen who noticed the equipment, which included two Unisphere microphones, a Shure speaker, a Shure amplifier, and two Ariens snow blowers, piled near the playground.

A complete list of items which may be missing was not available yesterday.

Arson or vandalism suspected in fires

AUBURNDALE — Arson or vandalism is suspected as the cause of five small fires found burning Saturday night on the second and attic floors of a vacant barn on a former city Public Works yard at 91 Auburndale Ave., according to Fire Department officials.

Assistant Fire Chief William Dwyer said, "We've had similar fires in the building previously during the last several years since it's been closed. They've all been due to vandalism or arson by unknown persons."

Ladder No. 1 and Engines 2 and 5 were called to the scene at 9:20 p.m. to battle the blaze. Dwyer said the fires extinguished quickly and the building remains intact.

Wallet with $70 snatched at McDonalds

UPPER FALLS — A Chestnut Hill man reported that his wallet was stolen last Friday around 9 a.m. while he was in the McDonalds restaurant on Needham Street, according to police.

The wallet was reported to contain $70 in cash, a BayBanks cash card and a driver's license.

Garage door opener discovered missing

NEWTONVILLE — A West Newton woman told police that an automatic garage door opener and a letter containing her return address were stolen last Friday around 6:20 p.m. from the front seat of her Buick while it was parked in the Purity Supreme supermarket lot on Washington Street.

Police said the woman went home and had her garage door opener disconnected until a new electronic signal code and opener could be installed.

Insect 'zapper' missing from backyard

NEWTON CENTRE — An electronic backyard "bug zapper" worth $200 was reported stolen from a home on Adeline Road Saturday at 12:30 p.m., according to police.

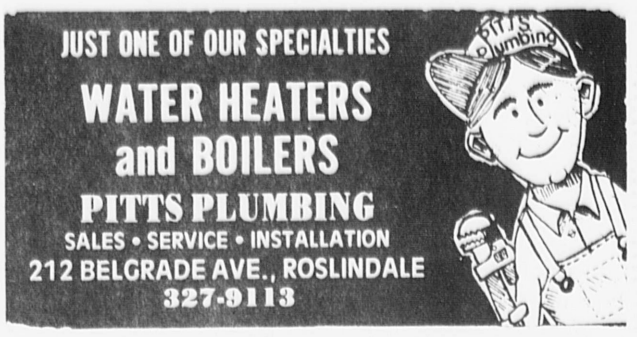

Stairway fire causes $500 in damages

NEWTON — Firefighters spent half an hour putting out a fire last week on a stairway in a Thornton Street home, Lt. William H. Adams said. The cause of the fire on the second-floor stairway at the three-story home on 36 Thornton St. is still unknown, he said.

The fire broke out at midnight at the home of Bruce and Sally Corley, Adams said. Three fire engines and a ladder company kept it contained in the stairway of the wood-frame building. Chief Edward B. Reilly Jr. estimated the damage at $500.

House window smashed; jewelry stolen

NEWTON CENTRE — Jewelry was reported stolen from a house on Dudley Road at 6:30 p.m. Sunday. The residents of the house told police that someone threw a rock through a window on the south side of the house Saturday night around 11:30 p.m. The following day the residents were away between 3 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. They returned to find another broken window in the basement of their house. The master bedroom had been ransacked.

Diamond jewelry missing

CHESTNUT HILL — Six diamond rings worth $53,000 were reported stolen from a display case at Shreve Crump & Lowe jewelers Wednesday and replaced with cheap imitations, police said.

The diamond solitaire rings, set in 18 karat gold bands, were discovered missing from a locked case when the branch manager checked the simulated jewels on a diamond authenticating machine, police said.

Newton police plan to question a suspect in the case, Capt. Walter Drew of the detective division said yesterday.

Leonard Mintz, branch manager at the Lower Mall, told police Wednesday the theft may have occurred anytime in the last few days, Drew said. Mintz checked the fake diamonds, which appeared suspicious, Wednesday on a diamond authenticating machine at Stowell's Jewelers and called police at 4:55 p.m. The Shreve Crump & Lowe authenticating machine had been sabotaged, police said.

The stolen diamond rings ranged in value from $7,000 to $12,000. Each had a single diamond, from 1.08 carat to 2.01 carat, set in four prongs of white gold on an 18 karat band of yellow gold.

Mintz would not comment on the theft, nor would company president Henry Whipling comment.

Senior menus

NEWTON — West Suburban Elder Services, Inc. in cooperation with the Council on Aging, administers nutrition sites at the Newton Senior Center (552-7178), the Newton Corner Senior Drop-In Center (969-8030), the Nonantum Multi-Service Center (965-6390) and a kosher nutrition site at Congregation Beth El-Atereth Israel (244-7233) for persons 60 and older. Meals are served around noontime reservations for lunch should be made at least 24 hours in advance by calling the desired location. Also, a light Thursday evening supper is provided at the Newton Senior Center. There is no charge for meals but a 75-cent donation is requested. Transportation to the nutrition sites is provided by Centre Transportation, Inc. Reservations for transportation are required and can be made by calling 969-1418. All menus are subject to change. This week's menu is as follows:

Wednesday, Aug. 28: Barbeque pork rib patty, potato salad and cole slaw, cornbread.

Msgr. Francis D. Scully, 87

Was curate at Sacred Heart

WEST NEWTON — A funeral mass was celebrated Tuesday at 10 a.m. for Msgr. Francis D. Scully, 87, in St. Bernard's Church, Washington Street, West Newton. Burial was to be at Holy Cross Cemetery, Malden.

The retired pastor of St. Andrew's parish, North Billerica and former chaplain of the Middlesex House of Correction, Msgr. Scully died in his home Saturday, after a short illness.

He was ordained in 1925 at Holy Cross Cathedral in Boston by the late Cardinal William O'Connell and was assigned to St. Thomas Aquinas Parish in Jamaica Plain.

In 1932, he became a curate at the Sacred Heart Parish in Newton Centre, where he served as secretary to the future archbishop of New York, Cardinal Francis Spellman.

In 1955, Cardinal Richard Cushing appointed Msgr. Scully as pastor of St. Andrew's parish in North Billerica. He was elevated as monsignor by Pope John XXIII in 1968.

Defeat Our Lady's for 2nd straight National title

Clubbies champs once again

Bob Connerney blasted a grand-slam home run and Jim Proia struck out 10 as the Boys' Club won its second straight National League Championship with a 10-4 come-from-behind victory Friday at Burke Field.

The Boys' Club, which has won the championship three times in the last four years, wrapped up the best-of-five series, 3-1, with a big eight-run rally in the bottom of the sixth inning.

Trailing, 4-2, Connerney's bases-loaded round-tripper to deep left-center field capped a tremendous inning that saw Boys' Club send 12 men to the plate.

Joe King started the inning off, drawing a walk, and Colin Ryan singled before Mitch Nash bounced a hopper back to relief pitcher Greg Larson at the mound.

Chuck Proia and Mark Cadman both walked to follow DeNucci before Connerney stepped up. The 19-year-old right fielder blasted a two-strike pitch out of sight in left-center.

Andy Lyons, who pitched five innings Wednesday night, came back for Our Lady's and pitched well for five innings. Larson relieved Lyons in the sixth, making his third appearance in as many days.

For the Boys' Club, Jim Proia was refreshed. The 18-year-old righthander pitched out of two crucial jams and was there in the end when it really counted.

In the second inning, Our Lady's bruised the Newton North product for two runs on a Larson home run (he went 3-for-3, missing only a single in a quest for the cycle) to deep center field and a Paul Kearney RBI-single, and threatened for more with the bases loaded and one out.

Proia forced a runner at the plate for out number two, then struck out the next batter to end the inning.

Proia faced another one-out, bases-loaded situation in the sixth inning before fanning two in a row to end the threat.

The teams swapped runs in the second inning. After two runs had crossed for Our Lady's, Boys' Club capitalized on run-scoring singles by Chuck Proia and Mark Cadman to tie the game.

The summary:

BOYS' CLUB(10)-Connerney 3-1, J. Proia 4-0, Pachus 2-1, King 2-1, Ryan 4-2, Nash 3-0, DeNucci 3-1, C. Proia 1-1, Lookner 0-0, Cadman 2-1, Kalouzian 0-0. Tot. 25-8.

OUR LADY'S(4)-Calcagni 4-1, Coppola 4-2, Goolst 4-1, Larson 3-3, Bercury 4-1, Bilodeau 4-1, Trammontozzi 4-2, McAvinn 4-1, Kearney 3-2, A. Lyons 0-0. Tot. 34-14.

International League playoffs

Troubadour, Boys' Club gain rematch

NEWTON — Thirteen-year-old Derek Fergus pitched six-plus innings of two-hit ball and benefitted from some great defense in the seventh as Troubadour hung on to defeat the Oak Hill Cubs, 5-4, at Newton South on Tuesday.

The victory gives Troubadour a two-game sweep of the series and a berth in the International League finals against the Boys' Club, which ousted C&K Components, 13-1.

In addition to his pitching performance, which raised his record to 7-0, Fergus contributed a two-run double to the Troubadour offense, which gave his club a seemingly-safe 5-2 lead going into the bottom of the seventh.

As it turned out, the three-run margin was anything but safe.

When Fergus walked the bases loaded (working in a strikeout among the three free passes), the Troubadour coaching staff decided he'd had enough and brought on Peter Hinterreger.

Hinterreger was able to find the plate, but when the ball got there, Harley Malter's bat was waiting. The result was a smash to right that went for two bases. Two runs came home, but when the Cubs tried to tie the game by waving Eric Santucci all the way around from first, the Troubadour defense pounced.

Right fielder Sam Gottlieb quickly fielded the ball and hit the relay man, Mark Loughlin. Loughlin's throw was a bit low, but catcher Chris Scalia made a nice scoop at the plate and just managed to tag out Santucci in a close play.

Despite the boost, Troubadour still wasn't out of the woods, as Mike Xidea promptly singled to left. This time, the Cubs saw Craig Chudnow throw a strike to the plate and held Malter at third.

Adam Kasper then grounded a ball up the middle that looked like it might tie the game, but shortstop P.J. O'Toole came gliding over to pick it up and stepped on second to finally end the game.

Troubadour had opened up a three-run bulge in the top half of the frame when O'Toole and Craig McGary singled, moved up on Scalia's sacrifice, and scored when Fergus hit the chalk on the left-field line for a two-bagger.

This was the 11th one-run game that Murphy Division champion Troubadour has been involved in this year, with 10 ending in victory.

Boys' Club gains finals

The Boys' Club may have left 10 runners on base through the first six innings, but to be truthful, they didn't really need the runs in a 13-1 rout of C&K Components at Ferguson Field. The victory gives the Clubbies a two-game sweep of the series.

The contest wasn't quite as lopsided as the score sounds, because the winners scored eight times in the seventh inning, building on a 5-0 lead.

As it turned out, the five runs would have been more than enough with righthander Paul Leone on the mound, as he shut down C&K on six hits, all singles. He fanned only three, but didn't walk a man.

The Boys' Club wasted no time in staking Leone to a lead, scoring twice in the first off C&K starter and loser Tom McMillen.

The margin reached 3-0 in the second on a hit-batter, a single by Leone, and a double by DeNucci.

In the seventh, the Boys' Club made sure the series was firmly in hand by exploding for eight runs. DeNucci's two-run double was the big blow, while Maiocca, Maxcey and Fontano added RBI singles.

With a 13-0 lead, Leone could be excused for letting C&K score in the bottom half, but even that wasn't his fault as an error opened the door. Two groundouts followed the miscue before Ron Pang punched a single to get C&K on the board.

DeNucci finished with four hits and three RBIs, while Haggie and Fontano each drove in a pair of runs. Maiocca and Jay Cappello stroked three hits each.

Cappello also filled in behind the plate for the injured Maxcey and did an excellent job.

The finals will begin on Monday, most likely at Burke Field under the lights at 8 p.m. The best-of-three series will be a rematch of last year's final, when On the Road (now Troubadour) defeated the Boys' Club.

The summaries:

TROUBADOUR(5)-Loughlin 4-1, O'Toole 2-1, McGary 3-2, Scalia 4-1, Fergus 4-1, Berlandi 0-0, Hinterreger 3-0, Pepe 1-0, Gottlieb 2-0, LeCamera 1-0, Chudnow 2-1. Tot. 26-7.

Hehir pegs East to LLB title

P.J. Timmons' leadoff double to center field in the first inning was the only safety the Newton East nine hit out of the infield all game. So when Newton East went on to win the District 17-11 Post Season Tournament with a 6-3 victory over Millis Thursday at Lyons Field, it took some good fortune.

Newton took advantage of every opportunity that rolled its way, scoring two runs in the first inning and four in the third to wrap up the championship.

Meanwhile, Newton East hurler Brandon Hehir was doing his thing. The 12-year-old righthander struck out 11 in going the distance for the clincher.

Timmons doubled to open the game, then slid safetly into third base on a Hehir fielder's choice. Doug Micciantuono then lofted a high fly to center, scoring Timmons and advancing Hehir to second.

Wessel wins letter at Bentley

WALTHAM — Paul Wessel of West Newton has been awarded a varsity letter for his participation in track on the 1984-85 Bentley College track team, Coach Barry Harwick announced.

Bentley's schedule during the indoor and outdoor seasons consisted primarily of major invitationals, such as Dartmouth and Boston College Relays, in which no score is kept. Championships meets that Bentley competed in included the Easterns and the New Englands.

A sohomore lettering for the second time, Wessel competed in the 400 meters for the Falcons. During the indoor season, his top time was 54.27 seconds, set at the Boston University Invitational.

Hold Pop Warner tryouts evenings

The Newton Tigers Pop Warner football program is continuing its tryouts Monday through Friday from now until Labor Day at Albemarle Field.

Tryouts for all teams, A-D, begin every evening at 6 o'clock. Boys aged 8-14 are eligible.

Cheerleaders may also sign up at this time.

Troubadour leads

You don't find many pitching duels in softball, but Troubadour's Charlie Boudreau was locked in a classic with Hescal's Harris Goodman and Tim Keohane.

Boudreau pitched from behind as Troubadour wiped out a one-run deficit to take game one, 3-1, Thursday in the final round of the Newton Men's Softball B League playoffs played at Hawthorn Field.

Hescal grabbed the lead on a two-out double by Jim Reid in the first inning. In the fifth, Brian Greenwood broke the Goodman's no-hitter to tie the contest. Greenwood came on to score with the eventual game-winner as Andy Moore roped a line drive to the outfield that was dropped.

Newton swimmers get by Walpole

WALPOLE — The Newton Recreation Swim Team jumped to an early lead and held on, posting its 11th win, 195-188 over Walpole, to capture the Suburban Swim League Trophy recently.

Newton won both the girls' and boys' graduated medley races to scoot out to a lead and maintained it most of the way. Walpole tied the meet after a one-two showing in the backstroke, but Newton won five of the last nine relays to edge the hosts.

The summary:

Newton's Daley captains NU crew

If one word was needed to describe Colleen Daley's four-year rowing career at Northeastern University, it would have to be consistent.

The Newton native rowed in the seven seat for four years until the last race of this season.

"Colleen has always been good, she's always been very strong, and she's always been consistent," said Head Coach Beth Emery, a former NU oarswoman.

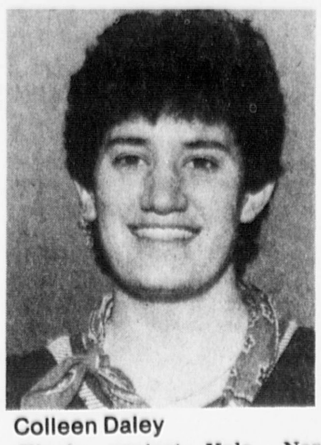

Daley, the team captain, is average in size for rowing but her strength enables her to move the boat quickly. With Daley's contribution, the varsity eight cruised to a 5-1 record after a disappointing 1-5 showing last season.

NU was undefeated until the final race of the season when Radcliffe & Brown handed the crew its first loss. Prior to the Radcliffe & Brown race, Northeastern dropped Boston University and MIT to capture the Smith Cup.

The oarswomen edged BU by a seat and left MIT floundering in the wake as the Huskies captured their first-ever Smith Cup.

"It was not our best race, but since the fall season that is what they wanted to win. It's that type of NU-BU rivalry. It felt really good to win," said Emery, who rowed in her first Smith Cup as a collegian at NU.

In the post-season, disappointed followed the Huskies to the Eastern Sprints and the Collegiate Nationals. At the Sprints, held at Lake Waragmaug in Connecticut, NU competed in the Petite

Colleen Daley

At the Collegiate Nationals in Virginia, the Huskies competed in the Varsity-8 for the first time but injuries prevented the team from anything better than a 10th place finish.

A 1981 Newton South High graduate, Daley earned three varsity letters in soccer, two letters in indoor track, and two letters in outdoor track. She captained the soccer team and the outdoor track team her senior year. Daley was named to the All-League track team in 1981 for the javelin. At Newton South, she was twice awarded the 110% Award for soccer and track and was the 1981 MVP for outdoor track.

A biology majar, Daley will graduate in 1986.

5 South players lacrosse all-stars

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

To the surprise of absolutely no one, Eastern Mass. champion Newton South dominated the Division 2 South lacrosse All-Star team, which was recently announced by the circuit's coaches. Five Lions earned spots on the 14-man team.

Next in line was Acton-Boxboro, which lost to South in the Eastern Mass. finals by one goal. The Colonials had three All-Stars named.

Waltham put only one player on the squad, midfielder Pat Kavey.

The five players that South had reflected the talent on the squad that was spread from the net all the way out to attack. The Lions were represented at each position, and had two middies make the squad. What may be even more intimidating to league coaches is the fact that three of the South All-Stars will be back next spring.

Matt Ranen was one of four attackers placed on the team. There were six midfielders named, with Whit Dorf and Dave Kowal representing South.

On defense, Seth Oliver made the mythical unit, and, for the second year in row, Alex Levine was the All-Star goalie.

Acton-Boxboro's All-Star strength was concentrated on offense, with attack Brian Lukacz and middies Tom Bouvier and Steve Colby all on the team.

Though the team wasn't quite as successful as Newton South or A-B, Wayland also put three names on the team. Attack Bill Nixon, middie Chip Hazard and defenseman Josh Blake were cited.

Newton South also had attack Peter Murphy named as an Honorable Mention. The number two goal-scorer on the team with 26, Murphy was the Lions' Comeback Player of the Year.

The area players on the first team:

Matt Ranen: The number two scorer in the league with 24 goals and 26 assists for 50 points, Ranen was called "an outstanding lacrosse player" by his coach, Paul Murphy. Though he doesn't have great size, the 1985 graduate is very quick. He has a nose for the net, as the 24 goals would indicated, but he's unselfish enough to be a very good feeder in front. He and Kowal waged a duel for the scoring title all season, but many times they would get points on the same play when one would feed the other.

Ranen, who also played varsity soccer at South, will be attending Harvard where Murphy thinks he'll have a chance at playing more lacrosse.

Dave Kowal: This big, strong middie finally won out in the season-long duel with Ranen for the scoring championship. He finished with 29 goals and 25 assists for 54 points, just ahead of Ranen. Four points was about as wide as the margin got all season, as the two usually were within one point of each other.

The team's Most Valuable Player was as good a one-on-one player in front as there was in the league. Murphy called him "an exceptional dodger." Once Kowal got loose, the goalie was usually at the mercy of his hard shot.

South's other senior All-Star, Kowal was recruited by Yale to play lacrosse and he's taken them up on the offer.

Whit Dorf: Though the Lions' other All-Star middie posted 31 points on 19 goals and 12 assists, it wasn't his scoring that got him on the team. Dorf contributed to South's championship in a variety of ways. His expertise in faceoffs was an integral part of the effort, as Murphy called him "outstanding" in that phase of the game. Like Kowal, Dorf boasts a hard shot. He came on to play extremely well in the playoffs when it really counted.

Only a junior last spring, Dorf also is a member of the varsity gymnastics squad.

Seth Oliver: Another senior-to-be, Oliver sparked South's superb defensive unit. He always drew the toughest assignment, taking on the opposition's best scorer. More often than not, Oliver won his individual battle while South was winning the war.

Oliver was exceptional at clearing the ball, and was at his best in the big games. The 185-pounder is a three-sport man. He plays football and wrestles in addition to lacrosse.

Alex Levine: Next spring as a senior Levine will have a chance to achieve something rather rare — being named to an All-Star berth for three straight years. It's even more impressive considering that this isn't one of those leagues that names three or four goalies to the All-Star team. There's only one, and for two straight seasons, Levine has been it.

"He's just outstanding," said his coach. "He comes up with the big saves."

Levine knows what to do with the ball once he gets it too. He's an outstanding passer, and more than once this season used his speed to get the ball upfield himself.

There's no question that he'll be one of the top goalies in the state next spring.

Pat Kavey: Though the Hawks had a tough season, Kavey was superb. He has "real good skills," according to Waltham coach Ed Boudreau. "He plays the midfield position real well."

The '85 grad led the club in scoring with 17 goals and 9 assists for 26 points.

Kavey, who also played hockey and football at WHS, is an exceptional student as well as an athlete.

The all-stars:

Attack

Matt Ranen, Newton South; Brian Lukacz, Acton-Boxboro, Bill Nixon, Wayland; Brian Sullivan, Hingham.

Midfield

Defense

Goalie

Alex Levine, Newton South.

Vitti Publinx victor at Commonwealth

Louis Vitti of the Ponkapoag Golf Club survived a tough back nine to hold a two-stroke margin and win the 36-hole State Publinx Golf Tournament held at the Newton Commonwealth Golf Club this weekend.

Vitti, a South Boston resident, shot a 61 on Saturday over the first 18 holes, finishing the day in first place by three strokes, then shot a 64 Sunday to edge second-place finisher Pat Cronin of the President's Golf Club by two strokes, 125-127.

"I played a good front nine but the back nine gave me some trouble," said Vitti, 72, retired from the New England Medical Center. "I triple bogied on the 10th hole Saturday and Sunday I double bogied on the 10th."

A golfer "on and off for 35 years," Vitti won the Senior Championship MDC Open at Ponkapoag in 1974 and has played with on the Quincy Senior Tour for several years.

"I'm not a class-A golfer," he says, "but I'm a good B golfer."

Vitti attributed some of his success at the Publinx to the well groomed Newton Commonwealth course. "It's one of the best conditioned courses I've played all season," he said. "All you have to do is keep the ball in play."

The summary:

Net Scores

Sherman, Battista Catholic All-Stars

Usually, when a group of coaches get together to select an All-Star team, the league champion gets a large share of the recognition. More often than not, the Most Valuable Player and a bunch of All-Stars come from the top team.

When the Catholic Suburban League baseball coaches got together last spring, however, they reflected the balance that the circuit had. Yes, the MVP, Steve Murphy, did come from league champ St. Clement's. But the champs were represented by only one other player, senior catcher Robert Needham.

Almost every other team, including the area clubs, also had a pair of players named. Jeff Sherman and Frank Battista were Newton Catholic's nominees, while Tom Grady and P.J. McNeil made the squad from St. Patrick's.

All four of the local players are underclassmen, and three made the team as pitchers.

Sherman, who will be a senior this year, made it as a first baseman. Grady and McNeil, both in the same class as Sherman, hurled for the Knights, who just missed a tournament berth. Battista's bat and arm helped lead the Lancers to a tourney spot in his sophomore year.

The naming of Murphy as the MVP surprised absolutely no one who has been following the league for the past several seasons. The flamethrowing righthander has clearly been the dominant hurler over that span, racking up impressive strikeout totals just about every time out. Behind his strong arm, St. Clement's captured its second straight title last spring. Murphy was a senior, so at least the other league teams won't have to worry about facing him again next spring.

Hudson Catholic, Mission and Sacred Heart also put two players apiece on the 13-man team. Of those 13, incidentally, only five were seniors, so the league should be a potent one next season. Two of the five graduates were from St. Clement's, which may open the door for some of the other clubs in 1986.

Sacred Heart was the other club with a pair of seniors. Outfielder Matt Hanley and catcher Colin Leonard played well in their final season.

The league's other graduating All-Star belonged to Hudson Catholic. Shortstop Mike Sabourin will be gone, but pitcher Ed Daigneault, a junior last spring, will be back to battle in the Catholic Suburban trenches.

The final slot on the squad went to Ron Natale of St. Columbkille's, the only school to have a single nominee. He was a junior catcher last spring.

The Newton Catholic All-Stars:

Jeff Sherman — An excellent first baseman, Jeff Sherman also pitched when not lunging for those close calls at first.

In fact, his 12 mound appearances were the most on the team. He compiled a 2-3 record against the Catholic League's iron teams.

Frank Battista — It was a rare day when Frank Battista did not excel in sports at Newton Catholic. The basketball star of the fall is now the baseball star of the spring.

With a 4-1 record and 1.90 ERA for Newton Catholic on the mound, Battista was the leading pitcher on the team as a sophomore. He also posted three saves.

Control is the name of the game when Battista goes to work. The junior-to-be walked 12 batters all year, while striking out 44.

He also hit .375, beating out 24 safeties in 64 tries.

The complete list:

MVP-P Steve Murphy, St. Clement's.

Newton Catholic-1B Jeff Sherman, P Frank Battista.

St. Patrick's-P Tom Grady, P P.J. McNeil.

St. Clement's-Murphy, C Robert Needham.

Hudson Catholic-SS Mike Sabourin, P Ed Daigneault.

Sacred Heart-OF Matt Hanley, C Colin Leonard.

Mission-SS Mossy Sheehan, 3B Tom Glynn.

St. Columbkille's-C Ron Natale.

FOXFIELD AT WESTWOOD

Rugged, yet elegant. Solid, but not overbearing, and the best new home in town. This balanced, nine room Colonial is brick faced with granite accents and offers four or five bedrooms with one skylighted, privately entered guest area with bath. A comfortable, spacious, fireplace living room is enhanced by dental moldings and lighted by a floor to ceiling glass bayed end wall. Formal wainscotted dining room with double french pocket doors provide uninterrupted view of familyroom's floor to ceiling stone fireplace. A country kitchen provides breakfast bay and access to roofed screened porch and adjacent sundeck. Set on just shy of its own one acre lot. This property shares common ownership of additional private woodland restricted to the recreational use of its owners.

Three and one half baths with hot tub in Master, four zone forced hot water heating system, two zoned air conditioning system, security and internal vacuum systems complete the interior. Underground lawn sprinkler system for shrubbery and sod lawn complete the exterior. $475,000

Schools changing curriculum

By John Moroney
Staff Writer

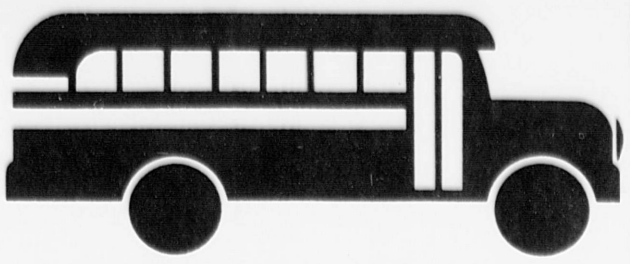

NEWTON — When you have to compete with the likes of Madonna, Twisted Sister and Pee-Wee Herman for attention, designing and enlightening a school curriculum can be a mammoth task.

According to Larry Annett, assistant superintendent of curriculum and instruction for the city's schools, this summer teachers and school administrators have been attempting to design educational programs responsive to the changing needs of the students.

The Summer Curriculum Writing Projects is one program which makes the city's school system unique in its attempt to improve existing curriculum, Annett said. Every year teachers construct or redefine existing courses to meet the particular needs of their students.

"I might get 80 project requests of which I might fund only 40," Annett said. This year's list includes such summer projects as The Bible as Literature, Drug Education K-6, Ninth Grade World History and Tech-Voc Curriculum.

Petition denied

'Late' vote reaffirmed

By Howard Altman, Staff Writer

NEWTON — The Board of Aldermen — after three hours of often raucous debate — last week voted to uphold an earlier decision denying Newton Equity Partners (NEP) a site plan approval.

The original vote, which took place 12:15 a.m., Tuesday, August 13, held that Newton Equity Partners could not construct five condominium units at 175 Auburn St.

Last week's vote — taken during a special session called to take up a reconsideration motion filed by Alderman George Mansfield — came after confusion over whether or not the board acted within a 90-day deadline imposed by city ordinance. NEP attorney Mark White argued because the board's vote took place 15 minutes after the August 12 deadline expired — NEP should be granted the permit.

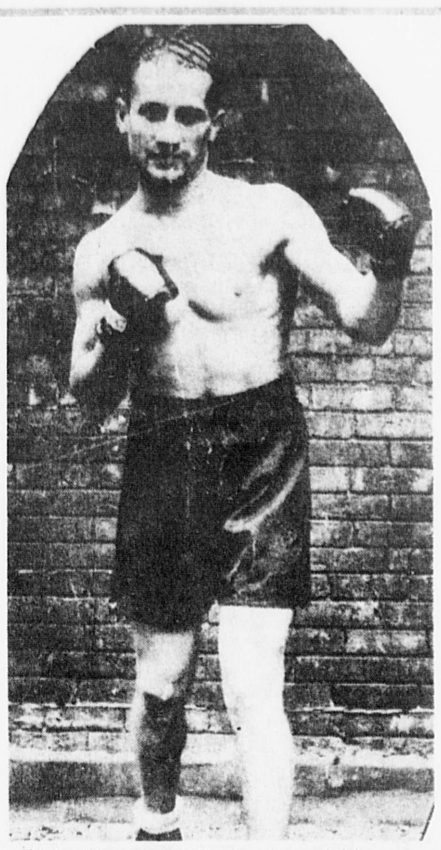

"As far as I'm concerned," White said, "we got the permit because the board didn't act in time. I really don't care what they decided to do last night, the law says they didn't act in time."

> 'I would have hoped the board could have been reasonable and realistic about the situation instead of worrying about right or wrong.'
>
> Mark White

He added he expected the eventual outcome.

"I'm not surprised at all,"

Eddie 'Newsboy' Curley boxed his way out to Newton from the West End.

Boxing as a way out

By Howard Altman, Staff Writer

It is a lonely life of total devotion.

You get up in the wee hours to run deserted roads. Sweat pours down your face as you run — mile after mile — with just one thought on your mind. Winning.

Because succeeding to a boxer, is more than just beating somebody up. It is a way up and a way out.

After the road comes the gym. You lift weights, hit the speedbag and work on your timing and footwork. The smell of musty gymnasiums from one end of the country to the other becomes the perfume of life as you take blow after blow in an effort to toughen up.

You have a manager, family and friends, but in the end, it does not matter. When the bell rings, and the crowd is screaming for blood, everything fades away. Everything, that is, but the man standing in the other corner. It is you against him. No amount of love or encouragement will make him go away. Only your fists.

Because if you are a boxer, you earn your living with your fists, and try to fight your way out of poverty and obscurity.

With sweat and blood, toil and determination, you stand up in the ring and face your opponents.

Ask a boxer. He will tell you the solitary life of training, roadwork and the actual fight itself prepared him, if successful, for a future otherwise unattainable were it not for boxing.

State Rep. Joe DeNucci says boxing opened the door for him.

"I don't think I would be where I am today," says State Representative A. Joseph DeNucci — a top middleweight contender in the 50s, "if it weren't for boxing."

Something 'fishy' about city's water

By Howard Altman, Staff Writer

NEWTON — As many as two million Massachusetts Water Resource Authority (MWRA) customers may be experiencing foul smelling and tasting water caused by an algae bloom at the Wachusetts Reservoir in Southboro, according to MWRA spokesman John Kellogg.

Late last week, Kellogg said the problem, caused by high temperatures allowing the algae to grow very quickly, poses no health threat.

"There was a major algae bloom the beginning of last week that covered the surface of the reservoir," Kellogg said. "We are treating it with copper sulfate. Neither the algae nor the copper sulfate is a health hazard."

Kellogg added he "doubts" the problem extends to all MWRA customers.

Some Newton residents, however, complained the foul smelling water made them sick.

"It's terrible," Frieda Fastov said. "The water smells and tastes awful and I have been sick to my stomach from drinking it. Now I'm using bottled water."

> 'When I take a shower, I smell like a fish when I get out.'
>
> Frieda Fastov

Fastov, who lives at 280 Boylston St., was not alone.

"The water is absolutely horrendous," complained neighbor Alma Goldfine. "When I went down to Florida, I used to brag how good Newton's water was, but that was until three weeks ago

Water complaints lead to repeated treatment

By Howard Altman, Staff Writer

BOSTON — Because of continuing complaints about the smell and taste of water, the Massachusetts Water Resource Authority (MWRA) will re-treat the Wachusetts Reservoir.

Last week, MWRA technicians treated the reservoir with copper sulfate to combat a rapidly growing algae bloom that caused local tap water to "taste like fish," according to MWRA spokesman John Kellogg.

Monday, however, Kellogg said the problem had not been totally rectified.

"We received a substantial number of complaints over the weekend," Kellogg said. "There is still no health danger, but we understand people's irritation. It is no fun to have the water you drink smell bad."

Kellogg added the problem should go away with continued treatment.

"This strain of algae appears to be particularly persistent," he said. "It's just a matter of treating the algae and getting it out of the system. Then the odors will go away. There is no need to switch to another water source."

Police council status is unknown

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — As more and more attention is focused on the finances of the Greater Boston Police Council (GBPC), certain officials are wondering exactly what kind an organization it is and what controls there are on it.

Recent reports about an Internal Revenue Service investigation into the GBPC's financial records for the four years between 1980 and 1984 and the business dealings of its only employee have uncovered more questions about the group than answers.

"It isn't clear at all," according to City Solicitor Dan Funk, who could only decribe the Council as "a collection of municipal police chiefs. There's a kind of vague association, but it's never been solidified on any legal documents or through any concrete arrangement." Funk said the stories about the IRS probe into the GBPC and its former employee, Timothy Coogan, have stimulated "discussion that maybe it's time" for the group to hire a lawyer and to draw up by-laws to guide its operation.

He indicated that such steps, coming over a decade after the council was formed, may be long overdue.

"Sometimes, things happen later than they should because everything's going all right and there's nothing to worry about," Funk said.

In fact, there appears to be no local, state or federal agency overseeing the actvities of the council — a dues-paying collaboration led by Police Chief William F. Quinn and made up of 49 police chiefs from virtually every community within and around the Route 128 belt.

Instead, the GBPC has relied on Coogan's expertise for everything from the wording of service contracts to obtaining radio licenses from the Federal Communications Commission.

The aldermanic Public Safety & Transportation Committee uncovered one of the problems created by this reliance on April 22, when it found that the GBPC's bidding specifications for the Boston Area Police Emergency Radio Network (BAPERN) were written so that only one radio manufacturer, Motorola, could submit a legal bid.

BAPERN, which was one of the council's first significant creations, is the largest, multi-agency, police command and control system in North America.

As a result of the discovery, the Board of Aldermen passed a resolution calling on Quinn and Coogan to rewrite the GBPC's specifications for BAPERN so that at least two eligible bidders can compete for the service.

Iodice building at risk

By Howard Altman, Staff Writer

NEWTON — The attorney representing plaintiffs in the suit against developer Michael Iodice believes there is a "50-50 chance" the Crafts Street building "would come down" if his clients win the case.

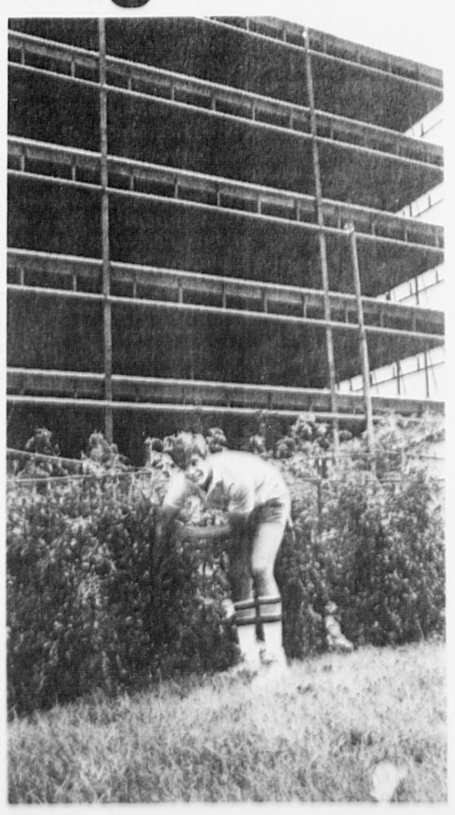

Peter Harrington, representing the Nonantum group Guard Against Reckless Development Endangering Neighborhoods (GARDEN) and Alderman Bruce Carmichael, said Judge Herbert Abrahms warned Iodice last week that he "would be proceeding at his own risk if he continued construction while the matter is in litigation." The warning came after Abrahms took the plaintiff's request for a restraining order against Iodice under advisement.

"Abrahms told Iodice that there have been instances where developers have had to tear down their developments after losing similar suits," Harrington said.

According to Carmichael, a plaintiff in the case, the suit charges that since there are no specific zoning rules allowing an office building to be constructed in a manufacturing zone, the Iodice office development should not be built. He added the suit also names the Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) as a defendant because it gave Iodice a permit allowing him to start construction.

"The ZBA originally upheld our appeal against Iodice," Carmichael said, "but after a strong recommendation from the City Solicitor's office because they were afraid of a lawsuit against the city, they denied us and gave Iodice the permit."

Postal pot scam nets third arrest

By David Weber, Staff Writer

NEWTON — A third Newton mailman was arrested and arraigned on drug charges in Newton District Court after he surrendered peacefully to police at his Westwood home.

Edward T. Rock Jr., 33, pleaded not guilty to two separate charges of illegal possession of marijuana with intent to distribute.

Two other Newton letter carriers, Frederick Hinckley, 36, of Roslindale, and Joseph Faletra, 28, of Somerville, were arraigned Monday in West Roxbury District Court on charges of possession of cocaine and marijuana with intention to distribute. The men allegedly were dealing drugs to other postal employees, according to Newton police.

All three men were suspended without pay Monday by the U.S. Postal Service, according to spokesperson Jean Babcock.

More arrests may take place as a result of the investigation conducted during the last three months by the U.S. Postal Inspection Service and Newton Police.

Rock and Faletra were letter carriers out of the Newtonville post office and Hinckley worked out of the Newton Centre post office. A postal inspector from the Boston office would not be specific about which routes the men delivered mail on.

Faletra and Hinckley were arrested Friday when Boston police and U.S. Postal Service inspectors searched Hinckley's home on Knoll Street in the Roslindale and found approximately two ounces of cocaine and eight pounds of marijuana.

For them, boxing was 'a way out'

On the walls of DeNucci's inner office on Beacon Hill, there are pictures of famous politicians and world-reknown dignitaries. Yet it is the wall with pictures of himself and others in boxing trunks that he likes to point out.

A smile creases DeNucci's face — slightly revised by 85 professional bouts and countless sparing matches — when he talks about the sport. His eyes light up as he shows off perhaps his proudest possesion — Rocky Marciano's "KO" license plate.

DeNucci has a theory about the sport he loves.

"Boxing reflects the social evolution of America," he says. "Look at the history of boxing. Each ethnic group had a time when its fighters dominated the game. As they gained social and financial prominence, their numbers in the fight game dropped. Back in the 20s and 30s, you had your Jewish fighters. Later it was the Italians and Irish. Today you have your black and Hispanic fighters."

Though DeNucci will be the first one to tell you that he didn't have to rely on his fists for his meals as a boy growing up in Nonantum, he will tell you that being in the ring helped him with his career.

"While I was fighting," the chairman of the House Health and Human Services Committee says, "then Speaker of the House John Thompson saw me. I got to know him and he offered me a job as a page in the House. The rest," he says, "is history."

DeNucci — who started boxing at St. Bernard's Parish Hall and the Newton Boys Club — says the fight game toughened and prepared him for politics.

"To be a great fighter," DeNucci says, "you have to be in your own world. You have to learn to deny yourself — to make sacrifices. You have to remember that when you step in the ring, you are all alone. Nobody can help you. The same holds true be it the sports arena or the political arena."

Some boxers, however, were not as fortunate as DeNucci.

Eddie "Newsboy" Curley was less blessed. Growing up in a tough neighborhood in Boston's West End in the early 1920s, Curley had to fight for survival.

A Russian refugee, Curley — born Isaac Morochnick — was a scrappy little Jewish kid growing up with a rough bunch in an even rougher area.

"In order to get by and to earn respect," Curley — who got his American name from his hair — says, "I had to beat up a few of the Italian kids to earn respect in the Jewish community."

Such was his reputation that the neighborhood kids called him "Isaac Pisaac — King of the Jews."

In addition to his boxing prowess, Curley — now an 80-year-old living with his wife in West Palm Beach, Florida — was known as the Herald Traveler's first paperboy. He sold papers on the Boston Common to General Pershing's soldiers on roller skates — in his words, "as a way to stay away from the cops." He became the model for that paper's logo — hence the "Newsboy" monicker.

Because there was little to do in the West End, Curley took up the fight game. When he was 13, he went up to St. Joseph's Hall in Bowdoin Square. They needed someone to fill in for a fight and he figured he'd give it a try.

Borrowing a friend's trunks, Curley stepped into the ring. Before he knew it, he was a full-fledged amateur.

It was not all roses and accolades, Curley recalls. As an amateur, he used to fight four or five bouts a night. If he was lucky, he'd get a watch and a dollar. If he was really lucky, he'd get five.

In 1928, "Newsboy" Curley turned pro. He would later become New England featherweight champ. While he never got rich, he did earn enough to move his nine-member family and many uncles, aunts, cousins, a manager, and his wife Jean, to a triple-decker in Roxbury — out of the inner-city ghetto that was the West End.

Later, the Curley's moved to Newton. His son Steve now says that, back in the West End, there were only two ways out.

"If you wanted out of the neighborhood," the younger Curley says, "you could either be academically talented or athletically talented. My dad was the latter. He didn't have the opportunity to become academically talented because he had to work and support the family, so he developed his sports skills. It was also a way to protect himself from people who used to pick on him for being Jewish."

"Dad made me realize the value of sports," Steve says. "His attitude and reputation helped me in life. As a salesman, I have to be competitive, and I think my dad's drive helped."

That same drive helped Wilbert "Skeeter" McClure make the transition from Toledo, Ohio, to what he terms, "the real world."

McClure, now a Newton psychologist, remembers the only way out of the neighborhood for blacks in the 40s and 50s was through entertainment.

"Back then," McClure recalls with a tinge of bitterness, "if you were black and wanted to go to college to get into medicine or law, there was just no way. Blacks could't even get a job as a clerk in a department store, let alone a doctor or lawyer. The doors were closed to upward mobility."

"A friend of mine asked me to go to the gym with him. I didn't even know what a gym was, but I went. As it turned out, I loved it and my friend never went back."

For McClure, the gym became a second home.

"I loved the odor and the sounds. I loved the movement of the boxers. I fought my first fight in 1953 and never looked back."

As a fighter, McClure traveled the country, and later the world. Seeing what were to him "exotic" places like Boston and New York changed his attitude.

"I went and saw other cities, stayed in hotels and had an expense account. Most people in my neighborhood never left. Once I got out, I never wanted to go back."

Eventually, McClure would go on to fight in the 1960 Olympics. His roommate was a then relatively unknown and shy fighter by the name of Cassius Clay.

As he talks, McClure strolls into his bedroom and produces something few people possess — an Olympic Gold Medal for being the middleweight champ. The medal, he says, is a constant reminder of how boxing changed his life. Instead of working two jobs and living in Toledo, McClure went to college and earned a degree — something he says he doubts he would have done had it not been for boxing.

Like DeNucci and Curley, McClure said the nature of the fight game helped make him what he is today. As a psychologist, McClure says he uses the lessons learned in the ring to help his patients.

"There is a tremendous sense of 'self' you get from being there all alone in the ring. I deal with people who have trouble with their self-confidence. I can help them better than a lot of other psychologists, because I know fear. You have to if you've gotten your brains knocked around with 15,000 people screaming for your blood."

Despite the glowing testimony of these fighters, some are appalled by boxing's inherent violence.

Consultant slams moratorium

NEWTON — One of the principals in the firm hired to complete the Village Study said last week that even a limited moratorium on commercial development would do more harm than good here.

"Generally, they don't work. In many cases, they tend to create more problems than they solve," according to John W. Connery, a partner in Connery Associates, of Winchester.

"There are other ways to have a logical growth management plan for a community," he added.

Connery said the building bans that have gone into effect in other communities, like Framingham, have "a very poor track record" and described such efforts as "very broadbrush, extreme approaches" to the problems caused by encroachment.

The moratorium movement here, currently stymied by a series of legal entanglements, led the Board of Aldermen to create the Zoning Review Committee, a group of resident volunteers charged with closing the city's zoning loopholes.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann said the ZRC's October reporting deadline "ties in beautifully" with the Village Study.

According to Mann, any zoning revisions recommended by the ZRC will be brought "immediately" to Connery's attention so that he can advise aldermen on whether or not the proposed changes should be modified and implemented.

Accused building inspector dismissed

NEWTON — A city building inspector awaiting trial for his alleged involvement in a conspiracy to defraud the federal government has been replaced, according to city officials.

Richard C. Thorne, 60, of Quincy, had been on suspension without pay since April, but was recently let go when a temporary replacement for his slot in the Building Department could not be found, City Solicitor Dan Funk said last week.

"It was a conditional termination by mutual agreement. We agreed to keep him on if we could find someone to temporarily replace him in a reasonable period of time," he added.

Funk said the city and Thorne agreed on the termination because the Building Department was "so hard-pressed for staffing" it could not let the vacant position go unfilled.

Four months ago, Thorne pleaded innocent in U.S. District Court to charges he conspired to defraud the federal government and lied to government agents investigating a phony home repair billing scheme.

The indictment stemmed from Thorne's employment as a construction analyst for the Boston office of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

He retired from HUD in January and was hired as civil service building inspector in March.

Revamp of city clerk's office studied

NEWTON — A consultant study designed to correct staffing and organizational problems in the City Clerk Edward English's office should be completed by the beginning of next month, according to city officials.

The Boston firm of Deloitte, Haskins & Sells was hired to perform the $15,000 analysis, Chief Administrative Officer Richard Kelliher said yesterday.

The company's goal is to review the organizational structure, policies, procedures and operations of the office and make specific recommendations to maximize productivity and efficiency, and assure compliance with all applicable statutes, he added.

City Clerk Ed English

Ultimately, a step-by-step plan for implementing the proposed improvements and an estimated cost of the revamping will be provided.

English said he has "high hopes" for the study, which will help redefine the job descriptions and responsibilities of the department's employees.

An ad hoc committee comprised of Kelliher, English, Alderman Paul Coletti, Data Processing Director Richard Walsh and Chief Budget Officer Stephen Cirillo helped develop the scope of services for the study.

Building Dept. study due in November

NEWTON — A $16,500 consultant study of the city's trouble-ridden Building Department should be completed in November, according to city officials.

The Field Service Division of the Massachusetts Municipal Association (MMA) began work on the project three weeks ago, according to Chief Administrative Officer Richard Kelliher.

Alderman Verne Vance, who was a member of the screening committee that selected the MMA, said he is "very hopeful" the study will provide solutions to the staffing and organizational problems that embarassed the department earlier this year.

Mann to head of Mass Muni Assoc.

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore D. Mann has been nominated as president of the Massachusetts Municipal Association (MMA) — a state-wide professional organization for city and town government officials.

That nomination comes on the heels of last week's announcement that he was selected for the fourth time to head up the Massachusetts Mayor's Association.

Mann said as MMA president he would be able to help the city by being the organization's "spokesman."

"It would be good for Newton," Mann said of his nomination. "I could take a position of leadership in the state."

As an example of his presidency's helping Newton, Mann pointed to the fact the city's insurance premiums increased "from $190,000 to more then $500,000 last year."

Mann said the MMA will lobby for "the opportunity to write our own liability insurance, third party insurance and malpractice insurance to avoid that in the future."

Not only is the organization a force within the state, Mann claims it helps cities and towns nationwide.

Mayor Mann

"There is a linkage here between Mass Municipal and the National League of Cities and Towns. We are all working together to help protect local government," Mann said.

"It's always a good feeling when you are chosen to head something as prestigious as an organization like this," Mann said.

Bribery alleged

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A Chestnut Hill man implicated in a Boston corruption probe allegedly paid a senior Hub assessing official $3,700 in cash for documents that allowed him to avoid that city's zoning variance process, investigators say.

A spokesman in the U.S. Attorney's Office claimed that Arthur E. Simons, 46, of 17 Audubon Drive, made the cash payments, including one as large as $3,000, over a four-year period dating back to 1981.

In return for the bribes, Boston assessor Robert Petrillo allegedly gave Simons fraudulent letters that permitted him to change the legal use of three Hub properties without applying for and receiving the necessary variances from the city, the spokesman said.

A federal grand jury indictment last week unsealed charges Simons with making three separate payments to Petrillo with the most recent exchange occurring sometime this year and amounting to $400 in cash for fake documents regarding property at 189-193 Green St.

The largest alleged bribe is $3,000 in 1981 for phony letters involving a building at 301-303 Shawmut Ave. Simons is also alleged to have paid Petrillo $300 in 1982 for documents concerning 181-187 Green St, according to the indictment.

Mayor Ray Flynn fired Petrillo immediately after the allegations became public.

The 46-year-old Simons is the principal owner of the A&S Realty Company and F-K Construction Company, both based at 271 Newbury St. in the heart of Boston's exclusive shopping strip. His realty firm specializes in apartment and condominium developments.

He was one of nine men, including five other real estate developers, indicted on charges stemming from a federal probe of alleged corruption in Boston's Assessing and Inspectional Services departments.

Simons pleaded innocent to one count of racketeering in U.S. District Court and was released on $25,000 personal surety.

If convicted of the felony charge, he could face a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a fine of up to $250,000.

Simons also would be forced to forfeit his ownership of the three buildings, according to an agent at the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The FBI probe, which took two-and-a-half years, focused on allegations of extortion by Boston city employees and an alleged system of bribes paid them by real estate owners, builders, developers and contractors.

Clean, clear water

While this week's editorial page carries two different views of nuclear weaponry — one from 1945 and one from 1985, we find we are all, in our day-to-day lives, wrestling with a powerful menance right in our own homes.

The water supply in the western suburbs, besides smelling like old fish, appears to be contaminated with organic materials that are wreaking havoc with the inner harmony of the Garden City's citizenry.

The problem has been attributed to an unexpected "algae bloom" in the water supply. While this phrase might well explain the phenomenon, it falls far short of excusing it.

That fishy stuff flowing from your faucet should point out the need for an aggressive attack on the ills of our water supply's infrastructure.

With all the fanfare surrounding the creation of a new area water/sewer authority, one might be lulled into thinking the problem that prompted it has been solved. That rumble in your innards should tell you we still have a long way to go before we can look forward to a constant, dependable supply of clean, clear water.

We urge those in charge of the new water/sewer authority to remember that the situation they have been charged with correcting is still an emergency.

Share BAA bounty

Now that the BAA, with Ray Flynn's concurrence, has decided to make the hallowed Boston marathon an all-out professional event for world class reasons, what gives for the cities and towns? Related question: how big is the pot of gold from sponsors going to be?

All this is relevant. With the historic 26-miler from Hopkinton to the Hub going pro, there ought to be a reasonable cut of the bounty for communities through which foot punishers travel. At the very least, they should be reimbursed for expenses incurred in crowd control.

As has been the case in other big city distance runs, New York and Chicago, notably, television is fostering a golden goose.

Down the road, as it were, it seems probable we're going to see million-dollar professionals ruling the bunion derbies, as in the other major sports. All good wishes to those who make it; but, again, how about taking care of those who provide the locus?

Nine miles of the 26-mile classic are run through the Garden City, with Heartbreak Hill, a stone's throw from City Hall providing the highest drama of the entire event. What would the marathon be without it? How much does it cost to provide it?

That questions deserve answers.

That $250,000 in prize money now evidently assured is only a small part of the potential. Going world class for Boston means expensive top management, running more than a million in Chicago. Mayor Flynn's enthusiastic involvement makes it a good bet to happen.

Fortunately, the municipalities along the route are willing to be cooperative, with Newton's Mayor Ted Mann very much in a leadership role. Local officials recognize the prestige in an event which draws hundreds of thousands in April. State officials recognize the inevitable profits that come from the same source.

The bomb now ...

By Julian Bond

Who could start a nuclear war? More people than you think.

Just as thousands of Americans have access to top-secret classified information, hundreds of Americans can, theoretically, start a war. Only civilians — elected officials and Cabinet members — are supposed to be able to "order" a nuclear attack. But a recently published report says that isn't so.

The United States maintains civilian control of its military, including its ultimate weapons. These weapons are controlled by our leaders through the use of numbered codes: A civilian must give the code to a military officer before a nuclear weapon can be launched.

But because the possibility exists that the civilian leadership could be killed in the first moments of a surprise attack, the government has devised alternate means of firing those weapons, including giving copies of the codes to military officers.

The Defense Monitor, published by the Center for Defense Information, a private research organizaton, reports that a domestic crisis during President Reagan's first term demonstrated the fragility of civilian control over America's arsenal.

When the president was shot on March 30, 1981, The Defense Monitor reports, "FBI officers impounded the secret code card which the president would use to identify himself to military officials if he were to order a nuclear attack.... It was reported that, when President Reagan recovered, he was disturbed to discover that the Joint Chiefs of Staff had an exact duplicate of his code."

The code's purpose, of course, is to make sure that no one, except the president, can order a nuclear attack. But the vice president, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the secretary of defense and the deputy defense secretary each has his own version of the code, which each could use to order an attack.

Here's the way someone besides the president might order the launch of America's nuclear weapons:

In the first few minutes of an enemy attack, the president is supposed to go by helicopter from the White House to the National Emergency Airborne Command or the "Doomsday" airplane, from which the war would be directed. But an attack from a Soviet submarine off the Atlantic coast would only give Reagan only five minutes to leave the White House and make it to the plane. If he doesn't, there's no commander in chief to direct our forces.

Of course, the United States has taken steps to ensure our command structure would survive a first strike. There are alternate ground- and airborne-command centers without access to the codes required for arming, launching and targeting nuclear weapons.

Each of these centers is designed to conduct a war after Washington has been destroyed. It's logical to assume that the officers in charge of these centers have the capability to launch nuclear weapons even before civilian leadership has been killed.

As Fred Ikle, current undersecretary of defense for policy, told a congressional committee in 1977: "The entire system of warning, response and release is too complicated to be checked out against all possible failures...."

The conclusions of the Center for Defense Information are sobering: The number of people who could start a nuclear war is growing, and new systems have increased the probability that control over these weapons will be gradually relinquished to the military during a crisis.

That's too many fingers on the nuclear trigger.

And the bomb then ...

By Edward F. King

I was five years old in 1945. It was very difficult for me to understand much about world events, the progress of the war, victory gardens, air raid rehearsals, or food rationing.

But some things were clear — even to a small child.

My father was far away. And he was fighting against bad men who wanted to take over our country and destroy our way of life. I knew what a swastika was. And I recognized that the rising sun was the symbol of Imperial Japan.

The war ended just before I started school. Needless to say, there was a period of years when the recently-concluded war remained a constant topic of conversation of news and magazine articles, movies, books, and radio programs.

I claim no expertise on World War II. In no way am I an Historian. But there are some incontrovertible facts.

Our state of war with Japan was caused by a sneak attack by Japan on our naval base at Pearl Harbor. At the time of the attack, Japanese emissaries were in Washington. They were assuring President Roosevelt of their country's peaceful and benign intentions. Thousands of Americans died in those first few hours of fighting. Most of them never had a chance; many were still asleep when the bombs fell.

In a speech the next day, President Roosevelt called the attack "barbarous" and predicted that the date would "live in infamy." He pledged that the United States would thwart the aggression.

During the course of the war, the Japanese committed numerous atrocities. The Bataan death march was one. Use of poison gas was another.

When the tide began to turn, the Japanese defended their Pacific island strongholds with fanatical and suicidal zeal. Kamikaze planes were used to crash into American ships. My father still has a piece of shrapnel in his neck as a souvenier from a Kamikaze attack.

It was estimated that over a million Americans would die if the war was to be won by conventional means. Peace terms were offered to the Japanese; they were warned about a new "super-weapon" that would be used if they were intransigent. They refused the offer.

Mindful of those million American lives, President Harry S. Truman ordered the atomic attacks on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Eight days later and the war was over.

Despite what you may have read or heard on or near the anniversary dates of the bombing, there are some facts. President Truman saved countless lives; he shortened the war. He ended four years of horror and pain.

Those who would revise history to make us out to be the bad guys want us to forget Pearl Harbor, forget the Bataan death march, forget that estimate of a million lives.

Well, they can go pound sand. Harry Truman was a hero. He gave the Japanese what they asked for – in spades. My only regret is that the technology wasn't ready a little sooner so that we could have lobbed one into Hitler's bunker before he killed himself. The sight of all those swastikas going up in an atomic cloud would have warmed my heart.

Surcharge is haunting the Duke

By Jerry Berger

Gov. Michael S. Dukakis' smooth political machine hit a major bump in the road last week — with Dukakis at the wheel — and the jolts may be felt until next year's election.

The pothole took the form of a Springfield television interview in which Dukakis said a December political poll showed half the state's taxpayers would prefer to see improved services over elimination of the 7 ½ percent income tax surcharge.

And while he said "there will be a good tax cut this year," he warned against "the political roller coaster of cutting taxes in an election year and raising them afterwards."

He also did not help his cause by later declining to offer details about the poll — and downplaying the significance of his remarks.

Dukakis is sitting on top of state budget surplus estimated to run between $300 million and $500 million. If he plays his cards right — using the surplus to cut taxes and selectively boost services — the surplus could be his major asset in the 1986 election campaign.

But one false step — and last week's comments may prove to be that step — could turn the surplus into a powderkeg that will explode in his face on Election Day 1986.

The first signs it could be political TNT came in comments from leaders of a move to repeal the "Dukakis surtax," so-called because it was adopted as a "temporary" levy during his first administration.

"Those are the kind of poll results one would expect from one's own political committee," sniffed Barbara Anderson, director of Citizens for Limited Taxation, which has authored a initiative petition to repeal the surtax.

The most serious repercussion could be the potential unraveling an understanding with the Massachusetts High Technology Council, which opted not to join CLT in the petition drive. When the two groups joined forces in 1980, the result was Proposition 2 ½.

The House, on an initiative pushed by its Democratic leadership, has overwhelmingly voted to phase out the surtax. But Senate Ways and Means Committee Chairwoman Patricia McGovern, D-Lawrence, steadfastly resists that approach — or even Dukakis' initial call for a $64 million, one-time tax rebate.

Nonetheless, the argument was enough to convince the High Tech Council to avoid the petition drive — and cool the tax cut fever for awhile.

But the combination of the television interview and the mysterious poll have sent the thermometer soaring again — in a very partisan manner that is likely to continue until the election.

State Republican Party Chairman Andrew S. Natsios and erstwhile GOP U.S. Senate candidate Raymond Shamie were quick to seize on Dukakis' comments, issuing press releases echoing the "Give It Back, Mike" theme Shamie launched when he joined the fray.

Unless or until Dukakis can back up his poll "results" with some specifics, he will be hounded by those remarks. And the start of an election year is the wrong time, from his perspective, to be hounded by anything — especially politically explosive issues such as taxes.

Developers slammed for legal chicanery

As a resident of Newton and Auburndale, I am appreciative of recent efforts of our city's aldermen and especially Richard McGrath in representing the best interests of our citizens in zoning and other matters, under our code of laws.

At the same time, I am dismayed and disgusted with the events surrounding recent actions of the owners and developers of the property at 175 Auburn St., Auburndale. I am upset to think they would knowingly use a questionable technicality to gain an advantage over our elected officials and surprised they would do so at the expense of their own good faith and good will.

Have we become a people who believe that the letter of the law is more important than its intent? I think not. We have good laws and we have good elected officials to enforce and administer them.

The oversight concerning the deadline I am referring to on the part of the aldermen pales in comparison to the developers' knowing silence or possible deceit in letting time run out on the vote to approve their petition.

The aldermen had an understandable lapse in attention because of the very fact they were wrestling with our zoning laws and merits of the issues on behalf of the developers. But someone tried to be cute, tried to gain a legal advantage.

The issue here is more than a matter of time. This is a matter of the substance of good faith versus the form of an ordinance. The developers hid behind the clock and procedural rules, but time is ticking away on this project and the verdict is in.

If justice is served (remember we are supposed to be dealing with individual rights and the laws which bring us together as a people), then, in this case, it is served on a silver platter with a petition denied, lots of legal fees and many more questions about how private persons hold themselves out to the public and at what price.

It appears that the developers tried to sell themselves for short money — one condo. Instead, they and their agents bought tarnished reputations — self inflicted.

As we are told, what goes around, comes around. That goes for good faith and good laws. It comes from integrity and common sense. It creates a community.

Unfortunately, this project was pushed by way of a terribly short-sighted legal maneuver. Fortunately, our elected officials, like Mr. McGrath, have a longer and better view of the reason why we have a political process that gives balance to our laws. I appreciate the good faith shown by our aldermen in this instance.

The reality behind those 'spontaneous' coffee ads

By Christie Herlihy-Starr

I consider myself a coffee achiever, one who drinks a regular two cups a day and so far has lived to tell about it.

There's a perkiness that comes from coffee drinking, something the interviewer from a New York marketing firm must have recognized because he asked me and my husband, Bill, a coffee lover by marriage, to participate in a coffee survey.

"For your trouble, we'll buy your drinks for the evening," he said. Not bad. We had already ordered an $8 bottle of wine at the Abruzzi Via restaurant in Newton Centre. "And you might be among those selected for a free lunch at Maison Robert in downtown Boston."

"Ask away," we said.

We never thought we would be among 24 Newton couples selected from Abruzzi Via and Cantin Abruzzi to participate in the second phase of the "research project:" Operation Maison Robert.

At noon on the appointed day, a smiling man dressed in a black tuxedo ushered us to a table in the middle of a crowded but quiet dining room that was unsually bright and hot — like a television studio. The wall sconces beamed with bright white light, so did the lights atop that walnut wall set with mirror panels.

"There's something funny about that wall," said Bill who had lunched at Maison before but who didn't remember the way the wall jutted out into the room. Could it contain the hidden camera?

A white-coated attendant filled our water glasses from a silver pitcher then returned to serve us crusty baguettes and slabs of dewy butter. Pink roses unfolded in a delicate glass vase on our white linen-covered table — so romantic, but yet so strange to be seated at a table directly facing that mirrored wall.

I made sure to dab my lips after every third spoonful of soup du jour. Was I getting too many crumbs on the linen tablecloth? Are they monitoring our conversation for a mike check? Are the cameras rolling? Is someone saying, "These people don't know it, but we're at one of Boston's finest restaurants today to ask diners how they feel about..."

I had just finished my main course of grilled salmon and vegetables with small white potatoes when a hush fell over the room. The smiling head waiter began talking with a couple nearest the mirrored wall.

"What do you think of the coffee?"

"It's very good," the man was saying. I was too busy formulating my own answers to hear much of the conversation, but I did pick up the waiter's announcement: "It's Folgers crystals."

"Really?" the woman asked.

"Does this taste as good as the Chock Full of Nuts you've been drinking at home?" he pressed.

"Better."

A waiter removed our dishes

I looked at the waiter. His mouth hung open, his eyes popping — the way I'd look if I'd been told the grilled salmon I had just eaten was really a specially formed piece of Spam.

and asked if we would like dessert. I wondered what would happen if I didn't order coffee.

"Just coffee," I said.

"I'll have coffee, and the blueberries in liquor," said my husband, never one, even under stressful conditions, to turn down dessert.

Coffee was brought on a silver tray, and carefully poured into two porcelain cups. The waiter placed the ornate silver urn on the tray in front of us.

The room was quiet again. It was time for the smiling waiter. He walked past our table, offering the cloth-covered basket to an older couple whom he began quizzing about the coffee.

One taste of that coffee and I knew it was instant. Instant coffee is instant coffee, whether you sip it at Maison Robert with cream or at the office with Coffeemate. But whether instant or regular, coffee has a very real effect. After one cup I was beginning to feel a powerful urge to visit the lady's room. But no, the smiling waiter was about to strike again.

"I guess I'll bring this over to you now," he said placing the mysterious cloth-covered basket in front of us. "Have a truffle and tell me what you think." We nibbled the sweet candy and pronounced it delicious.

"What did you think of the coffee?"

"Very good. Delicious," Bill and I both said, nodding. I could feel the women at the table in front of us watching us intently.

"How does it taste?"

"Rich," I said.

"Pardon me?"

"Rich, and ...strong. I told Bill I could smell it when it was being poured at the neighboring table." The last statement was true. I couldn't vouch for the first.

"What's the one word you would use to describe it?"

Was he deaf? "Rich," I said. "I've been to South America, where they prize good coffee, and I think this tastes rich." The mind can be very creative when the glamour of appearing in a television commercial beckons.

"You sound like a couple who really appreciates coffee."

"We do. We drink it in the morning and in the afternoon at work," said Bill.

"How did you say it tasted?" the waiter pressed, refilling our coffee cups. "Take another sip and tell me."

"Rich, flavorful," I repeated again. "What I would expect a fine restaurant like Maison Robert to serve." The interviewer smiled more broadly.

"How does this compare with fresh brewed?"

"As good," Bill said.

"As good?"

"Yes, as good as freshly brewed."

"It's Folgers crystals."

"Really," I said, trying not to look too surprised. I looked at the waiter, his mouth hung open, his eyes popping — the way I'd look if I'd been told the grilled salmon I had just eaten was really a specially formed piece of Spam.

"Would you serve it at home?"

"Yes. To guests."

"Would you tell them it was Folgers crystals?"

"Not unless they asked," Bill said.

It was over. For our debut we were paid a dollar bill each for our services that afternoon. We were also asked to sign a legal form giving Proctor and Gamble permission to use our comments in a commercial. It said we would be paid appropriately if the commercial was used, and asked us to affirm that we were not a paid model or actor. By signing the form we also agreed we were not aware of being filmed.

We mulled over the forms. It should have been obvious to anyone dining in that strangely arranged and unusually bright room that we were being filmed. Should we lie? Could Ralph Nader sue us?

We signed. And we were told we'd hear in a few weeks if we were selected. Outside, Bill and I talked.

"I wished we had just paid for the lunch. I think I would have enjoyed it a whole lot more," Bill said. "I wouldn't have worried about what they were going to ask me."

Paying would certainly have made the experience more real.

(Christie Herlihy-Starr lived in Newton until recently, when she and her husband Bill bought a home in Randolph. She is a general assignment reporter for the News Tribune, a Transcript Newspaper.)

'Fishy' water

when I first noticed the smell. I've been getting headaches and nausea. It tastes like it came out of a dump."

Fastov, Goldfine and other residents of the building now use bottled water because they said they are afraid to drink the water coming out of their faucets.

Fastov added the problem extends to bathing and laundry as well.

"When I take a shower, I smell like a fish when I get out," she said. "Also, when I did my laundry , it also smelled like fish."

Newton is not the only city affected.

According to spokesmen from Waltham and Watertown, those muncipalities are experiencing similar problems. In addition, Kellogg said Brighton "and possibly other towns serviced by the Wachusetts" are affected.

Highlands resident David Francis said he is also avoiding the tap water, though he said he doesn't think it would be dangerous to do so.

"It smells pretty bad," Francis said. "I think I'll find something other than water to drink for a while."

Newton officials say they are aware of the problem and agree with the MWRA that there is no danger.

"We are telling people what (the MWRA) told us. The fishy taste in the water was caused by algae growth and it is safe to drink," an administrative source said. "They told us they treated it and it should be back to normal in a couple of days."

Kellogg said the MWRA treated the water a week ago Tuesday.

"Our people at the reservoir dumped the copper sulfate and it will take a couple of days before it has a chance to circulate. It should be back to normal soon."

A Newton DPW spokesman said anyone concerned about the smell and taste should refrigerate the water before use.

By Sunday, however, the Fastov's still had problems.

"If anything, it's worse," Mrs. Fastov said. "I can't believe they could be this stupid about handling this. We've been complaining for two months now, it's not like this happened overnight."

Kellogg cautioned that the problem is not unusual.

"This pops up from time to time," he said. "It is a natural phenomenon that happens in the summertime when the heat and humidity are just right. No one has told me that this is the worst problem they ever saw."

Kellogg said even after the problem is treated, some people might still experience lingering effects.

"The algae could remain and even grow in water heaters for a while, even after the problem at the reservoir is taken care of," he said.

Though people are complaining, a check of local hospitals found no cases of illness due to the problem.

Water complaints lead to repeated treatment

Kellogg said while the MWRA is aware of the problem, there is not much to be done other than treating the water.

"It is a nuisance," Kellogg said. "We are giving it our utmost attention. The qaulity of the water, though, is fine. We just hope the odor goes away soon."

Waltham Health Director Bob Mailloux said his department was aware of the problem.

"We got quite a few complaints in the last week or so especially," Mailloux said. "But there's not a whole heck of a lot we can do."

Mailloux said he agreed with Kellogg that the algae poses no health threat.

"It is not dangerous from a health standpoint," he said. "Esthetically, it stinks, but I don't think it is a health hazard."

Mailloux, however, disagreed with the MWRA's clean-up timetable.

"I've seen times they've treated the Quabbin where it's taken two to three weeks. If the MWRA says it can get the Wachusetts cleaned up in less than a week, I think that's being slightly optimistic," he said.

As for people complaining of getting sick from drinking the water, Mailloux said it could be a psychological reaction.

"I had a lady call me today and tell me she was hospitalized with diarreah. I guess if somebody had a health problem, the water wouldn't help it, but if it was causing the problem, we'd all be running around with toilet paper in our hands," he said.

Watertown Health Director Joe DiVico said if the algae were a health hazard, he would have to notify the public.

"Our department received about a half-dozen complaints, but at this stage of the game we really can't do anything. If the bacteria count were high or excessive, then I would have to notify the people of Watertown immediately," he said.

DiVico said his department — which first received complaints three weeks ago — tests the water twice a week and has found no health hazards.

"The people are entitled to answers," he said. "We are checking the water, and if anyone has a complaint, they should call my office."

He added he would not recommend anyone drink the water if they had any health problems.

Warning for Iodice

Assistant City Solicitor G. Michael Peirce disagreed with Carmichael's contention.

"I think my client's position was correct," Peirce said. "I think the ordinance allows an office building to be constructed in a manufacturing zone."

Peirce said GARDEN's suit was one of many the city is involved in.

"We get sued all the time,' Peirce said. "This is just another thing on my desk as far as I'm concerned. The neighbors are bringing an action against the ZBA's reaction, but that's all I really care to say about something like this that is still in litigation."

Carmichael said the suit has two goals.

"First and foremost, we want to halt construction of the building. We also want to protect the neighborhoods. If we are victorious, we will have made great strides toward protecting residential communities. Nonantum isn't the only Newton neighborhood affected by the suit," Carmichael said.

"We have to pursue this matter no matter what to protect other zones in this city from this kind of development which reflects total insensitivity to the community around it."

Carmichael added he "would like to see a precedent set. Hopefully, the ramification of a victorious court case will benefit the city as a whole. I became involved because the people who voted for me expect me to go to the wall for them."

Peirce said the case will go to a jury trial sometime in late October.

Exact status of police council unknown

While that problem appears to have been uncovered and corrected, officials in every level of government say they know little about the GBPC or its operations.

A spokesman for the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Council said his organization has "had very little contact" with the GBPC and could not offer any further information on the group.

An official from State Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti's office said, "We don't know anything about it (the council). We don't really know who they are. We draw a blank."

Officials at the state Department of Public Safety could not be reached for comment.

Because the exact nature of its power is so ill-defined, the council needs "a host community" from which to operate. Since Quinn is GBPC chairman, the Garden City fulfills that role.

The arrangement involves three divisions of city government — the Purchasing Department, which monitors the GBPC's multi-million dollar collective purchases of law enforcement equipment, the Law Department, which routinely reviews the group's contracts, and the Accounting Department, which pays the council's bills and keeps its financial records.

According to Purchasing Agent Blair Kanbar, the GBPC's bidding procedures fall under Chapt. 7, Sec. 22b of Massachusetts General Law, which allows "any two or more political subdivisions (cities or towns) to join together for the purpose of obtaining and accepting competitive bids on similar items of material, supplies, equipment or services."

Comptroller Lawrence Marino said he has no way of knowing whether or not the GBPC bills Quinn authorizes him to pay are legitimate, but Funk dismissed as "too hypothetical" a question about whether the city would liable if the GBPC, its employee or members are found to have committed any legal improprieties.

Funk said he was not sure whether the council's records are considered public documents and added that he did not think there are regular audits of the group's financial dealings.

White said. "I would have hoped the board could have been reasonable and realistic about the situation instead of worrying about right or wrong, but they didn't."

City Solicitor Daniel Funk, however, argued the board's vote took place within the deadline.

"The city's position is that the board acted on the night of August 12," Funk said. "It was a validly-taken action and we feel the board acted before the 90-day deadline expired."

Alderman Richard McGrath, who originally voted to deny the permit, agreed with Funk.

"By voting a second time to deny the permit," McGrath said, "the board decided it did act within the deadline. Our decision is unchanged."

McGrath said the next move is up to White.

"The ball is in their court. They could go to the Building Department and ask for a construction permit, but without board approval, they wouldn't get it."

White, however, disagreed with McGrath.

"After the 20-day appeal period," White said, "I will go down to the Building Department and ask for a permit. If they don't grant me a permit, I'll go to court, but I'm going to get it."

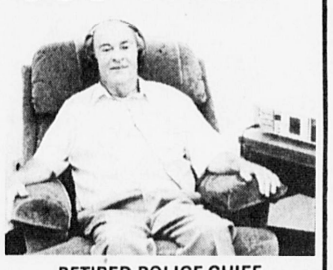

Funk refused to comment on what action the city might take if the vote is challenged.

"I really can't say what we'll do because I want to save that argument for court," Funk said. "All I can say is that we were prepared for the possiblity of litigation."

White said he was confident that the city has no case.

"The law is on our side, and I feel the courts will agree that the board failed to act in time and that my client should be granted a construction permit."

Helping those with habits

RETIRED POLICE CHIEF QUITS SMOKING ON ONE VISIT

Jim Curran, former Norwood Police Chief quit smoking after just one private visit to the Michelle Dyan Studio on Rte. 1, Norwood. Mr. Curran smoked for 44 years and was smoking 2 packs a day when he quit with this amazing new technique developed by Michelle Dyan of Braintree. He joins over 60 other local residents who have "kicked the habit" without withdrawal or weight gain. Judy Walsh, owner of the Norwood studio explains that clients are very awake and alert at all times while using the new Audio Conscious methods of hypnosis. Most clients who have been unsuccessful with other methods of hypnosis are experiencing success with the Audio Conscious technique. All appointments and sessions are private.

Since opening the studio in Norwood, 75 smokers have used the Audio Conscious Hypnosis method and 60 have quit. There have been 48 weight clients with only three having difficulty in achieving their goals.

Other programs offered through Michelle Dyan Studio are: stress management, insomnia, nail biting, hair twirling, memory retention, sales motivation, and sports concentration.

Several clients using Audio Conscious Hypnosis as a method to improve their golf games have actually won tournaments by improving their swing and putting, concentration and performance.

For more information or to make an appointment call the studio closest to you between 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Jewels & Gems
BY CAROL
THE GOLD LADY

SHEFFIELD SILVERPLATE

Thomas Bolsover was a silversmith in Sheffield township in England. While mending a crack in a silver knife one day, he placed a copper coin next to the blade to make the vise tighter. He then applied heat to the knife to mend it. As he did this, however, he was distracted by the town crier. When he looked back at the knife, he found that the copper coin had fused to the blade. When he experimented with the ruined knife, he found that the silver and copper could easily be rolled and worked together in much the same manner as silver by itself. This discovery led to the making of Sheffield silverplate. It made silver available to those who could never before afford it.

Learning how to blend metals and experimenting with them is what a master craftsman knows about. At CAROL "THE GOLD LADY" we custom design jewelry pieces with the best metals and precious gems. Our jewelry reflects the wearer as well as the person who crafted it. We have jewelry for all occasions and invite you to come in and browse whether or not you're in the market for a piece of fine jewelry. See us for all your jewelry and gift giving needs. We're at 109 Dalby St., Newton. Tues., Wed., Sat. 10-6; Thurs. & Fri. til 9. Tel. 332-5935. Have a safe & happy Labor Day holiday.

These 'Gifted Buyers' will do the shopping

By Lauren McFalls
Assistant News Editor

Fall is approaching, and the wardrobe needs some updating. But what's a busy career man or woman to do?

For those who can not face the mob scenes in shopping malls or downtown business areas; who become intimidated by the numerous sportswear, dress, menswear and other sections of department stores; or who are impatient with the limited selection offered by boutique shops; there is now another option:

- fashion buyers, who do the shopping for you.

Robin Rogers and Judith Rosenthal make up The Gifted Buyer. Although they formed the business only last winter, Newton residents have already availed themselves to their services.

For a consultants' fee of $50, plus $25 an hour for shopping, the two will reorganize, categorize and mix-and-match their clients' wardrobe, determining their "style" through interviews on lifestyle, goals and overall personality.

The gifted buyers will also use color analysis techniques to determine which colors look best on a client before tackling the shopping end in their service.

They'll even do the bargain hunting. In fact, the shopping duo say they saved one area stockbroker some $700 when they purchased $1,250 worth of clothes for $530 after five hours of shopping.

How do they do it?

Quite simply, "We're good at it," says Rogers. "It's difficult, but it's just a question of experience."

That experience includes work at Bloomingdale's department store and in other public relations and business occupations.

Rogers worked as a manager for Bon Marche for three years in Casper, Wyoming, and for a year at Bloomingdale's. Also, she gained experience as a professional recruiter and teacher of interviewing techniques and professional goal setting.

In addition to serving as marketing director for a real estate developer in Boston for six years, Rosenthal has worked as a sales person in the men's department of Bloomingdale's for the past year.

The buyers believe the menswear background will prove advantageous to their business because, says Rogers, nationally, men have more frequently used fashion buyer services.

"We cater to business executives — people who don't have time to go out and shop or the inclination to coordinate their wardrobe," says Rogers.

Often, explains Rosenthal, "People will just buy bits and pieces without a thought to what's in their closet."

But actually, "We can buy anything," says Rosenthal. "Clothes, housewares, gifts."

Wardrobe consulting, however, is their "thrust," she says.

Buying clothes for others involves "just knowing people," states Rosenthal, whose formal education includes human movement behavior and dance.

A special family friendship blossoms

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Sometimes, the things that happen in your own backyard have more impact than screaming banner headlines and those "special reports" that interrupt your favorite television show. It's just that you never hear about them.

While world political and religious leaders talk about cleaning up the messes they get themselves in, some people — like Joe Elfman — actually do something.

Who is Joe Elfman?

He's not a diplomat or an ambassador — just a guy from Newton who took time to show a little kindness to a Chinese-American professor and his family and is now pushing to get one of their children into West Point.

In return, he got nothing but love and kinship. Then again, Joe Elfman wasn't looking for the Nobel Peace Prize.

"At first, the kids came over to my house because they didn't have a color television. Soon they began to have all their goodies and snacks here too. I became their adopted grandpa," Elfman said of Leonard and Billie Poon's two children, Brian and Patrick. "Annie, my wife, would stay up all night with these two children helping them with their studies."

Elfman glowed as he recalled how the children would tell strangers they were his grandchildren.

"I remember one time when Brian was four, Annie took him to a store and he told the woman behind the cash register that she was his real grandmother."

What makes the story really interesting, Elfman said, is the interaction between the Elfmans, devout Jews, and the Poons, devout Catholics.

"During the eight years we knew the Poons," Elfman said, "we would invite them over to our house for a passover seder. I remember one Passover eve when Patrick was about 10. He told his baseball coach that he couldn't play that late afternoon because of Passover. The coach, who is also Jewish, asked Patrick if he was. He said no, but said his grandparents were."

Six years ago — just before Passover — Annie Elfman died. To Joe's surprise, Billie Poon invited him to her house for a seder.

"Upon arriving to the Poon house, I saw the table all set up with glasses of wine and the Passover plate with the bitter herbs, shank bone, parsley, etc. and all the men wearing yarmulkes. I said the traditional Kiddish (prayer over wine) and we commenced with the traditional service. Brian asked the four questions.

"Billie served hot gefilte fish and matzo ball soup. She said my wife taught her how to make all the dishes and even though it was her first attempt, they tasted like my wife's cooking. I was really moved."

That tradition continued until recently, when the Poons moved to Georgia. The move, however, didn't keep them apart.

"I thought Patrick would be a shoo-in for West Point because of his athletic and scholastic ability, so I wrote to President Reagan asking him to help Patrick out."

Elfman explained that, because the Poons are moving during Patrick's last year of high school, neither Massachusetts nor Georgia legislators would be able to help him get appointed.

The Poon family with Newton's Joe Elfman

> 'I asked the president to do an old man a favor because I love that family so much.'
>
> — Joe Elfman

"I asked the president to do an old man a favor because I love that family so much," Elfman said.

While Reagan didn't personally respond, he sent a copy of the letter to West Point Deputy Director of Officer Personnel Management Colonel Willis R. Bunting. Bunting advised Elfman while it was too early to determine if Patrick is qualified, "he would be given every consideration for an appointment."

So, while Americans and Russians bicker over arms control and Christians, Moslems and Jews kill each other in the Middle East, Joe Elfman — in his own little way — is proving there is still some sanity left in the world.

'Liberty' finds few suitors in the city

By John Moroney
Staff Writer

NEWTON — If last week's organizational meeting to save the Statue of Liberty is any indication of its fate, the majestic lady will be floating face down in New York Harbor on June 4, 1986, instead of celebrating her centennial.

"I don't think it matters that a lot of people aren't here, as long as all of you have loud mouths and talk about it, " said John Shea, associate director for the Northeast office of The Statue of Liberty Ellis Island Foundation, Inc.

Accompanied by the office's Director of Public Relations, Laurie Becker, Shea spoke to eight people in the cafeteria of City Hall about forming a local "task force" to help finish raising $230 million dollars to complete the restoration of the statue and Ellis Island.

The "most important aspect of finishing the restoration is local community involvement at the grassroot level," Shea said.

Persons interested in becoming volunteers, he said, can perform a number of tasks for the foundation. A volunteer might be asked to attend a local community function in order to accept a check on behalf of the foundation, make a presentation to a community organization to generate interest in the foundation or set up a booth at a local trade show or exhibition center.

"More importantly, we need volunteers to act as the eyes and ears in the community," Shea said. "We need to know what resources can be tapped in the community."

The Garden City is the first Massachusetts community in which the foundation has attempted to initiate a grassroot program. Successful programs are operatin in New York, Connecticut and New Jersey, Shea said. Clifton, N.J., he added, has already donated $10,000 to the foundation.

"If somebody in Newton could get the ear of the mayor and ask him to approve some sort of program, I don't think this city would have any problems raising money," the associate director said.

The foundation has reached the $170 million mark in its campaign which includes the rehabilitation of the historic immigration station on nearby Ellis Island.

"We've done a great job so far," Shea said. "But with only 44 weeks to go until the rededication that translates into more than $1 million a week."

Persons interested in joining the fight to save the Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island can write the foundation at P.O. Box 1986, New York, New York 10018 by calling Shea or Becker at (212) 883-1986.

School curriculum changes continue

In order to receive resources for implementation from Annett, Superintendent of Schools John Strand encourages teachers "to work within existing curriculum and not to take off in different directions." The majority of this year's projects, Annett added, were aimed at combining courses already in place throughout the system.

One of the projects that has been approved by Annett's office is a program for "gifted and talented students." The program, which should be in place by late October or early November, has been developed to give those students academically "head and shoulders" above others, instruction at a faster rate.

The curriculum consists of two divisions. One is for extremely talented students while the other is for students who possess above average learning abilities. Delivery of these services at the elementary level only will include instruction in math, science, language and arts, and general skills.

While the program for gifted students is just getting underway, Annett said this year the city will witness the final phase of a writing and computer program initiated in the elementary schools three years ago. Annett staggered the program by implementing it in five elementary schools every year. By the end of this coming school year, Annett said the city's 15 elementary schools will have the program in place.

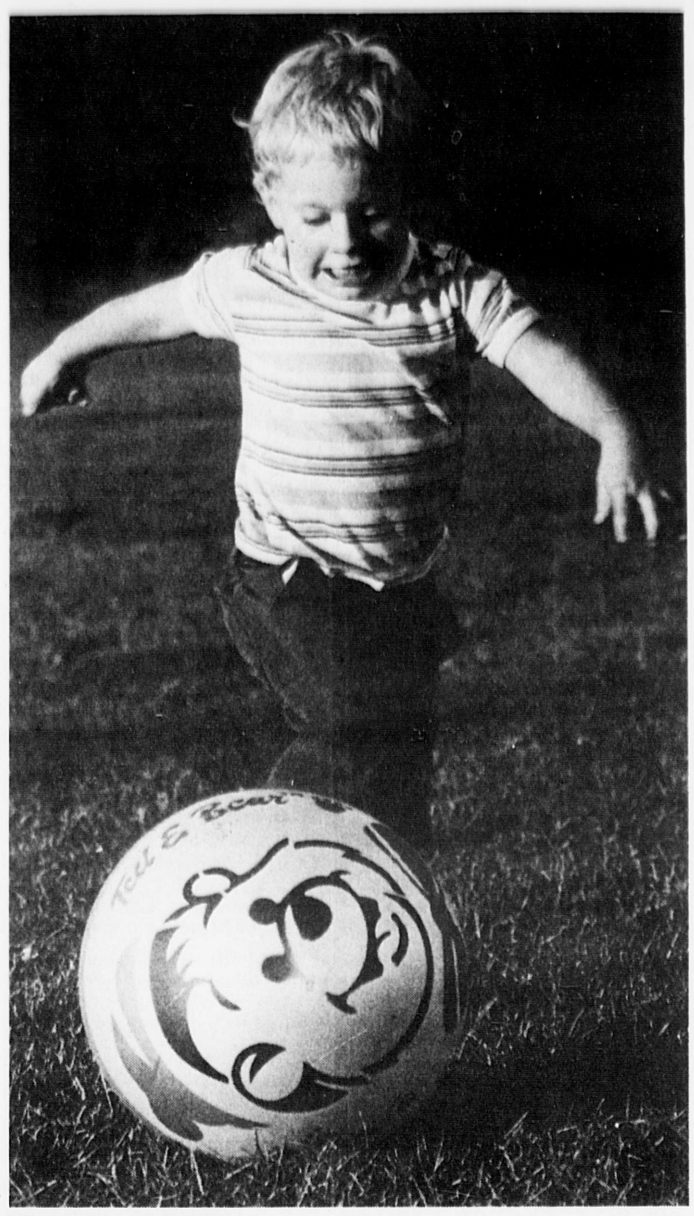

According to the assistant superintendent, this program focuses on the "editing aspects of writing and the use of computer language. We hope to introduce word processing at some time in the near future."

The use of computers in the junior high schools has also been redefined, Annett said. Previously, computers were the responsibility of the math department. With the re-organization, he said, they have been moved to the English and Science Department. Annett believes the reassignment of computer hardware and software to the science department will enhance experimentation in the classroom.

In addition to moving the computers, Brown Junior High School's science curriculum will face restructuring in order to make it more like the standardized programs at Bigelow and Day, Annett said. "The movement at Brown is to develop more year round science courses and eliminate a number of electives," he added.

In the coming school year, Annett also plans to make the needs of city teachers a major concern of the school administration. Although he can not make specific comments about how he plans to achieve this goal, he does plan to provide them with more resources to improve instruction.

"Our major goal is to encourage the staff to become more actively involved in examining their own classrooms," Annett said. One of the vehicles for examination, Annett said, will be the Secondary Symposium. Under the direction of Betty Quinn, special assistant to the superintendent, the symposium will "look at the key issues facing secondary schools."

Fund for rec land pushed

NEWTON — Alderman Verne Vance is asking the Board of Aldermen to discuss support for a State House bill setting up a fund — created from taxes on real estate transactions — municipalities can use to purchase and maintain recreation land.

"One of the concerns I have," Vance said, "both in general and as a member of the Board of Directors of the Newton Conservators, is the problem of the city making available funds for the acquisition of open space. Actually, it's almost more of a problem of getting adequate funds for maintenance of the space we have. Sometimes we're successful, sometimes, we're not."

Using Cold Spring Park as an example, Vance said open space projects often get hung up because some board members are reluctant to create new projects if there is not enough money to take care of the old ones.

"When the board was voting on Cold Spring," Vance said, "a number of those who objected objected on the grounds that the city wasn't maintaining our open spaces and saw a less than great performance in taking care of our other parks."

With that opposition in mind, Vance said this bill would alleviate funding problems by creating a pool of money designated specifically for open spaces.

"My concern is," Vance said, "with the cut of other sources of funds, the demands on existing city funds from existing sources will go by the board."

According to Rep. Roger Goyette (D-New Bedford), the bill is designed to create land bank managment throughout the state.

"This bill wouldn't mandate anyone to do anything," Goyette said. "What it would do is to allow communities to raise money for creating and managing land for recreational use if they want to."

Summer means school maintenance

By John Moroney
Staff Writer

NEWTON — For those who thought the city's schools remained empty while their occupants enjoyed two months at the beach or lake, think again.

"It's just the opposite," Gene Sweeney, supervisor of custodians for the city said, "Summer is when we do a complete cleaning in all the schools — from top to bottom."

Just off the top of his head, Sweeney said summer vacation months mean removing graffiti from bathroom walls, fixing air-conditioners in the classrooms, changing broken light fixtures and scrubbing floors in over 500,000 sq. ft. of school space.

"There are 15 elementary schools, three junior high schools and two senior high schools," Sweeney said, "and we do all our maintenance in house."

The biggest project under taken this summer by North's custodial staff was the installation of an energy management system that will allow the control of heating and air-conditioning from a central computer system on the first floor. "Someday it might be able to control security," Sweeney added.

Over the course of a school year, the number of custodians responsible for the Garden City's mammoth mess of notebook paper, empty milk cartons and broken windows hovers around 100. During the summer months, because of vacations and sick days, the workforce drops into the 60s. To compensate, Sweeney hires special needs youths to help the staff get the buildings in shape for Sept. 4. Sweeney and North's custodians agreed that this year's group of about 40 was "the best we've ever had."

Although they believe the kids cleaning the city's schools this summer are top-notch, two North custodians are still uneasy about the hoard which will descend upon the school buildings during the first week of September.

"No, I'm not looking foward to them (the students) coming back," Newton North custodian Louis Barisano said. "It's too hectic with all the kids around, there's no discipline."

"All the effort and work is destroyed in one day," Tommy Pitts, a colleague of Barisano's, added.

The custodians at North feel the lack of discipline and teacher supervision is one of the primary reasons for damaged school property.

"Throughout the system, the cleanliness of the school is reflected by the principal to the teacher to the custodian," Sweeney said. "If you have the cooperation of the principal, that's everything."

The cost of keeping a school in good shape is astronomical, Sweeney, a veteran of the schools for 22 years, said. For example, there are 39 toilets at Newton North, not including the ones in the area pool and gym, that cost the city about $260 each to repaint and refurbish. Unfortunately, he said, because of vandalism these toilets will have to be redone over the Christmas vacation.

Citing a program he observed in the Midwest, Sweeney said student organizations appropriate monies for a vandalism fund. If money from the fund is still available at the end of the year, scholarships are given to deserving students. "They've sent kids to the top schools in the country," he added.

Farmers' Market yields nature's bounty

By John Moroney, Staff Writer

NEWTON — Whoever coined the phrase "The Garden City" must have had the Farmers' Market in mind.

"Squash, tomatoes, beans, onions, potatoes, corn, peaches, apples, and frozen turkey pies, you name it we got it," Farmer's Marketmaster Barry Mathis said. "It's like going to Quincy Market except you don't have to go into Boston."

Now in its sixth season of giving residents a taste of the country in the city, Mathis feels the weekly market offers some of the freshest produce in the area.

"I come because the produce is so fresh," Donna Rosenberg said. "And because there isn't any other farm in the area."

A Newton couple, who wished to remain anonymous, had this to say about the market. "I like to come because of the color," the husband said, referring to the market's jovial atmosphere.

"I have a garden of my own," his wife said, "and I like to come and see how my vegetables compare to the stuff grown by professionals."

The "open-air market," sponsored by the city's recreation department and the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce, is open every Tuesday, rain or shine, from 2:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. at the base of the War Memorial at City Hall. The market's season runs from the first week of July to the last week of October. Produce vendors, who park around the perimeter of the circle, are charged — $11 for a truck, $9 for a van and $7 for a car — to help cover the costs of hiring a traffic officer. The only other requirement is vendors must have grown the vegetables.

"All the stuff we sell is picked the same day," Steve Violett of Lunenberg said. "If it's more than a day old, we won't sell it."

Representing his family's farm, Violett started coming to the market when it first opened.

"It's probably one of the best markets in the area," Violett said adding his family visits markets in Brookline, Cambridge and Brighton. "The people of Newton have always been very good to us," he said.

Violett believes consumers and vendors can profit from open-air markets; farmers sell their produce at retail prices, and consumers buy fresh vegetables without having to pay a middle man. "All things considered," Violett added, "everybody makes out."

Last week was Sharon Clow's first attempt at selling produce at an open-air market. Representing Harvey's Farm in Westboro, Clow was a little disappointed in her preparation for the Farmer's Market.

"It's going really good, but next time I'll know to bring a lot more stuff. I could have sold more if I had known to bring it."

Selling corn, summer squash and tomatoes from the back of a yellow Ford pickup, Clow was more amazed by the variety of people at the market than the variety of vegetables.

Clow, who plans on attending the Farmer's Market "a few more times," had two types of corn on sale. Butter and sugar corn for $2 a dozen and Silver Queen corn for $2.50 a dozen.

Harvard farmer Alex MacLennan, one of the farmers who has attended the market every week since July, said last week was probably the biggest turnout this year. Being his first year of commercial farming, MacLennan said farmers' markets have given him the opportunity to earn some much needed cash.

"I'm not large enough to support a stand. By hitting one or two farmers' markets a week, I can get the retail price for my produce," he said. "When you wholesale produce, you net only about 50 percent of the cost."

MacLennan, who "generally sells out" every Tuesday, said he started the season by selling cold crops — beets, broccoli and peas. Now that the warmer weather is here, he has been able to offer customers tomatoes, peppers, zucchini and summer squash.

One woman was trying to stop the tomatoes she bought at the market from rolling down the sidewalk when she was asked what she thought of the market.

"This is the first time I've ever been to the market," she said "It seems very interesting, and after I take these home and try them I'll let you know."

Village study finally begins

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The Village Study, an ambitious two-year project designed to guide the city's growth into the next century, has finally begun.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann last week announced the signing of a $181,000 contract with Connery Associates to undertake the city-wide development analysis. The Winchester firm recently completed similar studies in Braintree, Lynn and Amesbury.

"The study represents a master planning approach which will identify and guide appropriate development. Coupled with the six-year Capital Improvement Program, the Village Study rounds out the city's blueprint for the 21st century," Mann said in a prepared statement.

John W. Connery, one of the firm's principals, said, "The preservation of the quality of residential life here is paramount in whatever we come out with ... Newton is not going to rest on its laurels."

The study, scheduled for completion in July, 1987, will be based on a parcel-by-parcel anaylsis coupled with a detailed examination of the city's traffic, parking, urban design, marketing and tax base.

Mann underscored that "extensive public participation" in the study is required by contract and said Connery will use the public input to "develop a consensus plan, including specific implementation strategies" to guide future development in a manner that "preserves the city's residential quality of life."

"The study will draw not only upon the extensive professional expertise of the consulting team, but also will rely in great part upon the citizens, businesses, neighborhood organizations, Board of Aldermen and other public officials who will be involved throughout the study," he said.

"The Village Study represents an opportunity for citizens and interest groups throughout the city to join in a deliberate and comprehensive effort to address issues of zoning, land use and long-term development," Mann added.

The Economic Development Commission will serve as "the city-wide steering committee" for the analysis and will sponsor Connery's public meetings, which are due to begin sometime next month. The EDC will also meet with the consultant for monthly status reports.

Arrangements are already underway for formal "kick-off" meetings with both the EDC and the aldermanic Administration & Planning Committee, Mann said.

Once the Village Study is completed, it will represent the most comprehensive development study ever performed here — addressing issues of traffic, parking, zoning buffers, commercial services, housing, environment and the city's capacity to provide services to meet future growth.

The final phase of the project calls for Connery to present aldermen with a "schedule of priority improvements," as well as a new city-wide zoning map and alternative zoning techniques "worded so that the Board of Aldermen can act on them immediately," the mayor said.

The three principals of the firm — Connery, Robert J. Catineau and Michael F. Oman — will be involved in the analysis.

Woman robbed after using pay phone

NEWTON CENTRE — A Newton Centre woman was punched in the face and robbed Sunday night by two men as she was using a pay phone on Centre Street.

The woman told police she was using a public telephone in front of the Mutual Bank shortly before 10 p.m. when she saw two men approaching her. She said they waited by the phone as if they wanted to use it after she was through.

Just as she was ready to hang up the phone, one of the men punched her and took her billfold, which contained $10 in cash, a number of blank checks and a driver's license. The men fled toward Sumner Street and the woman chased them, but they got away.

One of the assailants was described as being a white male, about 5-feet-11, slim, with short, dark brown hair. He was wearing a dark blue T-shirt and was possibly wearing jeans.

The second assailant was described as being a white male, about 5-feet-8, with a medium build and medium length blond hair. He was wearing a green shirt and, possibly, jeans.

Hit-and-run driver sought for sideswipe

AUBURNDALE — A hit-and-run accident occurred Sunday when two cars tried to make a left turn from Commonwealth Avenue onto Auburn Street at the same time.

Francis Tavares, of Campton, N.H., told police another car tried to swing around him as he made the turn onto Auburn Street. The driver of the second car sideswiped Tavares' 1984 Jeep and continued down Auburn Street, according to Tavares.

He told police he followed the car for a while, trying to get it to stop, but was unsuccessful. He did get the license plate number, however.

Pontiac stolen from Farquahar Road

NEWTONVILLE — A 1982 Pontiac Phoenix was stolen from Farquahar Road on Sunday before 10:30 p.m., according to police.

Lawsuit documents missing from car

NEWTON CENTRE — Some legal documents pertaining to a lawsuit between a Newton resident and a controversial psychiatrist were stolen from a car parked on Parker Street Thursday afternoon.

Police said two brief cases and a portfolio containing legal briefs were stolen from the 1985 Datsun. The papers were to be used in a state hearing coming up on Sept. 13 pertaining to the suit of Wallace C. Ralston against Dr. Peter Gill.

Gill is the founder of the Cambridge Psychotherapy Institute on Hammond Street, Chestnut Hill.

Woman flees knife-wielding assailant

UPPER FALLS — A woman was assaulted by a knife-wielding man around last week as she walked home from the Elliot MBTA station, but she escaped without injury.

The woman told police she heard footsteps behind her as she walked along Hickory Cliff Road. She turned around and saw a man holding a knife about eight to 12 inches long. He started to grab her, but she screamed and pulled away. The man then fled in the direction of Route 9.

Police described the assailant as being a black male, about 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighing between 130 and 145 pounds, with short hair. He was wearing dark pants and a dark long sleeve shirt with a white collar when the assault occurred.

Violin, mink coats among stolen goods

NEWTON CORNER — A violin and four mink coats were among the items stolen from a Laudholm Road house Friday. Police said the house was ransacked after entry was gained by smashing a kitchen door window. Also taken were some antiques, a silver flatware set, several silver bowls and assorted jewelry. Police gave no value for the items.

Eight cars damaged by vandals Sunday

NEWTON CORNER — Eight cars in this area were broken into Sunday night, according to police.

The rear windshield of a 1981 Saab parked on Franklin Street was smashed and the front windshield of a 1980 Chevrolet on Boyd Street was smashed, though nothing was reported missing from either car.

A Mazda parked on Parkview Avenue was entered and the complete contents of the glove box taken, including the registration for the car. On Bellevue Street, two pairs of sunglasses were taken out of a Toyota. From a car parked close by, children's golf clubs, a cooler and flashlight were taken.

A 1983 Toyota on Norwood Avenue had its antenna broken off and another car on the same street had its glove box rifled. A car parked on Holland Street in Newtonville had its glove box ransacked.

Shrubbery damage called malicious

NEWTON CENTRE — Police received a report of malicious damage Thursday at 1:15 a.m. when a large shrub was ripped out of the ground and placed so that it blocked the driveway of a home on Hammond Pond Parkway.

Pleads guilty to robbery

Sentencing scheduled for September

By Gary Dorion
County News Service

CAMBRIDGE — A West Newton man is to be sentenced Sept. 11 in connection with his guilty plea this week to an unarmed robbery at Liberty Cleaners and Tailors in Watertown last Feb. 22.

Vincent J. Gallello Jr., 28, of 120 Tolman St., was allowed to plead guilty to the lesser included offense of unarmed robbery, having been charged originally with armed robbery.

Gallello is to be sentenced by Superior Court Judge Hiller Zobel in Middlesex Court. He is confined at the Massachusetts Correctional Institution at Concord in connection with a parole detainer having been lodged following his arrest.

According to Assistant Middlesex County District Attorney Peter Bella, Gallello approached a young female clerk, telling her "I've got a gun ... Give me the cash."

Based on a description given by the clerk, Watertown Police drew a composite sketch of the suspect, circulated it out to the community and to surrounding communities and matched it with a photograph provided by Newton Police, said Bella.

The clerk later identified Gallello as the robber, according to Bella.

In an unrelated case, a Middlesex County Grand Jury last week indicted Gallello in connection with another holdup occurring in Newton last Feb. 23.

That case is still pending.

Gallello was indicted on a single charge of armed robbery in connection with the holdup of the Watertown Cleaners Company, of Newton.

The case is being prosecuted by Assistant District Attorney Marian Ryan.

When learning to walk, an infant may actually be better off in leather-soled shoes from Stride Rite* than in sneakers. Because for one thing, the shoes have soft, flexible soles that are much less likely to 'catch' on rugs or tile. So they're less likely to cause a forward fall.* The sneakers come later, after a proper and healthy gait has been developed.

NEWTON — Newton Boy Scout members of the Norumbega Boy Scout Council, Newton recently attended the 11th National Boy Scouts Jamboree held at Fort A. P. Hill in Bowling Green, Va. All the boys are members of various boy scout troops in the Newton area.

The boys spent over a week as part of Troop 452 at the National Jamboree and were part of 30,000 Boy Scouts from 50 states and 30 foreign nations that made up this tent city appears only every four years.

Working in scout patrols together, the boys participated in self-improvement activities such as confidence course, orienteering, rubber rafting, canoe salom and many other events that challenged their skills all week long.

NEWTON — John Apholt, Newton, recently attended the 11th National Boy Scout Jamboree held at Fort A.P. Hill in Bowling Green, Va. His second National Jamboree as a member of the Minute Man Boy Scout Council of Stoneham, Apholt was assistant senior patrol leader of Troop 505.

"It is something that occurs only every four years and because of age restrictions of boys between the ages of 12 and 18 it is rare that a boy such as myself gets the opportunity to attend two jamborees," Apholt said.

MASSACHUSETTS CRIME WATCH

THE STUDENT BODY CLUB

and as a public service

THE I-DENT-A-KID PROGRAM

Before your child returns to school this fall, a back-to-school physical is the best way to assure your son or daughter is healthy and prepared for a wonderful school year. Our caring staff will see to necessary immunizations and assist you with the paperwork many districts require. Our highly qualified physician will thoroughly examine your child in the comforting family doctor manner you've come to expect from HealthStop.

And as a community service, HealthStop and the Massachusetts Crime Watch arm of The Criminal Justice Training Council are making the "I-Dent-A-Kid" program available to concerned parents in all HealthStop locations. Education materials for parents, Child Safety coloring books, a free photograph of your child, as well as an official "I-Dent-A-Kid" card are all available on Saturdays and Sundays in each HealthStop office. This invaluable material will explain how every parent can best safeguard their children by teaching them precaution and safety in every facet of their daily activities. And by following the simple instructions outlined in the program, parents can rest assured they have the best information Law Enforcement Officials will need in locating a missing child. HealthStop will provide you with complete information on this important program – all at no charge and without obligation.

HealthStop – Today's doctor's office wants your child to stay healthy and safe this school year. The back to school physical is offered at a 15% reduction in normal charges and the "I-Dent-A-Kid" program materials (including a picture of your child) are free.

Physicals are available any time from 8:00 A.M. to 8:00 P.M. and while we welcome appointments for physicals, appointments are never necessary at HealthStop.

Photographs for the "I-Dent-A-Kid" program will be taken any time:
Saturday, Sunday – August 24 & 25
Saturday, Sunday, Monday – August 31, September 1 & 2
Saturday, Sunday – September 7 & 8

Chimneys require special care

By Steve Hurtado
Copley News Service

On a cold night in Knoxville, Tenn., Mary James, her son, daughter, son-in-law and two grandchildren sat near a cozy wood fire in their large home watching TV. Before the evening ended, the six had moved temporarily to the home of other relatives — their own house a smouldering pile of rubble after a fire.

A few weeks later on Staten Island, N.Y., Ludwin Anderson and his wife Daisey retired to their bedroom — checking first to make sure their furnace was set to supply sufficient warmth until morning. Ludwin died in his sleep that night and Daisey woke up the next morning at a nearby hospital — both victims of carbon monoxide poisoning.

The culprit in both tragedies — an improperly maintained chimney. Designed appropriately for your fuel heating appliance and treated properly, a chimney ensures the energy efficiency today's consumer demands. Given short shrift, a chimney can become a life-threatening problem.

There are three major potential problems home owners must address, according to Jean Beliveau of Z-Flex Inc., a manufacturer of stainless steel chimney liners that modify and upgrade flues. The potential problems are:

— Buildup of highly flammable creosote — tarlike condensation of unburnt wood gases — in chimneys. Creosote will appear in a chimney as a powdery substance, a liquid or tarry glaze. Sometimes the liquid seeps through the chimney causing exterior streaking.

— Cracks in chimney linings caused by their inability to expand quickly enough to accommodate temperature increases as fuel is burned. These cracks can allow burning embers or dangerous gases to back up into a home.

Telltale signs of deterioration include damp spots on the inside walls or areas near the chimney, water running out of debris at chimney base, flue gas odors in the furnace area, white powder or stains on outside bricks of chimney and loose mortar between chimney bricks.

To curb these chimney-related dangers and maintain efficiency of furnaces and stoves, Beliveau recommends a chimney-care program that includes:

— Installation of appropriate chimney lining and accessories.
— Proper fuel burning.

— Regular cleaning. Usually, installation of appropriate lining can halt chimney deterioration and ensure safe, efficient service of a flue for years.

Once you've equipped your chimney to operate safely and effectively, the problem becomes one of keeping it that way.

A flexible stainless steel chimney liner is snaked into place during rooftop installation.

Energy-saving fireplace designs

By Eric Jude
Copley News Service

Fire gives off warmth, so a fireplace will help heat a home, right? Not necessarily.

While watching a crackling blaze in the hearth may give a home owner a warm feeling inside, that may be the only warmth the fireplace offers.

"Fireplaces may be aesthetic, but they are not generally energy efficient. They pull as much as 80 percent of the warm air out of a room and up the chimney," according to Richard H. Cooper, energy manager for R.H. Reynolds Industries Inc.

Houses built 50 to 75 years ago were designed to take advantage of a centrally located fireplace with its solid brick, heat-retentive chimney reaching up several stories through the center of the house. Today, however, fireplaces are largely decorative, built into outside walls, with clay flues that prevent heat from penetrating the brick.

There are ways, however, to improve the efficiency of a fireplace, according to Cooper. Purchase and install a damper, if you don't already have one, to minimize heat loss when no fire is burning.

Purchase glass doors to surround the hearth. These allow a person to enjoy the fire while preventing the heat your furnace has provided from going up the chimney. The glass doors, however, will reduce the usable radiant heat from the fire.

One way to gain heat from a fireplace is to install a heat exchanger. This device essentially is a grate made of iron pipes that holds burning logs in the fireplace.

When a fire burns in a heat-exchanger grate, cold air gets sucked into pipe openings underneath the logs. It's then warmed by the fire, rises through the pipes and then is forced out into a room through top pipe openings. This device works best with fan-forced air.

Another way to save on energy costs is to build or install a heat-circulating fireplace instead of a traditional masonry fireplace.

According to a spokesman for Heatilator, a manufacturer of prefabricated fireplaces, these offer energy-saving features such as:

— Ducts that draw air from outside the home into the firebox to feed the fire without wasting heated room air.

Answers on appliance problems

By UPI-Popular Mechanics

Q. Help! I've lost a dear old friend. It's my 1946 Servel gas refrigerator, model No. UR-600A, serial No. 646105. It's been with me for years and now it's quit working. The flame burns, but it will not cool the refrigerator. Can this Servel be recharged? Is there anyone in the Houston area that repairs them?

A. Servel Co. was sold to Whirlpool Corp. way back in the 1950s. Whirlpool may have a limited supply of parts in stock for your refrigerator. Unfortunately, you'll have to pinpoint the malfunction before you can order any parts. The address is: Whirlpool Corp., 1900 Whirlpool Dr., LaPorte, Ind. 46350, Attention: Customer Service. Include the model number, serial numer and the type of gas you are using — LP or natural. Explain what parts you are looking for. They will check the stock and find out if the parts you need are still available.

As for having this antique serviced, or possibly getting a sealed system repaired, my only suggestion is to check your local phone directory under motor homes or travel trailer dealers. They use gas-absorption-type refrigerators in many of their vehicles. It's possible that they may be able to help you or know of someone who could.

Q. I own a Coldspot frostless side-by-side refrigerator freezer, model No. 1067630512, serial No. E33875005. My problem is that the defrost timer became noisy. Now it often sounds like a high-strung horse running on hard pavement.

I had a new timer installed by Sears and it wasn't long before the new timer started sounding just like the old one. Am I stuck with this noise or can the thundering hoofs be stilled?

A. I think so. Replacement timers are not usually noisy. The timer may have a defective part. I suggest that you get in touch with the Sears service people again and have them either replace this timer or fix it. Most likely, the part is still under warranty and this should cover the cost.

Q. I have an Amana side-by-side refrigerator-freezer, model No. SH22-1, serial No. H11466544. The refrigerator door seems to have warped and gone out of shape on the bottom on the left side. How do I repair this? All the door seals are good but at the bottom left they don't contact the door frame so they can't seal properly.

A. Sounds as if your door may need adjustment. The first thing to do is to open the refrigerator door and remove everything from the door shelves on the liner. Then make a careful check to see that there is nothing sticking out from the refrigerator itself and that there is no debris or other object springing the door open.

Next, roll back the door gasket. Loosen all the retaining screws around the door seal. Once these screws are loosened, the door will lose much of its rigidity. Now, shut the door and hand shape it to fit the face of the cabinet by pushing in on the door at all four corners. Then, open the door gently and tighten to screws in the corner that didn't fit before. Shut the door again gently to see that it has not changed shape. Reopen the door and tighten the rest of the screws.

Sometimes after aligning the door, the door gasket will no longer seal properly. If it does not rest tightly against the face where it seals, you may have to replace the gasket or shim it out so it does seal. Test for tightness by closing the door on a one-dollar bill and then pulling the bill through the crack; you should feel some drag.

The easiest repair method is to put something resilient behind the gasket to make it contact the cabinet. Try silicone caulk.

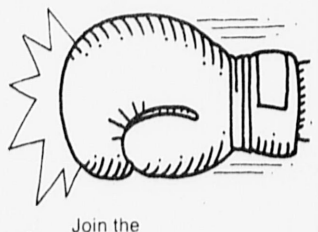

Q. We have a 1975 Hotpoint refrigerator with a top freezer, model No. 1GPFP702C, serial No. OV2264291. Whenever the compressor stops, we hear a sharp thudding noise. This noise first appeared about three months ago as a quiet thud which has gradually gotten louder. Now the refrigerator has started to rattle. We're afraid it might explode one of these days. Will it? And, what should we do to quiet it down?

A. There's no danger that your refrigerator might explode, but your thudding and rattling noises sound as if one of the internal suspension springs that mount the compressor may have broken. What you are hearing is the motor and pump assembly on its subframe hitting against the side of the compressor case that surrounds the whole compressor assembly. The only real cure is to have the compressor replaced.

Q. I have a Sears Kenmore solid-state portable dishwasher, model No. 58779-8710. It has an LED readout display with Power Miser. When I start the machine, all of the lights turn off and on and the Cancel-Drain light comes on. Can you suggest a solution?

A. June seems to be refrigerator month, so a dishwasher difficulty is a relief. Our source at Sears feels your problem may be the solid-state control board. Moisture getting to the board causes an erratic light display. He advises having a Sears technician make the repair at a Sears Service Center where they have the parts and the equipment to check out this relatively complex machine.

After two months of trying to find wholesome activities for those long, hot summer days, the School Department has announced schools will reopen on Sept. 5. Education, entertainment, babysitting and enlightenment will once again become the responsibility of school teachers and city administrators.

The schedule for this year's school openings and normal hours of operation is as follows:

Newton North High School: Ninth graders are to report at 8:15 a.m. on Thursday for their first day of classes, dismissal will be at 2:15 p.m. All other students must report the following day at 8:15 a.m. and will be released at 1:30 p.m. The weekly class schedule for students at North is 8:15 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. On Tuesdays and Thursdays, because of X Block, homeroom begins at 9:10 a.m. and classes end at 1:35 p.m., respectively.

Newton South High School: All ninth graders must be in homeroom by 8 a.m. on Thursday, dismissal will be at 1:40 p.m. All other students must report Friday and will follow the same time schedule as the previous day. The weekly schedule for students at South is Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday, 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. On Tuesdays and Fridays school starts at 8 a.m., but ends at 12:45 p.m. and 1:40 p.m., respectively.

Bigelow Junior High School: New students, who wish to register on Sept. 4 must be accompanied by a parent or guardian and should bring a birth certificate, transfer card, health records and transcripts from the school they previously attended. On Thursday, all students are to report to the school at 8:25 a.m., dismissal is at 2:45 p.m. Throughout the year, students will follow this time schedule on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays. On Wednesdays and Fridays, school begins at 8:25 a.m. and ends at 1:57 p.m.

Charles Brown Junior High School: Seventh graders and all new students are to report to the school at 8:45 a.m., dismissal is at 2:10 p.m. On Friday, all students are to be in homeroom by 8:45 a.m., dismissal is at 2:50 p.m. Friday's hours are Brown's normal hours of operation, except on Wednesdays when dismissal occurs at 2:10 p.m.

F. A. Day Junior High School: Seventh graders are to report to the cafeteria and will observe the school's normal hours of operation, 8:15 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Eighth graders are to report the following day. The only exception to normal class hours occurs Wednesdays when students are dismissed at 1:45 p.m.

Elementary schools: The city's 22 elementary schools follow the same schedule which will begin on Sept. 5 without exception. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays 8:45 a.m. to 3 p.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays 8:45 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Kindergartens: Like the elementary schools schedules, all kindergartens follow the same schedule — Monday thru Friday., 8:45 a.m. to 11:45 a.m. The only exception is the Pierce School's kindergarten which begins at 10:30 a.m. and ends at 1 p.m.

According to a spokesperson for the School Department, the first School Committee meeting will take place on Sept. 9 at 7:30 p.m. at Day Junior High School.

With the hope of making the new school year a little less hectic, The News Tribune will publish the city's school bus schedule on Thursday. School lunch menus for the first week of school will also be published Friday and will run every Friday thereafter.

Shari and Mark Deasy

Shari J. Kiley becomes bride of Mark P. Deasy

Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Kiley of Wallaston announce the marriage of their daughter, Shari J. Kiley, to Mark P. Deasy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick P. Deasy of Newton.

The wedding was held July 6 at Sacred Heart Chapel, North Quincy, with a reception at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

The bride graduated from North Quincy High School and Bridgewater State College. She is employed as contracting officer with the defense department.

The bridegroom graduated from Newton North High School and Boston State College. He is employed as a contract specialist at the department of defense also.

Alison J. Spelke

Alison Spelke of Newton marries Eric C. Glerum

Judith and Lee Spelke, 54 Temple St., West Newton, announce the wedding of their daughter, Alison J., to Eric C. Glerum of New York City. The bridegroom's parents are Nancy and Rolf Glerum of Portland, Oregon.

The wedding was held at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, Boston, on June 29 at 6 p.m. Mr. Golbert Avery officiated in the double ring non-sectarian ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by both Judith and Lee Spelke.

The bride's dress was made of candlelight white satin, with beading by Priscilla of Boston. She carried a bouquet of white and blue flowers.

The maid of honor was Jody McKenna, and bridesmaids were Lisa Dealy, Elizabeth Avery Mulkeen, Kathleen Fisher, Mary Cotrupi, Sarah Havens and Julie Ivers-Turpin, all friends of the bride.

The best man was Kirk Glerum, of Seattle, Wash., brother of the bridegroom, and ushers were Jon Spelke, of San Diego, Calif., brother of the bride; Chris Clark, of San Francisco, Calif., friend of the bridegroom; Louis Turpin, of New York, N.Y., friend of the bridegroom; Stuart Cohen, of Portland, Oregon, friend of the bridegroom; and Larry Corson, of New York City, N.Y., friend of the bridegroom.

Following the reception, which was held in the Grand Ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, the couple honeymooned at Little Dix Bay, Virgin Gorda. They planned to make New York City their home.

The bride is a 1976 graduate of Newton North High School and graduated in 1980 from the University of Vermont, Cum Laude/Phi Beta Kappa. Her occupation is in account management, advertising.

The bridegroom attended the University of California and the Columbia Business School, where he received a masters in business administration last year. His occupation is in marketing.

The bride and groom met in Garmisch, West Germany.

Priscilla A. Lepera weds Bruce Greene of Newton

Dr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Lepera of Natick, Mass., are happy to announce the marriage of their daughter, Priscilla Anne, to Bruce Alan Greene, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Greene, of Newton, on Aug. 11, 1985 in a civil ceremony with a reception following at the Sheraton Tara Hotel in Framingham, Mass.

Both bride and groom are graduates of Newton North High School. The bride is a graduate of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, and is presently employed at Kaiser Engineering in Los Angeles, Calif. The groom is a graduate of Cornell University in Ithaca, N. Y., and studied a year at the American Film Institute in Los Angeles, Calif. He is presently an independent cinematographer and Stedicam Photographer in Los Angeles.

The bride was attended by Kate Poverman of Chicago, Ill., and the groom was attended by Scott Broder of Connecticut. The couple honeymooned on Nantucket Island and returned to Los Angeles, Calif., where they will make their home.

The Day the Icehouse Burned

By John F. Marshall

PETER ZALE '85

In winters past, ice cutting operations kept Bulloughs Pond and Crystal Lake buzzing with the sounds of long saws and horse-drawn sleighs. Ice was stored in the icehouse, which was located between the eastern shore of Crystal Lake and Centre Street.

Young John Marshall, a seven-year-old boy born in tropical Burma, had a lot to learn about winter. He returned "home" in the spring of 1914 with his grandparents, veterans of 50 years of missionary work in Burma. They stayed at the "Old Homestead," in Newton Centre, the home of John's great-grandfather, Dr. Samuel Francis Smith, author of "My Country 'Tis of Thee," in Newton Centre.

John's grandfather had grown up in the "Old Homestead," and it was the only American home he had ever known. Every furlough of his 60 years in missionary work saw him return there.

His grandparents returned to Burma in the fall, before the winter struck, and John moved a block down the hill to the Home for Missionary Children. There, he was the youngest of 20 children.

The fire station was across the street from the Missionary Home. John remembered walks to a fire station to watch the daily practice during an earlier trip to America, when he was four. When the alarm rang, men slid down the pole from their quarters on the second floor. Stable doors flew open and the horses came from their stalls to stand under their harnesses, which were suspended from the ceiling. The pull of a cord dropped the harnesses onto the horses' backs. A quick buckling up, and the fire engine burst from the fire house in full gallop, the driver whipping the horses and the boilerman stoking the fire in the boiler so that smoke trailed behind as they clattered down the cobblestone streets.

That memory was rekindled now that John was living across the street from the fire house. When there was a real fire, the number of bells in the alarm were counted carefully to learn the location of the fire. After the alarm, the youngsters would start off at a run in order to beat the engine to the fire.

From the fire station, Centre Street ran up the hill past the playground. At the top, the "Old Homestead" was on the right, and, on the left, the Rice School for primary grades and the Mason School for the upper elementary grades. On the corner of Centre and Beacon Streets, in front of the Mason School, was a handsome horse trough. On the opposite corner was the First Baptist Church. A block further on was the Sacred Heart Catholic Church.

Crystal Lake was a lovely, symmetrical little lake surrounded by large comfortable homes on all sides, except where Centre Street skirted it. The lake had been known as "Baptist Pond" because of the Baptists who had been baptized in it. Half a century earlier, the ice was broken for the baptism of John's own grandfather. At the very edge of the lake, on Centre Street, stood a big, brick ice house that marred the residential character of the shore around the little lake.

Winter brought feverish activity on Crystal Lake. From the ice house, men went out on the solid ice with long, two-handled saws to cut huge blocks of ice, which were hauled over to the ice house by teams of horses.

> How could ice burn? Why didn't it melt and put out the fire? And all in a brick building too? These questions flickered up in his mind but were soon forgotten as he watched the awesome blaze.

What a wonder it was to John to see men and horses swarming over the pond - so solid in the winter. Week after week, the work went on and the ice, packed in sawdust, gradually filled the big brick building. There it lay, ready for the summer ice wagons to pick up for their delivery rounds.

Each home had an ice card in the window, which notified the ice man of the amount of ice needed — 25, 50, 75 or 100 pounds, depending on the position of the card in the window. Every ice wagon had its train of children ready to pounce on the chips of ice left over after the ice man had cut a block to the proper size and left the wagon to make a delivery.

When school started in the fall, John trudged up the hill to attend first grade in the Rice School. The older children went up one block to the Mason School, and the big boys and girls hiked off in the opposite direction to Newton High School. There were no school buses in those days.

During that fall, John learned about chestnuts when the boys in the Missionary Home took him into the nearby woods to gather chestnuts. He had a laundry bag his mother had made him and the boys persuaded him it would be ideal to carry home the prickly burrs. It was. But that was the end of its use as a laundry bag, because the needle-like burrs stuck in the cloth of the bag, never to come out except when imbedded in a little undershort or drawers.

Before Christmas, John had his eighth birthday. He awoke early in the morning before the sun was up. There, on a table beside his bed, was a strange thing — long and low, and looking like a ladder in the half light. Gradually, it took shape as dawn turned to morning and John's heart lept with excitement as he recognized a sled.

It was a real "Flexible Flyer." It brought a new meaning to the word "fun" when John took it coasting in the playground. He even rode it down the steep hill behind the tennis courts, backward! Looking back to that time 70 years ago, John is still amazed at his courage.

As the snow came, the streets were rolled down to make it easier for the horses to pull sleighs and pungs over the streets. Pungs were wagons with runners replacing the wheels. John learned to stand on the runners and slide along the street on the hard-packed snow.

One day in the spring, there was a frantic ringing of the fire bell at the station. Excitedly the word passed: "The ice house is on fire!" The Missionary Home emptied of children in no time as everyone, big and small, rushed up the hill to the fire. John had seen a jungle fire in the dry season in Burma, but that was a sputtering spark compared to this massive blaze.

How could ice burn? Why didn't it melt and put out the fire? And all in a brick building too? These questions flickered up in his mind but were soon forgotten as he watched the awesome blaze.

The intense heat kept eveyone at a distance across Centre Street. Bursts of flames soared into the sky to be followed by white clouds of steam. Gradually, the flames were brought under control and the fire burned itself out, leaving the handsome big building in rubble, never to be rebuilt.

All this was in the winter of 1914-1915. Of course, Newton Centre is changed today. John went back a few years ago to attend the bicentennial celebration at the First Baptist Church, where his great-grandfather had preached. Sacred Heart Catholic Church is still up the street and the fire house is still at the bottom of the hill. Sleek fire trucks have replaced the galloping horses and smoking engines.

The Missionary Home has given way to a filling station. The "Old Homestead" had a fire of its own, and only a stone marks the place where the author of "America" lived. The streetcars have long since given way to buses, and the railroad tracks now carry MBTA commmuting trains.

Also, the ice business is gone. No swarms on Crystal Lake to cut ice and store it for the summer. There is no iceman with his wagon and following train of children. Every ice card in the window is replaced by a refigerator in the kitchen.

But John will never forget: THE DAY THE ICE HOUSE BURNED.

("In a nostalgic moment, I wrote a piece about my first winter in this country," was the note John F. Marshall attached to the above report. Marshall is now a resident of Silver Spring, Maryland.)

Library services for disabled

NEWTON — "Resources for the disabled are included in the Newton Free Library's Social Services," says Barbara Moskow, the Newton Free Library's Social Services Librarian.

The resources at the Main Library offer help to those with special needs and include a Talas magnifier, braillers, large print and braille books, magazines, games, talking books, and an Ednalight, a magnifier with lights on a stand.

One of the library's frequently used resources is a TTY — a telephone for the deaf. Other resources include a talking machine, a talking book deposit collect on loan from the Perkins Regional Library, the "New York Times Large Type Weekly" on tape and service to shut-ins. Many library materials can be delivered to patrons who live in Newton but are unable to leave their homes.

Moskow also has information about the library's Kurzweil Reading Machine, a supplementary reading device, which provides access to printed and braille materials. The machine contains a scanner which transmits printed matter to the computer which, in turn, changes the images into sound.

The visually impaired can participate in the Bridge Club, attend book reviews, poetry readings, lectures and other special events sponsored by the library.

For further information call the library at 552-7145. The Main Library is open Monday through Thursday 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Friday 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Sat. 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; closed Sun. through Sept. 15; thereafter open Sat. 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sun. 1 to 4 p.m.

'Trusting' with gifts is easier on your taxes

MONEY TALK$

Neville Frankel is Vice President of Financial Planning Associates Inc., a Boston and New York affiliate of Confidential Planning Network, an international network of more than 120 financial planning firms. Direct questions to Frankel, care of this publication.

Dear Mr. Frankel:

In responding to a recent question regarding gifting, you suggested that the writer establish a trust and fund it with her silver spoon collection. You indicated that this would enable her to make an eventual gift of the spoons to her children — and that it would also remove the spoons from her estate. How can you establish a trust, get the benefits therefrom, and not have it as a part of your estate? It's a little like having your cake and eating it, too.

C.L.
Newton

Dear C.L.:

Those who want to have their cake and eat it too are frowned upon by tax-collectors. However, in some situations, you can make a compromise that's almost as good.

You might follow the example of the writer in question, and place your silver spoon collection in an irrevocable trust, with your children as beneficiaries. You would, in the eyes of the law, have given up control of the collection. And whether or not you have control of an asset is important in determining whether or not it is a part of your estaste.

Assume for a moment that, along with the silver spoon collection, you funded the trust with shares of stock in a silver mine. The trust agreement might specify that although you no longer own the shares, you are entitled, for your lifetime, to receive the dividend income they generate.

In the same way, the agreement might also entitle you to some of the benefits of the spoon collection during your life — for example, allow you to keep them on display in the sunroom, or permit them to be used in the consumption of certain low-calorie desserts.

This kind of compromise allows you to give the spoons away when you're in the next world — but it also allows you to use them to eat your cake while you're still in this one. In short: the best of both worlds.

Dear Mr. Frankel:

I often read about the importance of building a "realistic" inflation figure into any long-range financial plans. Can you explain why this is so important?

B.F.
Newton

Dear B.F.:

Many people hear the phrase "financial plan" and envision something cast in stone; something unchangeable. That's not the case at all. There are so many unknowns that in order to plan with some degree of safety, we need to build a number of conservative assumptions into any plan.

If you were planning for retirement in 25 years, you would want to take all possible steps to ensure that you had enough money to live on at that time. In making the calculation, you would look at the income you feel you would need, and you would also look at what money will be worth in 25 years.

For example, if you use a "reasonable" inflation figure of 6 percent, you discover that in 25 years you will need over $45,000 to purchase what $10,000 could buy today. But if your $10,000 is invested at 5.5 percent, it will only have grown to $40,000, and in real terms, you will have lost money.

By factoring a reasonable inflation figure into his calculations, your financial planner can provide you with some idea of what income you will require in tomorrow's dollars. And it will also give you an idea of how much you need to invest each month for the next 25 years in order to adequately provide for yourself.

(Occasionally in the newspaper business, stories and articles are cut to fit limited space. Generally, whatever is cut is lopped off the back end. What follows is the conclusion to "Choosing Financial Tools," which failed to appear last week.)

"Answer me this," I said. "Assume you wanted to write a book but couldn't decide on a subject. Would you go through the dictionary looking for words that might be helpful?"

Precisely," I said. "But you expect me to tell you which financial tools would be helpful to you — without giving me any information about the job you want them to do."

He was silent for a moment, and then withdrew his appointment book from his jacket pocket. "Next Wednesday at ten?" he asked.

I nodded, and he rose to leave. "By the way," he asked, "do you have a large garbage bag I could use?"

Entertainment

'Bus Stop' will show at Center

NEWTON — The New Repertory Project, theatre-in-residence at the Newton Arts Center, will present "Bus Stop" by Williams Inge, one of America's foremost playwrights. Performances at the center, 61 Washington Park, Newtonville, are on Friday and Saturday evenings at 8 p.m. and Sunday's at 2 and 7 p.m. from Sept. 13 to Oct. 6 (no evening performance on Sept. 22).

Inge wrote about the midwest with affection and humor in such plays as "Picnic" and "Come Back Little Sheba." A Broadway hit of the '50s, "Bus Stop" has become an American classic. The play, which is both comic and touching, concerns a busload of travelers stranded by a snowstorm in a cozy cafe in the middle of Kansas.

Bo Decker, a proud young cowboy, doggedly pursues the affections of Cherie, a "chanteuse." Dr. Lymon, a dissipated scholar "merrily going to pot" woes the impressionable waitress Elma Duckworth. Through the stormy night the travelers open their hearts to one another. When the sun rises, each has grown in his understanding of love. This tender-hearted comedy was made into a popular movie starring Marilyn Monroe.

Founded by a group of Boston-based theatre professionals, the New Repertory Project is beginning is second season as theatre-in-residence at the Newton Arts Center. Last year, New Rep presented three productions including Lanford Wilson's "The Mound Builders" and George Bernard Shaw's "Misalliance."

The company is dedicated to building a professionl theatre center in Newton which offers productions, classes and special events. New Rep is also committed to developing a core group of repertory actors working intensively together over time, refining their craft to a degree not possible in most commercial theatre.

Unveiling Auerbach is Sept. 20

NEWTON — Boston will unveil a monument to one of its legendary sports heros on Friday, Sept. 20. Red Auerbach, president of the Boston Celtics, will be honored in a way no other sports figure has been honored in the history of the city. A life-size bronze sculpture created by Newton resident Lloyd Lillie, will be put in place and dedicated at Faneuil Hall Marketplace at 6:30 p.m. with outdoor entertainment.

The sculpture is a gift to the city from the Red Auerbach Fund. It will be the second sculpture made by Lillie in the market area. Bostonians are familiar with Lillie's 1980 creation of James Michael Curley.

Established in 1984, the Red Auerbach Fund, a project of the Boston Foundation, has raised over $650,000 for the benefit of youth development programs in Boston and throughout the region. Also slated for announcement on Sept. 20 are the first recipients of funds from the endowment.

Missing children documentary to air on cable

NEWTON — Continental Cable will present "Teach Your Children Well," a documentary hosted by news anchor Julie Emry that explores the problem of missing, abducted and exploited children.

Following the show, Continental's Community Channels in the Eastern Massachusetts District will present a localized look at what each community is doing to keep children, safe, and how citizens can get involved on the "Kidsafe Forum."

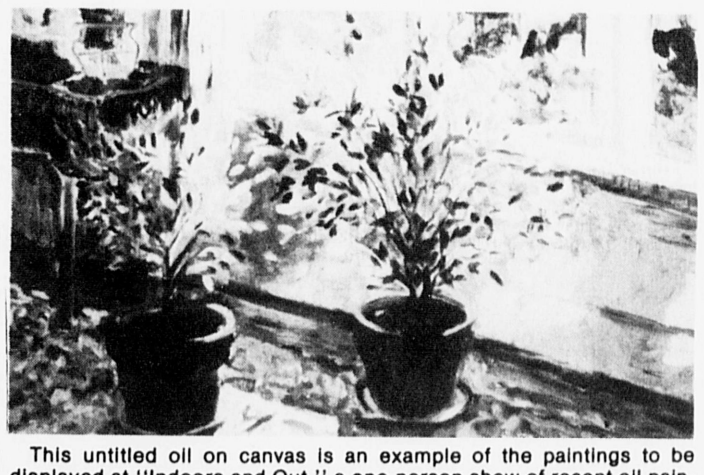

Commented producer Jane McClary-Oakley, "This is a crucial program for parents of the eighties who have been bombarded with guilt and scare tactics. 'Teach Your Children Well' is the first program that treats the issue of missing children with good, old-fashioned common sense.

Continental has coproduced "Teach Your Children Well" as the main feature of its "Kidsafe Programming." Participating Eastern Massachusetts Systems are: Wellesley, Beverly, Hamilton and Wenham. The Kidsafe Program will continue through Sept. 30.

The broadcasts will take place on: Wednesday, Aug. 21, 8 to 9 p.m.; Thursday, Aug. 22, 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.; Monday, Aug. 26, 8:30 to 9:30 p.m.; Wednesday Aug. 28, 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.; and Thursday Aug. 29, 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Open house at arts center

NEWTON — Newton Arts Center's Open House and Student Exhibition on Sunday, Sept. 8 from 2 to 4 p.m. Meet the NAC faculty, register for the fall semester, and view sculpture, paintings, drawings and pottery by former and current NAC students. Refreshments will be served. Newton Arts Center, 61 Washington Park, Newton, 964-3424.

This untitled oil on canvas is an example of the paintings to be displayed at "Indoors and Out," a one-person show of recent oil paintings by Pat Fouraker, opening at the Chapel Gallery Sept. 5.

'Indoors and Out' at Gallery

NEWTON — "Indoors and Out," a one-person show of recent oil paintings by Pat Fouraker, will open at Chapel Gallery on Sept. 5. A reception for the artist will be held on Sunday, Sept. 8, from 3 to 6 p.m. and is open to the public. The show will run through Sept. 29.

Chapel Gallery, now beginning its fourth season, shows large scale innovative work by Boston area artists.

Chapel Gallery is located in the former Youth Chapel of the Second Church in Newton at 60 Highland St., West Newton. It is one block south of Washington Street (route 16) and three blocks east of the West Newton exit (exit 16) of the Massachusetts Turnpike extension.

Admission and parking are free. Open Thursday through Sunday 1 to 4 p.m. in conjunction with events at the church and by appointment. For further information, call 332-7782 or 244-4039.

Library has magnifiers

NEWTON — The Newton Free Library, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner, lends Talas Grant Magnifiers to library patrons who have visual impairments.

The magnifier, in the form of a large lightweight disc, is suspended from the user's neck, freeing the user's hands to hold a book, sew or write. The magnifiers can be borrowed from the Main Library for three weeks, on a first-come, first-served basis.

Other materials available in the Social Services Center include books and magazines in braille and in large print; talking books and cassette tapes, games, a Perkins Brailler; the Kurzweil machine, a talking book machine which translates print into audio, and much more.

For more information call Barbara Moskow, the Newton Free Library's Social Services Librarian, 552-7145.

The Library will be closed Saturday, Aug. 31, and Monday, Sept. 2, Labor Day.

An Auburndale caddie reunion --all Doughertys

By Tom Murphy
Senior Editor

When the Dougherty brothers of Auburndale get together, there are usually enough of them to stage a family tournament.

All nine of the brothers caddied at the Woodland Golf Club, some of them assistant caddymasters at one time or another. Dominic, 41, is the oldest and he has been the supervisor of caddies at the Washington Street course since 1965.

There are also six Dougherty sisters who might have toted bags also if it had been the thing to do, as is the case now.

All 15 are the children of Dominic, an industrial engineer, and Joan d'Arc (Gillen) Dougherty, who are hale and hearty in their late 60's. The spacious Dougherty dwelling, with seven bedrooms, is at 31 Newell Street, close by Auburndale Square. It's a good walk to Woodland, but not the kind of stroll that would bother this clan.

Woodland, home of three national amateur champions, might have another unsurpassed record in the Dougherty experience. Their combined service to succeeding generations of members covers a span of 32 years.

Dominic Dougherty

When Dom took charge in 1965, Woodland had more than 100 caddies. That wwas when a player required a doctor's certificate to use a golf cart. Restrictions were soon lifted to permit general use of the carts. "Even so," syas Dom, "there was always a Dougherty, or two or three, around for a tour of duty with those who preferred all-out exercise."

An affluent society and the greatly limitted opportunity for doing a loop cut into caddie ranks. Today, Woodland counts itself fortunate to have about 30 boys on a weekend. All of the Dougherty lads have gone on to a wide range of careers, motivated without doubt by what rubbed off from the caddie experience.

They are also scattered throughout the land, so a family wedding is usually the good excuse for a club-swinging reunion. Last week seven of the brothers got together for rounds at Wayland C.C. and Brook Meadow, joined by the girl friend of the youngest.

Terry couldn't make it because he was on his honeymoon in Ireland. Dennis didn't play, either. He was back home in Charlottesville, Va., where his wife is expecting a baby. Woodland duties kept Dom away from the Wayland visit, but he was the leader of the band at Brook Meadow. His foursome took all the marbles.

Present were three lawyers to settle any legal disputes. Here's the lineup in order of birth chronology:

Dom is a teacher at the Chariho High School in Charlestown, R.I., a bachelor still in residence at the Auburndale homestead. Patrick, who lives in Waltham, is a food supervisor with Amtrak. Timothy is an IBM analyst residing in White Plains, N.Y.

The three lawyers are Joseph, a specialist in codification of laws, Charlottesville, Va.; Michael, Apple Valley, Minnesota, a suburb of Minneapolis, and John, whose practice is in Chicago.

Richard, the youngest at 25, is a University of Dallas candidate for a PhD. in Political Philosophy. It was his young lady friend, Julie Kuefler, a teacher at St. Mary's in Kansas, who filled in for the golf. They met while students in Dallas.

Winners at Brook Meadow with Dom were Tim, Joe and John. Low gross went to Richard with an 82, but the conversation was better than the golf otherwise.

Still another Dougherty family record of distinction linked directly to Woodland has been the choice of eight of the nine brothers as Ouimet Caddie Scholarship recipients. The ninth, Patrick, qualified but did not need the assistance because he received a Boston State scholarship as a Vietnam veteran.

Just to keep the social caldendar straight, Terry's wedding took place at St. Ann's in Neponset to Rosemary Columbo, with a reception at Florian Hall in Roxbury. A subsequent family cookout in Auburndale had to be a well-attended affair, too, with 30 grandchildren on hand.

And a footnote to Woodland history. Two of the grandchildren, Patrick's son Chris and Mary's son Jude, have joined the caddie ranks.

Troubadour rules International

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

For the third time in the International League's championship series, one team got out to a big lead. For the first time, it held on to it.

As a result, Troubadour hauled down its second consecutive title, thanks to a 16-3 victory over the Boys' Club at Burke Field on Thursday, giving the winners the series, two games to one.

Considering the comebacks that had gone on in the previous two games, a large portion of the credit for the victory should go to Troubadour hurler Mark Loughlin.

The loser in relief in Tuesday's opener, Loughlin came back with five strong innings in the clincher, scattering seven hits and allowing three runs.

By the time the Boys' Club cracked the scoreboard, the Troubadour offense had raced out to a 6-0 lead.

And by the time Loughlin turned the reins over to Peter Hinterregger, it was 14-3 and the Clubbies were thinking about next year.

"Mark has pitched well every time out this year," praised Troubadour coach Joe Connors.

Meanwhile, the Boys' Club was having no such luck with its pitching. Troubadour scored in every inning but the seventh, and posted six in the fifth to put the game out of reach. Seven different hitters accounted for the 13 Troubadour safeties, with Judd Levine leading the way.

Levine roped three hits in three tries, including a two-run triple, and finished with five runs batted in. P.J. O'Toole, the hero in Game Two with a game-winning grand slam, also had a trio of safeties.

Not all of the Troubadour runs came unaided. The Boys' Club made six errors and the pitching chipped in 10 walks. Three of the latter came to the first five hitters in the game, putting Troubadour up, 1-0, in that span.

Steve Fontano came on to relieve starter George Haggie and was greated with a Levine sacrifice fly to make it 2-0. An infield hit by Hinterregger made it 3-0 before the Boys' Club had a chance to hit.

The Clubbies got a preview of what kind of night it was going to be in their half of the first. Leadoff man Joe DeNucci, with his third straight three-hit game, singled to center to start things off. He stole his way around to third, but that's where he stayed as Loughlin set down the next three hitters in order.

A Craig Chudnow single, a bunt, a grounder and an error made it 4-0 in the second, and Troubadour came up with two more in the third on three hits. The latter frame included RBI singles by Chudnow and Loughlin.

The Boys' Club finally got untracked in the bottom half, bunching four hits together for three runs.

As he was the whole series, DeNucci was catalyst, with an infield hit. After two were out, Mark Maiocca pulled a hit to right to drive in DeNucci. A walk and a Fontano single followed, setting the table for Jay Cappello, another clutch figure for the Clubbies during the series. He came through again with a line shot to left for two runs.

That was the sum total of the Club offense for the day, however. DeNucci's third single was the only hit the rest of the way, as Loughlin and Hinterregger combined to slam the door.

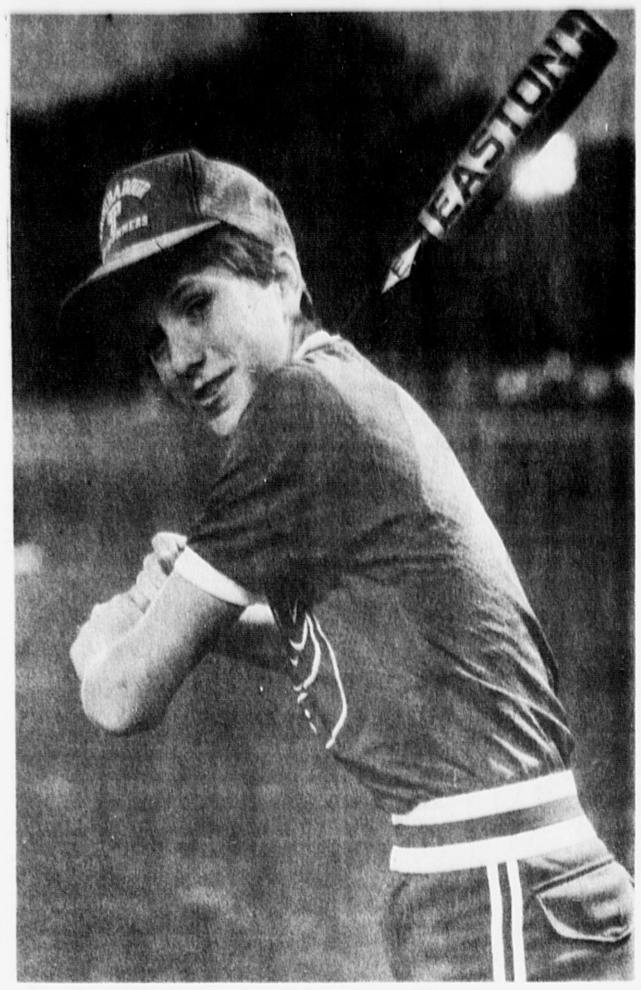

Meanwhile, Levine's three-bagger made it 8-3 in the fourth, but the clincher was the fifth, when Troubadour scored six times on three hits. The frame included three Club errors and two walks.

The key hits were RBI singles by Craig McGary and Levine.

From that point on, it was just a matter of waiting for the trophy presentation. The Boys' Club tried every defensive combination possible, but Troubadour just kept scoring.

"We played good, steady defense," said Connors. "We also had two tough series before this, which I think helped us."

The coach went on to praise Levine ("he's been hitting well all year"), Hinterregger ("throwing strikes"), catcher Chris Scalia ("a great defensive series") and O'Toole ("great defense and some clutch hits").

Dual County softball all-stars

3 Newton South players chosen

With talent comes first place, and visa-versa. And so when the Dual County League Softball All-Stars were selected earlier this summer, it was no surprise that first-place Acton-Boxboro headed the team with five all-star nominations.

Locally, Newton South High, coming off a 12-8 tournament year, put three players on the list, two of them underclassmen. Junior Katrina Antonellis and sophomore Dede Theodore will both be back next season in Lion uniforms, while senior Wendy Kessleman graduates with the satisfaction of being named one of the top players in the league.

Boston Latin named four players to the all-star team, while three teams (including South) put three girls on the squad. Lincoln-Sudbury and Wayland were represented by two girls each.

Nancy Prior, a third baseman from Boston Latin, copped the league's MVP award. According to Newton South Coach Larry Caranfa, Prior was both a standout scholar and athlete.

The Newton South Stars:

Katrina Antonellis — A three year starter, Antonellis has become a permanent fixture in Newton South softball history. It would be one thing if the senior-to-be were just another softball player, but Antonellis shines on the diamond for the Lions.

She also shines on the basketball court and will drop home her 1,000 career point sometime in the first quarter of next fall's opener.

Caranfa had the pleasure of breaking into the Dual County League with a shortstop like Antonellis, and the rookie skipper is excited about having her back for one final swing through the DCL.

"She'll repeat as a captain next year," said the coach. "She is a real team leader, more by example than anything."

Antonellis batted .350 in the first half of the softball season, then finished with a .510 average in her final 10 games. On defense, the all-star as unbelievable range, sometime wandering into the outfield to shag down stray pop ups. Her strong arm makes her a valuable assest in the hole for Newton.

Dede Theodore — As a sophomore, Dede Theodore has proven herself as a definite all-star in the DCL. The full-time catcher led the league in batting average through the first half of the season, hitting .560, before tailing off towards the end of the year. She still finished the season with a team-high .466 average, tied with fellow all-star Wendy Keselman.

Theodore belted six home runs, a pair of triples, and five doubles to stake her claim as a power hitter.

Wendy Keselman — As South's number-three hitter, Wendy Keselman was both a table-setter and a table-clearer. The outfielder tied Theodore for the team-high in batting average, .466, and hit three home runs.

She also scored 28 runs, using her swift bat and a sharp eye to get on base. Keselman walked 13 times.

The list:

Recreation swimmers finish 2nd in Regionals

Ten records were set as the Newton Recreation Swim Team captured second place in the "A" Regionals to conclude its season. The Newton team finished with an 11-1 mark to annex the dual meet trophy.

Individual record times were posted by Steven Beal in the breaststroke and backstroke events in the 9 & 10 Boys competition, Michael Beal in the 11 & 12 boys' breaststroke and Kenny Goulston in the 15-18 boys' breaststroke.

In the 13-14 age bracket, Jennifer Hagar set a new record in the breaststroke and Scott Stover established a new mark in the butterfly.

Miller's hit gives Troubadour title

A clutch single by Kevin Miller produced the tie-breaking run in the top of the eighth inning as Troubadour shaded the Heshal Club, 6-4, Wednesday night at Albemarle Field and went two-up in the best-of-five Newton Men's B Softball League championship series.

Troubadour posted a 3-1 win in the series opener. The third game will be played tonight, 6 p.m., at Cabot Park.

In Wednesday's contest, Troubadour had to come from behind in the seventh to push the game into extra innings. With one out, Sandy Moore tripled and scored the tying run on a sacrifice fly to right field by pinch-hitter Jim Connors.

Bobby Goodfellow drew a base on balls as the leadoff batter in the eighth. He was wild pitched to second, then scored the go-ahead run on Miller's one-baser to center. Miller advanced on a throwing error and scored the insurance run on a single by Darryl Lewis.

Righthander Jim Hastings was the winning pitcher, spcing seven hits while going the distance. Troubadour third baseman Dave Prince laced a solo homer to left-center in the third inning.

Heshal Club shortstop John DiPietro walloped a homer and DH Al Grodnitzky had a pair of doubles. The summary:

TROUBADOUR(6)-Nolan 3-1, Prince 2-1, Goodfellow 3-1, Miller 4-2, Lewis 4-1, McGrath 3-0, Greenwood 4-0, Moore 3-1, Loree 1-0, Pappas 1-0, Connors 0-0, Hastings 0-0. Tot. 28-7.

HESHAL CLUB(4)-Trudeau 3-0, Brownstein 4-0, DiPietro 4-1, Reid 4-1, Role 3-1, Grodnitzky 4-2, Weeman 3-1, Aronson 3-0, Davis 3-1, Keohane 0-0. Tot. 31-7.

Score by innings:

Troubadour 201 000 12-6-7

1985 Election Guide

Incumbents running for Ward 3 election

Richard Bullwinkle

Bullwinkle eyes 7th term as alderman

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Ward 3 Alderman Richard J. Bullwinkle is heading for a seventh term on the Board of Aldermen by virtue of his uncontested status in this election.

During the last term, the 57-year-old Bullwinkle chaired the aldermanic Ward Lines Committee last term and is currently directing the efforts of the ad hoc Zoning Review Committee.

Bullwinkle, who works for Raytheon, is also president of the Holy Name Society at St. Bernard's Church and a member of the Ward 3 Democratic Committee.

He lives at 15 Lindbergh Ave., West Newton, with his wife, Betty (Coletti). The Bullwinkles have two sons, Richard, 27, and Brian, 21, and two daughters, Diane, 30, and Janice, 24.

Q: How do you feel about your uncontested status?

A: I personally would rather see a campaign in every seat. At least then the issues are tested, it puts you on your mettle. It's easy to pat yourself on the back and say you're doing so well that nobody wants to run. I think that's baloney. I enjoy campaigning. I don't mind talking to people or knocking on doors.

Q: What accomplishment are you most proud of during the last term?

A: Generally, in West Newton, there hasn't been any major thing I can point to. I guess it would be representing the people that put me there, if I do that, I know I'm doing the job.

Q: What one goal do you have for the upcoming term?

A: One of the things I think we have to address is that we are becoming a city of 'yuppies.' We're not taking care of the low to middle class. The young couples need some place to buy a home. We've got to do something about that. The community is becoming one of the very rich or low income and there have never been any spots for the people in between.

Q: Should aldermen and School Committee members be paid for their work and, if so, how much?

A: I don't really think we should get paid or have benefits. There should be some sort of expense check. Many of us give up overtime pay at work or have to hire babysitters. Some sort of legitimate stipends should be established. It's not that I don't think people are worth it. I think the city is still somewhat blessed by the age of volunteerism.

Q: Do you think the city needs a moratorium on commercial development until the zoning laws are revised?

A: I voted for that, but it was for six months and conditioned on not taking jobs away from union members. I think the talk about a moratorium has caused a feeding frenzy on any open hole developers can find. What has to be looked at is the quality of life. People here have to decide what it is and how it will remain.

Q: Does the city need a new library and, if so, where do you think it should be located?

A: The people in this city were asked for a vote on overriding Proposition 2½ for a library and, at that moment, they chose not to override. That can't be ignored. I suspect that we need a better facility than we have now, but I'm not sure whether it should be a brand new building, and I'm not sure we should go with Homer/Walnut. I think the members of the Main Library Facility Committee ought to be out selling the idea to the people. I think the idea can be sold. I also want to know what the mayor's plan is.

School chair 'responsive' to residents

By John Moroney
Staff Writer

NEWTON — School Committee Chairman Leonard J. Gentile has his work cut out for him. A resident of 124 Adams Avenue, Gentile is running unopposed for the Ward 3 School Committee seat.

A native of Garden City and product of its school system, Gentile, 32, is seeking re election to a third School Committee term. An alumni of the University of Maine at Orno where he earned a bachelor's degree in history and education, Gentile is unsure whether he will submit his name as a contender for the committee's chairmanship after the November elections.

Gentile, an aide for Rep. Joseph DeNucci, believes the major goal for the School Committee when it reconvenes in September is "to achieve a contract settlement with the staff as early on in the school year as possible."

A one-time football, baseball, basketball coach and history teacher for the city, Gentile is building his campaign around his two-year record — the second of which he served as chairman for the committee.

"I've done my best to be responsive to the community," Gentile said. "I've worked to try and balance the needs of the different constituencies that exist within the schools. I do what I feel is best for the schools as a whole."

On the subject of school closings, Gentile said "no one looks foward to the closing of any schools, a neighborhood school in particular. But in a school system where enrollment has dropped from a peak of 18,000 in 1967 to slightly over 10,000 this year, the closings of buildings are inevitable."

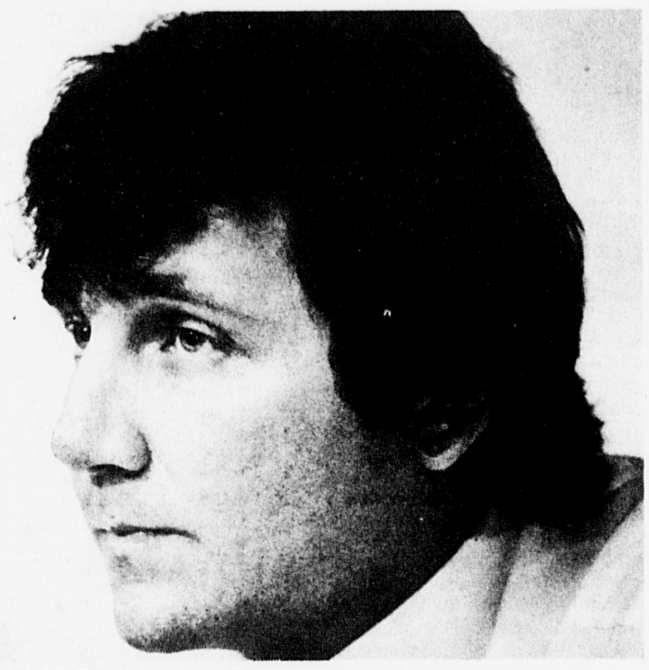

While the School Committee chairman supported closing two elementary schools last year, he is not in favor of closing an additional junior high school this year "for fear of reducing the overall capacity of the system."

Gentile said he supported the concept of paying School Committee members during the public hearing process last year and "will continue to do so.

"The time commitment necessary in addition to the expenses and the need to attract as many candidates as possible justifies a stipend for School Committee members."

The tenure of a school committee member is currently limited to four terms, but he feels "School Committee members and the voters are a better judge as to whether someone should continue to hold office.

"A person's responsiveness, dedication and hardwork in public service is in no way connected to the length of service," Gentile said.

Aquino was 'man for others'

By John Moroney
Staff Writer

Your sacrifices today may be formidable, but remember that when justice and freedom emerge triumphant, liberty's rewards are priceless.

— Benigno S. Aquino, Jr.

CHESTNUT HILL — The altar was prepared at the entrance of his office door, exposing a desk he used during three years of self-imposed exile, and a blood-stained white suit.

"Love is the sacrifice of our lives," Rev. Esteban Sescon of the Holy Name Church in West Roxbury said. "Ninoy is love."

On the second anniversary of Benigno Aquino's death, about 50 friends gathered for a memorial Mass at the home of the late-Filipino senator, who was gunned down Aug. 21, 1983 at the Manila International Airport.

"The blood of Ninoy Aquino was, is and will be the seed of justice for peace and freedom in the Philippine Islands," Sescon said. "He was called by God to be a man for others."

To the right of the altar was a smiling portrait of Aquino which left those who saw it with the impression that he was extremely pleased.

In the crowd were two former colleagues of Aquino's, Senators Ernesto M. Maceda and Raul Manglapus of the Philippine Senate, which was disbanded when President Ferdinand Marcos came to power. The only blood relative of Aquino's present was Sasha Aquino Lichauco.

After the Mass was over, one of the senators spoke of his love for Aquino while the other talked of Ninoy and his family's desire to see a democracy established in the Philippines.

"Many years will have to pass before I can tell you all the things I saw in Ninoy," Maceda said.

To Maceda, Aquino was a practical joker and early riser who would "wake people up at four in the morning" by calling their homes.

"He also loved his dogs," Maceda said. "They were given to him by a member of the Japanese senate and, even in heavy winter storms, he would go out to the garage to make sure they were all right.

According to Maceda, Aquino loved Boston and the rolling hills of Commonwealth Avenue. If it wasn't for his political commitment to the Filipinos, he added, he probably would have stayed forever.

"After he had been here a year, he told me that he 'had found his paradise,'" Maceda said.

Now a lawyer in New York, Maceda's favorite story about Aquino was one which even the late senator never denied. When Aquino was governor of a Philippine providence, a young girl, about 13 or 14 years of age, was raped. "He went after the rapist and shot him in the crotch," Maceda said.

But he was not a violent man, Maceda added. Whenever there was talk of assassinating President Ferdinand Marcos or a member of his dictatorship, Aquino would always "quash the plans," Maceda added.

Senator Manglapus, who was in Europe when he heard Aquino had been murdered, praised Aquino's family for continuing to carry the torch of freedom and justice in the Philippine Islands.

"We should be thankful for the flesh and blood he has left behind," Manglapus said. "All members of the family have stepped into a void left by Ninoy."

Manglapus gave special praise to Corazon Aquino, Ninoy's widow, for her role in forcing free elections in the Philippines, regardless of the unfortunate outcome.

"It's as if Aldolph Hitler decided to hold elections while still controlling all of the government power.

"Nino's sacrifice has opened our eyes to what is happening in the Philippines," Manglapus said. "It's cowardliness. It's cowardliness."

A force, he said, which is more "fearful to face and even more difficult" to defend against, "but it can be done. It can be done."

The Benigno S. Aquino Memorial Foundation, located at the Commonwealth Avenue home, is one of the vehicles by which these goals might be accomplished. With sufficient public support, members of the foundation hope to support scholars and fellows in Philippine studies.

The foundation also intends to collect and catalogue Aquino's papers, making them available for study. It is hoped that the materials collected might become the nucleus for an Institute of Philippine studies.

"This foundation is going to get strong and perpetuate the principals that Ninoy died for," Mecades said.

FOXFIELD AT WESTWOOD

Rugged, yet elegant. Solid, but not overbearing, and the best new home in town. This balanced, nine room Colonial is brick faced with granite accents and offers four or five bedrooms with one skylighted, privately entered guest area with bath. A comfortable, spacious, fireplace living room is enhanced by dental moldings and lighted by a floor to ceiling glass bayed end wall. Formal wainscoted dining room with double french pocket doors provide uninterrupted view of familyroom's floor to ceiling stone fireplace. A country kitchen provides breakfast bay and access to roofed screened porch and adjacent sundeck. Set on just shy of its own one acre lot. This property shares common ownership of additional private woodland restricted to the recreational use of its owners.

Three and one half baths with hot tub in Master, four zone forced hot water heating system, two zoned air conditioning system, security and internal vacuum systems complete the interior. Underground lawn sprinkler system for shrubbery and sod lawn complete the exterior. $475,000

Mazda 626 lands on best car list

DETROIT (UPI) — Mazda may not want to fool with a good thing when it comes to its 626 coupe and sedan, lauded by the automotive press last year as an outstanding model in the highly competitive compact car market.

Named by Car & Driver magazine as one of its 10 Best Cars for 1984, the 1985 626 is available in either base or luxury trim as a two-door coupe, four-door sedan or five-door hatchback.

The base 2-door coupe is priced at $8,845; the base sedan at $8,495. The LX coupe starts at $10,595; the LX sedan at $10,245; and a five-door hatchback in LX trim only begins at $11,245. Major items in the LX package are cruise control, electric mirrors, AM-FM cassette stereo, and power steering, windows and door locks.

While the coupe's styling is clean of line and uses the aerodynamic "wedge" shape, the sedan disappears into the crowd of look-alike Japanese imports. Even the test model, a silver-colored Luxury Coupe, blends into the throng.

The model evaluated costs $13,043, excluding freight, but had the $1,145 electronic digital instrument panel package, which includes alloy wheels and wider tires. Although the digital readouts are legible at all times — and more colorful than the best video game — the standard instrumentation supplies just as much information.

On either side of the dash are rocker-type switches for lights and wipers, but they too are needlessly complicated. Some switches, warning lights and various electronic warning jingles complete the high-tech aura, but indicate that function still follows form.

The seats offer excellent support and a wide range of positions, but, again,their manual controls are confusing as one gropes for the proper lever or knob. Plenty of storage space, including little cupboards inside the armrests ($69 extra), air conditioner ($685) and an adjustable steering wheel, make the 626's interior a pleasant place to drive.

Driver visibility is excellent due to the thin window pillars. Although the hood slopes down and out of sight, one can easily see the trunk's edge, making parking easy.

The rear seats, cramped for adult passengers, fold down independently as in most small cars. The rear light and license panel is part of the trunk lid, providing easy access to the storage compartment. But unless the lid is opened fully, it may drop down, causing more annoyance than injury due to its thin steel and plastic assembly.

Bugging out

The final shipment of 3,145 Volkswagen 'Beetles' destined for Europe arrives at the West German port of Emden from Mexico. Nearly 50 years after it was introduced in Germany and set off on a record-breaking journey through automobile history, the 'Beetle' is being phased out.

Cold can't keep dead men down

SPITSBERGEN, Norway (UPI) — On this desolate archipelago bordering the polar ice pack, where neverending daylight swaps time with neverending dark, inhabitants endure polar bears and permafrost, and nature treats the dead as harshly as the living.

Tucked between the North Pole and Norway's North Cape, the islands consist of 24,324 square miles of tree-less, mountaineous terrain that is 60 percent glacier.

The 3,500 souls that do live here stay on the west coast, where a branch of the Gulf Stream makes temperatures tolerable — seldom dropping below minus 25 F.

Death can come cruelly in this arctic wilderness, either by polar bear or mine disaster, or icy drowning or loss on a glacier. But even death is not restful.

On Spitsbergen it is all but impossible to carve a grave in earth. Just two feet below the surface the soil is perpetually frozen and bodies placed in the softer ground above the permafrost tend to rise after a few years.

"The remains are pushed up by ice," said Carl Wendt, governor of the Norwegian territory. "Rainwater sinks into the soil in the summer, freezes in the winter and thus expands, laying bare the graves."

Wendt explained the chilling phenomenon during a landing at a 17th century grave site on a promontory overlooking the scenic Magdalenefjord that cuts into steep, sharp mountains near the northwestern tip of Spitsbergen.

Hundreds of British and Dutch whalers are believed buried on the promontory, which is part of a national park. A team of Norwegian and Danish archeologists last summer visited the grave site and brought with them skeletons for osteological tests.

During a landing on the promontory this year with the governor, guards with .44 Magnums kept a watch for polar bears, of which there are estimate 2,000 to 3,000 in this part of the world.

In the latest known death caused by a polar bear on Spitsbergen, an Austrian doctor was attacked on the shore opposite the whalers' burial mound in 1977. Slowly drifting to sea on an icefloe, the victim was eaten by the bear before the eyes of his expedition.

In 1982, a polar bear lumbered into the playground of a day care center at Longyearbyen, a Norwegian coal mine town of 1,250 people. Hunters chased it to a church, where it was gunned down on the steps. Quipped one villager: "For once we had a churchgoer, and he was shot."

The fur now hangs in the Longyearbyen restaurant.

"Whenever a polar bear is sighted near a settlement we send a warning over the radio," said Wendt. "Instead of escaping indoors, citizens rush to the scene to look at the animal."

Excitements are rare on the isolated islands, blackened by the polar night for four months a year while enjoying midnight sun for as many months in the summer.

"In the winter it is so dark you feel as if you're walking with a sack over your head all the time," Wendt said.

The days are darker than the nights in the winter, when the moon gives the arctic landscape a milky light, which may be used for midnight ski tours.

Some of the most modern graves on Spitsbergen lie in Longyearbyen, where there are buried 26 victims of a 1920 coal mine gas explosion. The graves have to be tended constantly so that no skeletons rise.

Spitsbergen became a virtual coal mining Klondyke at the turn of the century. Among the pioneers were American John Longyear of Marquette, Mich., who set up camp in 1901 in what was named Longyearbyen, or Longyear's town.

The islands were called Spitsbergen for their saw-teeth mountains by Dutch seafarer Willem Barents. He apparently did not know that the vikings, the Scandinavian globetrotters of a thousand years ago, had been to these shores hundreds of years earlier.

The archipelago is known in Icelandic annals as Svalbard, or Land of the Cold Coast.

While whalers and hunters were drawn here in former days, it is now a center for coal mines run by Norwegian and Soviet authorities.

A 1920 treaty signed by 41 nations ruled that Spitsbergen belongs to Norway, but it may be exploited by all signatories.
